ADDRESS.

THE present edition of SLATER'S DIRECTORY of SCOTLAND is the work of the old staff, but since the last issue a working arrangement has been made between the Shareholders of Slater's Directory, Ltd., and those of Kelly & Co., Ltd.

The present is the first on the new plan, and time has as yet been insufficient to make all changes which are expedient, yet it is hoped that purchasers will find a great improvement upon previous editions.

It is proposed under the like combinations to produce Directories not only of Scotland, but also of Ireland, Lancashire, North Wales, and other parts previously supplied by Messrs. Slater alone.

At the request of many Subscribers to the work, the Publishers have reverted to the original system of giving lists of the Gentry, Clergy, etc., Factors, and Farmers with each city, town, etc., instead of grouping these together in counties at the end of the Directory, as was done in the edition published in 1889.

To Advertisers it will be important to know that the Directories will in future be supplied by the Agents of both firms in the various districts they visit.

A CONCISE EPITOME

HISTORY OF SCOTLAND.

SCOTLAND is extremely irregular in its figure, and is separated on the s.e. by the Solway Firth and the Cheviot Hills from England. It is so broken up by promontories projecting far into the sea, and by firths, or arms of the sea, deeply indenting the land, that there are many points which are more than forty miles from salt water—a great portion of the interior lying within thirty miles of the sea. It is drawn on the mainland of Scotland, from the most southerly point of the Mull of Galloway, in lat. 54 deg. 38 min. N. to Dunnet Head, its mostly northerly point, in lat. 54 deg. 40 min. 30 sec. is about 280 miles in length. Its breadth is extremely various, in consequence of the deep indentations produced by the firths. Taking the extreme breadth, however, of the solid part of the mainland—viz., from Buchan Ness point, on the Aberdeenshire coast to Rowanman point, on the west coast of Ross-shire, the distance is about 146 miles. In the southern portion of Scotland, from St. Abb's Head, in Berwickshire, to the point of Knapp, in Argyleshire, the distance is about 100 miles; on the other hand, the breadth of the island between some of the firths is very small. Thus between Alloa, on the Firth of Forth, on the east coast, and Dumbarton, on the Firth of Clyde, on the west coast, the distance is only 32 miles; while from Loch Firth, on the west coast, to the Firth of Dornock, on the east coast, the breadth is but 24 miles. The superficial contents are computed to be 30,463 square miles, or 19,496,132 statute acres, of which only 4,811,513 are under crop, in the bare fallow, or in grass—that is to say, that about one fourth of the acreage of Scotland is under cultivation.

EARLY HISTORY.—The earliest mention made of this portion of Britain by any historian is by Tacitus, who flourished about a hundred years after Christ. The original population seems to have consisted of Cimbrians, from the Cimbric Chersonese, the modern Jutland. About two centuries before the Christian era the Cimbrians appear to have been driven to the south of Scotland by the Melodians, or Picts, a Gothic colony from Norway. Tacitus denominates the country Caledonia; the venerable Bede, who wrote about the year 700, names the country the Province of the Picts; and Alfred the Great, who translated his history into the Anglo-Saxon tongue, about the year 882, called the people Pichtis, and the country Pichtland. From the Picts then, or Pichtis, probably originates the population of the Lowlands, the Lowlanders having been, in all ages, a distinct people from those of the western Highlands. In the tenth and eleventh centuries, the name of Scotia, previously applied to Ireland, was given to modern Scotland, by which title it is designated by Adam of Bremen. About 563 years after Christ, the Dalriada of Bede, the Attacotti of the Roman writers, passed or respassed from Ireland into Argyleshire, and became the progenitors of the Scottish Highlanders, who speak the Irish or Celtic language, while the Lowlanders have always used the Scandinavian or Gothic. Fergus I., who is supposed to have reigned about 380 years before Christ, is said to be the founder of the Scottish monarchy. From him, till the year 1006, there are reckoned eighty-two kings; after which till Britain became subject to one monarch, the succession was as follows:—Malcolm II.; Duncan I.; Macbeth (or Macbeth); Kenneth III.; Donald VII.; Duncan II.; Edgar; Alexander I.; David I.; Malcolm IV.; William; Alexander II.; Alexander III.; John Balliol; Robert Bruce; Edward Balliol; David II.; Robert II.; Robert III.; James I.; James II.; James III.; James IV.; James V.; Mary; James VI. In 1603, on the death of Queen Elizabeth, James VI. of Scotland ascended the English throne, and constantly resided in England, the Lowlanders calling themselves kings of England and Scotland, and each country having a separate parliament till the year 1707, when during the reign of Queen Anne, both kingdoms were united under the general name of Great Britain.

SURFACE, CLIMATE, &c.—The most remarkable and, perhaps, the most distinctive feature of Scotland is her mountains. The principal are the Grampian hills, which run from east to west—from near Aberdeen to Cowal, in Argyleshire, almost the whole breadth of the island. About two centuries before the Christian era the Cimbrians appear to have been driven to the south of Scotland by the Melodians, or Picts, a Gothic colony from Norway. Tacitus denominates the country Caledonia; the venerable Bede, who wrote about the year 700, names the country the Province of the Picts; and Alfred the Great, who translated his history into the Anglo-Saxon tongue, about the year 882, called the people Pichtis, and the country Pichtland. From the Picts then, or Pichtis, probably originates the population of the Lowlands, the Lowlanders having been, in all ages, a distinct people from those of the western Highlands. In the tenth and eleventh centuries, the name of Scotia, previously applied to Ireland, was given to modern Scotland, by which title it is designated by Adam of Bremen. About 563 years after Christ, the Dalriada of Bede, the Attacotti of the Roman writers, passed or respassed from Ireland into Argyleshire, and became the progenitors of the Scottish Highlanders, who speak the Irish or Celtic language, while the Lowlanders have always used the Scandinavian or Gothic. Fergus I., who is supposed to have reigned about 380 years before Christ, is said to be the founder of the Scottish monarchy. From him, till the year 1006, there are reckoned eighty-two kings; after which till Britain became subject to one monarch, the succession was as follows:—Malcolm II.; Duncan I.; Macbeth (or Macbeth); Kenneth III.; Donald VII.; Duncan II.; Edgar; Alexander I.; David I.; Malcolm IV.; William; Alexander II.; Alexander III.; John Balliol; Robert Bruce; Edward Balliol; David II.; Robert II.; Robert III.; James I.; James II.; James III.; James IV.; James V.; Mary; James VI. In 1603, on the death of Queen Elizabeth, James VI. of Scotland ascended the English throne, and constantly resided in England, the Lowlanders calling themselves kings of England and Scotland, and each country having a separate parliament till the year 1707, when during the reign of Queen Anne, both kingdoms were united under the general name of Great Britain.

Another chain of mountains, called the Pentland hills, runs through Lothian, and joins those of Tweeddale. A third, called the Cheviot, or Teviot hills, on the borders of England, Scotland contains many detached mountains, some of them of stupendous height. Ben Nevis, in Inverness, the highest mountain in Scotland, is 4,370 feet above the level of the sea; Cairngorm, in Banff, Ben Nevis, in Perth, Braerlach, in Aberdeen, and some others are not much inferior in altitude. The general surface of the country is very irregular, being, on the whole, hilly or mountainous, more especially the northern district, which comprehends nearly two-thirds of Scotland, and forms what is called the Highlands, extending from Dumbarton nearly to the extremity of the island, about 200 miles. Nothing can be more awful to a stranger than the appearance of the Highlands, where dusky mountains rise above each other, and their summits in the clouds; while the tremendous rocks fill the mind with dismay, heightened in no small degree by the noise of the incessant torrents which pour down their steep sides. The gloomy vales and glens below—narrow, deep, and dark—add sublimity to the scene. The Lowlands, or that part of Scotland not included within the district of the Highlands, may be said to comprise the portion between the Firths of Tay and Clyde, and extends southward to the English frontier, and nearly the whole of Forfarshire. The proportion of cultivated land is very considerable, exhibiting, in many parts, verdant plains, watered by copious streams, and covered with innumerable cattle; in others, pleasing vicissitudes of gently rising hills and blending vales, waving with corn, and hedged, and interspersed with flowery meadows. Situated in the midst of the ocean, and in a high northern latitude, Scotland cannot boast a regular climate. It is various, too, in different places; the cold, however is not so intense as it is in similar latitudes on the continent. The thermometer does not sink so low during the winter as it does in the vicinity of London. Mountainous countries are most subject to rain; and Great Britain being a sort of inclined plane, gradually declining from west to east, it has been thought that on this account, the western coast is more wet. This excess of rain is, perhaps, rather owing to the prevalence of the west wind, which brings humidity with it in its course across the Atlantic; hence we find that more rain generally falls at Greenock than at Glasgow, and at Glasgow than at Edinburgh. As a counterbalance to this, vegetation on the eastern coast is checked during the spring by cold and piercing east winds. Notwithstanding all this, the air is in general pure and healthy.

Wild animals are the fox, the badger, the otter, the red deer, the wild roe, the hare and the rabbit; besides the wild cat, the marten, weasel, squirrel, mole, &c. There is also proof of others having existed in the country, which are now exterminated, namely, the walrus, or walox, the wolf and the beaver. Of the feathered tribe, pheasants are to be found in the woods, though scarce; also that beautiful bird called capercaillie, or cock of the wood. The ptarmigan, black game and grouse inhabit the healthy mountains in the valleys are partridges; in the fens, the snipe and plover, and in the plains, most of the English singing birds, except the eagle.

RIVERS, LAKES, AND RAILWAYS.—The country abounds with rivers and lakes, which are in general very pure and transparent, and are well stocked with fish. Most of the rivers have a short course from the mountains to the sea, and are consequently very rapid. The principal are the Tweed, Forth, Clyde, Tay and Spey, of which the Tay is the largest; they all abound with fine salmon and trout. The lakes of Scotland are grand and beautiful, and some of them of considerable extent; their banks are in general clothed with wood, and the scenery is highly picturesque and pleasing. Of these Loch Lomond is the chief, both in extent and beauty, diversified with a number of small romantic woody islands, and begirt with shores in some places decorated with wood, in others naked and majestic. Next to it may be ranked Loch Ness, whose waters never freeze; Loch Tay, Loch Awe, Loch Katrine, Loch Earn, Loch Leven and many others are interesting to the traveller's attention. It is worthy of remark that the name of loch or lake is given, on the western coast, to many inlets or arms of the sea. Throughout the whole extent of coast there are fine fisheries. RAILWAYS, &c.—This northern portion of the United Kingdom has successfully emulated the more southern, its facilities of intercommunication with various distant districts—River, Road, Canal and Rail—lending their respective aids to effect the accomplishment of this great object; and this last-named has of late years taken a most prominent and valuable part in this department of the "country's good," by opening up a rapid means of intercourse with almost every part of the country. It would be superfluous to give here a list of the railways in operation and progress, every place visited here being specially noticed throughout the work.

COMMERCE, MANUFACTURES, MINERALS, &c.—Scotland produces many valuable articles of commerce; beside the trade in corn, the rearing of black cattle and sheep for the English market is very considerable. Great attention is paid to the breed of black cattle; while the horses and sheep originally small now rival those of England. Its woods of oak and fir are considered with proper attention, and made serviceable to the navy. The mines of coal, lead and iron have long been sources of wealth, as have freestone, limestone and slate, which are found in various places, and in great abundance. The manufacture of paraffin and other oils has been introduced into several parts, and bids fair to become one of the staple products of the country. Some attention is also paid to its marbles, which prove little, if at all, inferior in colour or polish to those of Italy. Scotland cannot, at present, exhibit many of the precious metals, though considerable quantities both of gold and silver have at different periods been obtained from her bowels, and it is not improbable that the time may arrive when these treasures will again be laid open. Copper has been discovered in many places, though at present it is nowhere wrought to any considerable extent; but a very rich mine of antimony has been worked, richer, it is believed, than any at present known. Most of the gems and precious stones, with the exception of the diamond, have also been found in Scotland. It would be impossible in the limited space at our disposal to enumerate all the manufactures that are carried on in the country, but those that are established are in a most prosperous condition. In printed cotton and figured goods, in shawls, &c., it equals those of England; shawls especially for which, and the manufacture of sewing cotton, Paisley has become highly celebrated; and the glass and stoneware are scarcely surpassed anywhere. In linens, particularly those for the table, Dunfermline has long been famous, whilst for the coarser descriptions Dundee and its neighbourhood are justly celebrated. Manufactures of broad cloth, silks, and gauzes are also upon a respectable footing. Extensive shipbuilding yards exist on the Clyde, where vessels from the smallest size to the giant man-of-war are constructed. Ironfounding, machine making, and engineering are likewise branches of much importance, as also is the manufacture of fire-brick, sanitary tubes, tiles, &c. The herring and other sea fisheries are a source of great revenue to the country, a large number of men and boys being employed in this industry. Immense quantities of herring are annually exported, both in a fresh and cured state. The intercourse with England daily becomes more frequent (thanks to the rail), to the mutual advantage of both countries. This has the effect of rendering the manners, dress, and language of both alike, and extinguishing all national prejudice.

The Scots are uniformly sober and frugal; instead of lavishing their gains they are wisely laid by or economically expended to enable them to live in comfort, and make a respectable appearance. Intelligence is more common than in most countries, owing to the number of excellent schools, and the cheapness with which education is acquired; and there are few branches of literature in which the Scotch have failed in attaining a degree of excellence, although they cannot boast of many authors at an early period. Before the abolition of episcopacy, the ancient church establishment was composed of two archbishoprics and twelve bishoprics. The national religion is now Presbyterian, founded on an equality among its pastors. A very influential and numerous body, denominated "The Free Church of Scotland," was constituted in 1843, and the members have been increasing in number from that time. The clergy of Scotland are well educated, and singularly exemplary in their morals. Roman Catholics, of whom the number is not very considerable, are tolerated, as well as Episcopalian, and various dissenters from the Established Church. There are four Universities—that of St. Andrew, founded in 1412; that of founded in 1439; that of Aberdeen, founded in 1500; and that of Edinburgh, founded by James VI. in 1582. Since the union of the two kingdoms, which event took place in 1707, the political government has been the same with that of England; the civil code, however, and the manner of administering justice are different. Of this, and of the principal events which have occurred in Scotland, more particular notice will be taken in the historical description of Edinburgh. Scotland, though neither so rich nor so populous as the southern division of the island, has long borne a name for martial exploits; and of late has risen to as great eminence in literature and the arts.

DIVISIONS, REPRESENTATIVE SYSTEM, POPULATION, &c.—The mainland of North Britain is naturally divided into three portions. The extremity is parted from the centre by the Moray Firth, Loch Lochy, Loch Ness, and Loch Linnhe, connected with each other by the Caledonian Canal. The midland portion is again parted from the southern by the Firths of Forth and Clyde, the River Forth, Ben Lomond, and its cognominal lake. These are again unequally subdivided into thirty-two counties, which, in the following table, comprising the sheriffdoms, stewartries, and the bailiwick, and the chief towns, are arranged according to their situations.

The Parliamentary representation of Scotland, as decided by the Redistribution of Seats Act, 1885, is as follows:—Aberdeenshire and Ayrshire return two members, Lanarkshire six, and the other counties one each, except Clackmannan and Kinross, Peebles and Selkirk and those of Elgin and Nairn, which jointly send one, so that the thirty-two counties are represented by thirty-nine members. Edinburgh returns four members, Glasgow seven, Dundee and Aberdeen two each, and Greenock, Paisley and Perth one each. The Universities of Edinburgh and St. Andrews return one jointly, as do also those of Glasgow and Aberdeen. The following combined or contributory burghs also send one jointly; making the whole number of representatives seventy-two.

PARLIAMENTARY DISTRICTS OF BURGHS.

POPULATION of the Kingdom, as exhibited by the Government returns at the following periods:—In the year 1801, the number of inhabitants was 1,608,420; in 1811, 1,805,864; in 1821, 2,091,621; in 1831, 2,364,386; in 1841, 2,620,184; in 1851, 2,888,742; in 1861 3,062,294; in 1871, 3,360,013; in 1881, 3,735,573; and in 1891, 4,033,103. The amount of real property assessed to income tax in 1891 was £19,682,692

ABERDEENSHIRE.

THIS important and extensive county is situated in the north-east part of Scotland, and is bounded on the north and east by the North Sea; on the south by the counties of Kincardine, Forfar, and Perth; and on the West by Inverness-shire and Banffshire. In form it approaches to that of an oval, the length of which, from north-east to south-west, is about eighty-five miles, and its extreme breadth about forty. It is estimated to comprise 1,970 square miles, or 1,260,625 acres. In point of size, Aberdeen ranks as the sixth county, and in population as the fourth. There is a characteristic difference to be observed in the inhabitants of Aberdeenshire from those of any other county in Scotland. They are in general regarded as an active, vigorous and enterprising race; and when they emigrate they seldom fail to succeed. The dialect of the inhabitants, too, is peculiar from those of the south of Scotland; and to a stranger's ear appears to be attended with a slow pronunciation and broad accent. On the sea coasts they have a distinct difference of physiognomical appearance from other inhabitants of this country and attest by this, as well as by their speech, that they are descended from a race which originally came from the northern regions of Europe, and fixed themselves in this part of Scotland.

SOIL, SURFACE, CLIMATE, &c.—Towards the sea the land is fertile and comparatively level; but a great proportion of the county lies amidst the wilderness of the central Highlands. More than two-fifths of the cultivated land is under grass, another two-fifths being devoted to oats, barley, bere, rye and wheat, whilst less than one-fifth is under potatoes and turnips, the latter being the most important crop, succeeding better in this county than in any other in Scotland. The climate is cold, yet it is less liable to extreme low temperature than other districts lying further south and inland. The county is popularly divided into five districts, namely:—Mar, the southernmost, comprehends all north of the river Dee, from the sea to the east end of the hill of Benachie; Garioch lies north of the Don, bounded by a ridge of hills beginning near the royal burgh of Kintore; Strathbogie lies to the north-west of Garioch and south-east of the upper part of Mar; Formartine, east of Garioch, and bounded on the north by the river Don, and on the north and east by the Ythan and the North Sea; and Buchan, extending from the Ythan to the Deveron. These five districts are sub-divided into lesser districts or divisions, whose names are generally descriptive of their appearance and situation. The district of Mar, on the confines of the shires of Banff, Inverness, Perth, and Angus, may be considered as the centre of Scotland, being at the greatest distance from the sea in every direction. The appearance of the upper part of the district is wild, rugged and mountainous. Towards the east and north-east the county becomes more level, but is in many places moorish and barren; but the woods, mostly fir, are extensive, producing fine timber. The rivers Don and Dee have both their sources in this quarter. Balmoral, the Highland residence of Her Majesty the Queen, and Abergeldie, the seat of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, are in this district. From the top of Craigendarroch there is, perhaps, one of the most grand and picturesque views in Scotland. At the termination of a deep glen in Strathdee is the pass of Ballater, which forms the eastern entrance into the Grampian mountains. The district of Buchan is not so hilly, lying mostly on the east and north coast, but being almost destitute of wood its appearance is bleak and naked; from the quantities, however, of large timber found in many mosses, no doubt can exist of its having once been well wooded. Anciently this extensive domain was the property of the Earls of Buchan, on whose attander, in 1820, King Robert Bruce divided the land among his adherents. Subsequently the title was revived in the Erskine family, but without a restoration of the lands, and the present Earl has no property in this quarter. The districts of Strathbogie, Garioch, and Formartine are generally well cultivated. On the coast, to the south of Peterhead, is a remarkable natural feature, called the Bullers of Buchan. They represent a large oval cavity, in depth about one hundred feet, formed by the steep rocks. A natural arch opens into the sea at the eastern end, into which boats are sometimes drawn and dashed by pieces. The mountains of greatest altitude and importance in Aberdeenshire are—Ben Macdhui, 4,296 feet; Braeriach, 4,248; Cairntoul, 4,241; Ben-a-Bourd, 3,924; Ben Avon, 3,843; Lochnagar, 3,788; Morven, 2,954; Buck of Cabrach, 2,368; Tap o' Noth, 1,852; and Benachie, 1,696.

COMMERCE, MANUFACTURES, MINERALS, &c.—The making of linen and sail-cloth has been successfully introduced in several parts, the other branches being the manufacture of flax, cotton and woollens, paper and envelope making, tanning, distilling, and the curing of fish and provisions. Shipbuilding, both wood and iron, is carried on at Aberdeen, Peterhead, and Fraserburgh. The sea coast abounds in fish of great variety and richness, and the river and sea fishing, together, form a great source of wealth to the inhabitants. The herring fishery is prosecuted on a very extensive scale at Peterhead and Fraserburgh, the harbours of these places during the fishing season being crowded with boats, which has the effect of considerably augmenting the population; of recent years the herring fishery has also been largely pursued at Aberdeen. Peterhead is also engaged in whale and seal fishing, the former being carried on in summer off the north-east of Greenland and in Davis Straits. Granite—green, blue, and red—is a valuable and extensive production of this county, and presents an article of considerable traffic, many thousand tons being conveyed to London, and other distant parts, for paving and building purposes, and for monuments, tombs, statues, &c.; it is chiefly found in the neighbourhoods of Aberdeen, Peterhead, New Pittsburg, and Mouynusk. Slate is also quarried from the Fouldland Hills, Insh. Other minerals are found in different parts of Aberdeenshire, and are eminently worthy of notice. In the parish of Old Machar was discovered a valuable mine of manganese; Leslie produces amianthus, made by the peasants into snuff boxes and ornaments; plumbago has been found on the banks of the Deveron; and near Peterhead, onyx pebbles are to be met with. The largest rock crystal ever found in Scotland was discovered upon the estate of Invercauld in this county; its size was nearly that of a child's body at the age of four years. On the same estate have also been obtained amethysts and aqua-marines, equal in colour and hardness to those so eagerly sought after in the East. Topazes of great value, provincially called Cairngorm stones, are also to be met with in Aberdeenshire. Talc, mica, asbestos, and amianthus, commonly called mountain cork, and mountain leather, are found in several of the hills. At Craig, in the district of Strathbogie, there is a fine flaxen asbestos, both green and white. The county produces plenty of game, black and red cattle, deer, sheep, horses, &c. A very great proportion of the landholders reside permanently or occasionally on their estates, and contentment by their presence many valuable improvements. The rearing of the plantations and fences, the introduction of superior breeds of cattle, and better modes of agriculture, have for some time engaged their attention, to the manifest advantage of the district.

RIVERS AND SPRINGS AND RAILWAYS.—The principal rivers of Aberdeenshire are the Dee, the Don, the Ythan, the Ugie, and the Deveron. These rivers are of great value, from the immense quantity and fineness of the salmon they produce; but are too rapid to admit of navigation to any great extent. The river Ythan deserves particular mention on account of the pearl fishery, formerly carried on in it with great success. On the Don are seen princely ruins of Kildrumny Castle, an ancient seat of the Earls of Mar. The Dee runs through the vale of Strathdee, surrounded by awful fronts of lofty mountains. At the top of the vale of Braemar, a short way above Mar Lodge, is the noted waterfall called the Linn of Dee. In the valley of Glenmuick there is likewise another picturesque cascade, and a little below, on the southern banks of the Dee, most romantically situated, are Pananich Wells, much frequented in summer. On the sea shore are several remarkable caves, curious pectorations in the rocks, and echoes which reverberate sounds with wonderful distinctness. The main line of railway intersecting Aberdeenshire is the Great North of Scotland and its numerous branches.

DIVISIONS, REPRESENTATION, &c.—This county contains eighty-five parishes and three royal burghs—Aberdeen, Kintore, and Inverurie. The contributory boroughs (or those which, in conjunction with others, are represented in Parliament) belonging to this county are Inverurie, Kintore, and Peterhead. The city of Aberdeen returns two members—William A. Hunter, Esq., LL.D., barrister, London, representing the Northern Division, and Jas. Bryce, Esq., Professor of Civil Law at Oxford, the Southern Division. The county also sends two members, the gentleman representing the Eastern Division being Peter Eslemont, Esq., Aberdeen; and Dr. Robert Farquharson, of Fijozean, sitting for the Western Division. The Lord Lieutenant is the Earl of Aberdeen. The county of Aberdeen in 1881 contained a population of, 267,990, and in 1891, 281,331, showing an increase in the ten years of 13,341. The parliamentary constituency of the Eastern Division of the county in 1891-2, was 11,803, that of the Western Division being 10,027. The valuation of the county (exclusive of railways) was, in 1891-2, £814,887, and the valuation of railways, &c., £57,972.

ABERDEEN,

WITH THE PARISHES OF OLD MACHAR AND NIGG, AND THE VILLAGES OF WOODSIDE AND CULTS.

ABERDEEN, the capital of the county to which it gives name, is the chief seaport in the north of Scotland, and the fourth Scottish town in population, industry, and wealth. It is 117 miles N.E. from Edinburgh, and 542 from London; and by means of its rail communication it possesses easy access to any part of the United Kingdom. Aberdeen is of great antiquity, and is supposed to have been known to the Romans by the name of Devanha. It is probably among the earliest of the burghs in Scotland found entitled to any royal marks of distinction; and from various circumstances occurring in history, it is reasonable to presume that at a very early period it was a place of some commerce. As far back as 1153, it seems to have been known as such to the Normans; and in Macpherson's treatise on commerce it is observed that in the year 1179, Estyn, one of the joint kings of that country, landed and pillaged the town in the course of a piratical cruise along the British coast. In early times Aberdeen was frequently visited by royalty; and it appears that King William, surnamed the Lion, had an edifice for his occasional residence here, which was situate at the lower side of the town, near the east end of what is called the Green, and was dignified by the title of Palace. This edifice was afterwards bestowed on the monks of the Holy Trinity, who were about that time introduced into Scotland. The first charter that was obtained by Aberdeen is supposed to have originated about the year 1179, and was granted by King William. It confirmed to the burgesses the power of enjoying their trade of merchandise as freely, quietly, fully, and honourably as their ancestors did in the time of David, his grandfather; this charter was dated at Perth, and is still preserved in the city archives. King William afterwards granted two other charters; both of these, which were dated at Aberdeen, are still in a good state of preservation, and have the great seal of Scotland, in green wax, appended to each. The city received many subsequent royal charters. The great charter was granted by Charles I. and is dated at Oatlands, 1688; all previous charters are by it confirmed. This charter was subsequently ratified by Parliament. The burgh records are the oldest of any Scottish burgh; they begin in 1398, and are complete to the present time, with only a short break from 1413 to 1438. The city was burned by Edward III. in 1386, but it was soon rebuilt and extended, and called New Aberdeen. In 1497 a blockhouse was built at the harbour mouth, as a protection against the English. During the religious struggles in the seventeenth century between the Royalists and Covenanters, the city was plundered by both parties. In 1715 Earl Marischal proclaimed the Pretender at Aberdeen, and in 1745 the Duke of Cumberland resided a short time in the city. Her present Majesty Queen Victoria has visited Aberdeen on more than one occasion, and owing to her residence at Balmoral, in the Deeside Highlands (50 miles distant), many of the inhabitants have benefited by her patronage.

Aberdeen is pleasantly situated upon an eminence rising gradually from the sea, and is an elegant and well-built town, being called "The Granite City," on account of its native light-grey granite being the material chiefly employed in building. The new streets are spacious and uniform, and there are many fine public buildings. A noble street, named Union street, running to the west, is particularly handsome. About the middle of this fine street a magnificent granite bridge, designed by Telford, of one arch, spanning one hundred and fifty feet, is thrown across a ravine through which runs a brook called the Denburn. The Denburn is now arched over, and the Great North of Scotland railway runs over it for a short distance. A very important city improvement has been effected this year (1892) in Union terrace by the construction of an arched promenade, with magnificent granite balustrade, facing the Terrace gardens. The Joint Railway Station (for the Great North of Scotland, Caledonian, and Deeside railways) is a large and prominent building in Guild street, with a segmental arched iron and glass roof. The exterior has a fine appearance, and the whole is well and substantially built. It was designed by Mr. Smith, the city architect. The modern part of the town has been all built within the last sixty years, and is of very considerable extent. Besides Union street, there are three other fine streets, namely, King street, Market street, and George street, and for some time past the city has been extending in every direction, particularly to the west and north-west, and many suburban villas of recent erection are noticeable for their picturesque and effective treatment of the native granite. In Castle street stands a highly-finished statue of George, the fifth and last Duke of Gordon, erected by the gentlemen of the county. It is executed in granite, and represents his grace in a martial cloak, with head uncovered, one foot placed upon a cannon, and both hands resting on a sword. The pedestal is a square slab of granite, and the height of the whole is about twenty feet. At the corner of Union terrace, near Union Street bridge, is a bronze statue of the late Prince Consort, by Marochetti, placed on a pedestal of polished Peterhead granite. Further along Union terrace, and in an angle formed by its junction with the Rosemount viaduct, stands a colossal statue of Wallace, in bronze, by W. G. Stevenson, A.R.S.A. It is sixteen feet in height (the largest in Scotland), and was erected by means of a bequest (£3,000) left by Mr. John Steell, of Edinburgh. It was unveiled on the 29th of June, 1888, by the Marquis of Lorne, who on the occasion was presented with the freedom of the city. A bronze statue of General Gordon ("The Hero of Khartoum"), executed by the late T. Stuart Burnett, A.R.S.A., and cast in Sir John Steell's foundry, Edinburgh, stands in the square in Schoolhill, in front of Robert Gordon's College. The monument, which was subscribed for principally by members of the clan Gordon, stands nine feet six inches in height, and is placed on a granite pedestal nine feet high. It was unveiled by the Marquis of Huntly, as head of the clan, on the 16th June, 1888. A fine statue of the Queen in white marble, on a polished Peterhead granite pedestal, used to stand in Union street, immediately opposite Market street, but, getting impaired by the weather, was removed to the corridor of the Town House. It is an excellent likeness, and was executed by the late Alexander Brodie, of Aberdeen. In the Town House is a marble statue of Provost James Blaikie, by Sir John Steell; also a bust of John Phillip, the painter (an Aberdonian), by his friend and fellow-townsmen, the late William Brodie, R.S.A. A very fine bronze statue of Robert Burns, subscribed for publicly, and executed by H. Bain-smith, sculptor, London, will shortly be erected in a prominent position in Union terrace, not far distant from the Wallace statue.

The new Municipal and County Buildings and Court House are situated in Castle street and Union street, and form a most imposing and magnificent structure. They comprise all the offices required for municipal purposes, also a noble hall and Court House. The entrance to the municipal portion is by the door in the base of the tower facing Union buildings. A broad circular stone staircase of easy ascent leads to the Council Chamber, the rooms set apart for the officials, and other apartments. On reaching the first landing, a lobby to the left leads to the Council Chamber, possessing a fine oak roof with the armorial bearings of eminent Aberdonians, &c.; on the walls are hung several valuable paintings, including one of Prince Albert, by John Phillip, portraits of ex-Provosts, by Pickersgill, R.A. and George Reid, R.S.A., and other works of art. The Committee room is entered from the same lobby, and is a square apartment, larger in proportion to its use than the Council Chamber. Above the mantel piece is a mirror in a panel of carved oak, with the arms of the town on the top, which stood in the old Council Chamber. The Provost's room is a commodious apartment, looking into Broad street. The Town Clerk's room has much the appearance of an advocate's office, as has also that of his assistants, which contain a number of old trophies of the city, not altogether devoid of interest. In the upper floor are the apartments of the Town House keeper, and a number of rooms for general purposes. There are to be seen in the building an ancient coat of mail, said to have been worn by Robert Davidson, Provost of the city, at the battle of Harlaw; also the axe of the machine known as "The Maiden," which was used towards the close of the sixteenth century for the decapitation of criminals. The Court House is situated in the centre of the north-east portion of the building, and is thus removed from the noise of street traffic. The public entrance is by the doorway in the centre of the building in Castle street. The entrance hall is very lofty, and has a groined freestone roof, and elaborately carved gorbial terminations. The staircase leads by an easy flight to the main corridor, or Court Hall, and then divides into two side flights which lead up to the joint Town and County Hall, which is situated in the centre of the building facing Castle street. This hall is of large size, and is frequently used for fashionable assemblies, art exhibitions, and the like. On the walls are hung several portraits, among which may be mentioned those of Queen Victoria, Queen Anne, the Premier Earl of Aberdeen, and George, last Duke of Gordon. At its east end is the ordinary County Hall (for the meeting of Commissioners of Supply, &c.), almost identical in size and position with the Council Chamber, and decorated in a novel style from a design by Mr. Clyne, a local architect. The ceiling of the staircase, which measures about 35 feet square, is panelled with pitch pine. Light is admitted by three lofty windows on each side. The Court-room is situated on the east side of the main corridor, which is connected with the first landing. The room is 51 feet in length by 39 feet in breadth, and 33 feet in height. At the west end is a small gallery, access to which is had by two narrow staircases entering from the corridor. The accommodation provided for the public seats about 800 individuals. The whole room has been finished in a most artistic manner and presents a pleasing appearance to the eye. Access may be had by seven different entrances. On the left of the corridor on entering is a staircase which leads up to a suite of rooms set apart for the procurators fiscal and their clerks, a small Court-room for the trial of summary cases, hearing proofs, examining bankrupts, &c. At the end of the corridor is a passage leading to the Advocates' buildings. A passage to the right leads to the corridor of the eastward entrance to the building, immediately under the old tolbooth tower built during the first quarter of the 17th century. The growth of business in the Municipal Department has rendered the accommodation insufficient, and the Town Council have purchased the old prison in Lodge walk, immediately adjoining the present buildings, on the site of which they propose to erect new Police offices (including Court and Barrack accommodation), at an estimated cost of £10,000.

The latest additions to the architecture of Union street are the large new block of buildings for the Free Press offices and the new branch office for the Commercial Bank. The Free Press Building is situated on the north side of the street near the Municipal Buildings, the front looking south, and is isolated on the east and west sides from the adjoining buildings in the street; it extends backwards to the Nether Kirkgate, being, in fact, exposed all round. The handsome front is designed after the classical Renaissance style, and the accessories are richly emphasised in moulded and carved work of the most advanced artificers' craftsmanship, and executed in the beautiful, sparkling, and delicately tinted grey granite of the Aberdeen quarries. The principal doorway, with its elaborately worked fashioned trusses supporting the rich massive door cap and balustrade above; the window enrichments and caps; and the boldly-cut main cornice with triglyphs and ornamental plaques, &c. form the chief features of interest and finish. The architects were Messrs. Ellis & Wilson, of Aberdeen. The new bank, on the same side of Union street, and near the house forming the south-west corner of St. Nicholas street, is chiefly noticeable for its novelty in design, being of a late domestic type of pointed architecture, showing mullioned windows and h-ads filled in with flowing tracery, the crowning feature consisting of a steeply pointed stepped gable and pinnacles raised above the masonry of the rest of the houses near by. The masonry of the front is built of narrow flat courses of granite, the dressings being in light granite, and the filling in of the warm pink tinted Coreuic granite; the front only is exposed. The architect was Mr. Sydney Mitchell, of Edinburgh.

The Post Office is at the foot of Market street, and was erected in 1876 to take the place of the old one erected in 1845, which, since the transfer of the telegraphs, had been found far too limited for the despatch of the business, now rapidly expanding year by year. It is a handsome building of white Kemnay granite, and consists of a basement, partly underground, and two storeys above the street level. The two principal elevations, facing Market street and Trinity quay, are designed in the Renaissance style. The chief elevation, fronting Market street, is rounded off at the two extreme corners, which contain doorways with carved consoles and moulded cornices; and the centre division, containing the chief entrance, projects slightly in advance of the remaining portion. The architect for the building was Mr. R. Matheson, and the contractors Messrs. Coutts & Sons, of Aberdeen.

The Music Hall Buildings, in the west of Union street, are the property of the Aberdeen Music Hall Company, Limited. This elegant edifice (which formerly constituted the County Buildings) is decorated with a portico of six columns of the Ionic order, thirty feet in height. The principal entrance, under the portico, leads into an outer vestibule, having a flight of six steps conducting to the inner vestibule, which is sixty feet in length and twenty feet in breadth, and is divided into three compartments by fluted Ionic columns, with ornamented capitals and corresponding pilasters. The centre part is thirty-two feet high, and the ceiling is a dome, finished with coffering. In the middle of the building, and opening into the ball-room, through a screen of columns, is a spacious corridor or promenade, seventy feet in length, finished with pilasters, and an arched and paneled ceiling. It communicates on the one side with the ball room, and on the other with what used to be the supper or refreshment room, and the card saloon, but are now known as the Square Room and Round Room, and are generally used for meetings, lectures, and the like. Beyond all these rooms is a spacious Music Hall, built by the Company, and opened 14th September, 1859 by the late Prince Consort, who then delivered in it his thoughtful address as president of the British Association. The Hall is furnished with an admirable organ, is well decorated, and is capable of seating about 3,000 people.

The Corn Exchange, in Hadden street, erected in 1854, is the property of a joint-stock company; the cost of erection was about £1,000. Being chiefly used as a public news room, it is furnished with the leading newspapers and magazines of the kingdom, and supplied with telegraphic intelligence, and altogether is one of the best equipped rooms of the kind in the country, the charge of admission being only a penny. The Masonic Hall is in Exchange street; the foundation stone was laid on the 27th of September, 1871. The building contains on the ground floor three shops, the remainder being used exclusively by the Masonic Lodges in Aberdeen (of which there are ten), and embraces a hall 50 feet by 32 feet, and 20 feet high with a gallery at one end. The hall has three lofty windows to Stirling street, filled with stained glass. The building was designed by Mr. James Mathews; the cost was £2,500, which was defrayed by shares of £1 each. The Market Cross, near the eastern extremity of Castle street, cannot be too highly admired, whether as an architectural object or as an antiquarian curiosity. It is of hexagonal form, with a pillar rising from the centre. In a cornice around the upper part of the structure are twelve compartments for figures, cut in relief; ten of these contain the portraits of Scotch monarchs, the last of the series being James VII., in whose time (1686) the edifice was completed. This fine erection stood originally at the west end of the square in the centre of a raised pavement called the Plainstones. This pavement was removed, however, in 1842, and the Cross was then placed in its present position. The Market House, known as the New Market, stands in Market street, and is one of the largest and most beautiful buildings of its kind in the kingdom; it was erected by a joint-stock company, and opened in 1843. It was destroyed by fire in 1882, but has since been re-erected on the old lines, with some alterations and improvements. It contains two floors and a continuous gallery all round the building. In the west end of the market is a beautiful fountain of polished Peterhead granite. The theatre is situated in Guild street, adjoining the Imperial Hotel. It is 74 feet 8 inches in length, with a mean depth of 90 feet, and the height of the front is 50 feet from the street. The entrance doors for the public are five in number, all to the front. Commodious refreshment, retiring, and cloak rooms are provided for visitors. The theatre is seated for 1,670 persons. The stage and all its appliances are of the most approved modern description. St. Katharine's Hall, Shiprow, has accommodation for seating 800 persons, and contains various other rooms which are neatly and substantially furnished; added to these is a refreshment bar and dining rooms with billiards and chess, lavatory, &c. The Barracks, on the Castle hill, are fitted up for the convenience of six hundred men, although, according to the usual mode of military accommodation, they are capable of containing double this number; there is an excellent hospital attached to them on an adjoining eminence. The town is admirably paved with granite, well lighted with gas, and plentifully supplied with excellent water, taken from the Dee at Cairnron, about 21 miles above the city. Owing to the extension of the city the necessity is being felt for largely increasing both the gas and water supplies, and two large schemes are at present being considered by the Corporation. It is proposed to increase the retort power and storage at the Gas Works at a cost of about £80,000 or £90,000. The scheme for increasing filtering and storage accommodation of the Water Works is estimated to cost about £70,000. The arrangements for cleansing the streets and watching the city are fully efficient.

The port of Aberdeen is admirably adapted for commercial intercourse with the northern parts of Europe, and it also participates in a good share of the trade with America. Early in the seventeenth century, a number of ships, of small tonnage, belonged to the port, and a considerable import and export trade was carried on with various parts of the continent, as well as coast trading. The shipping appears to have considerably decayed during the civil wars and visitations of the plague, and no revival took place for many years. In 1656 there were only nine vessels, of the aggregate amount of 440 tons. In 1692 all the shipping was two galleots of thirty tons each. Soon after this time, however, when the affairs of the country got into a more settled state, shipping along with general trade, made a considerable progress. In 1788 the number of ships registered was 169, and the aggregate tonnage, 11,820; in 1818, the ships registered were 237; tonnage, 90,471; in 1872, 236 vessels; tonnage, 101,188. The number of vessels, including steamers, registered in the port of Aberdeen in 1881 was 200; tonnage, 100,471. The total number of vessels entered and cleared for British ports in the year 1881 was 3,020; tonnage 705,660. Of these 1,881 were steamers, with a tonnage of 511,678; 1,199 sailing vessels, with a tonnage of 193,982. From foreign ports there entered 207 vessels; tonnage, 77,325. Of these 152 were foreign vessels, with a tonnage of 38,996; 114 were British vessels, with a tonnage of 38,329. Thirty of the total foreign entries were steamers, with a tonnage of 12,016; 237 were sailing vessels, with a tonnage of 65,309. There sailed for foreign ports during the year 84 vessels; tonnage, 12,291. The vessels on the Aberdeen register in 1884 numbered 193, with a tonnage of 105,321. The number of vessels, including steamers, registered at the port in 1887 was 182; tonnage, 110,102. The total harbour revenue, for the year ending 30th September, 1881, was £59,320; the portion derived from the shipping and goods, £41,195; while the local salmon fishings (now the property of the harbour commissioners) yielded £5,706. For the year ending 30th September, 1884, the harbour revenue amounted to £59,140, the salmon fishings yielding £5,831. The customs revenue for 1887 amounted to £188,008 7s. 11d. The harbour revenue for the year ending 30th September, 1891, was £76,580, of which £4,964 was derived from salmon fishings. The vessels from foreign ports aggregated 160,763 tons; the tonnage of vessels arriving coastwise was 613,898; the tonnage of wind-bound vessels was 11,976 tons. The customs receipts for the year 1891 amounted to £200,208, compared with £189,572 in the previous year. Since the year 1810, when the principal improvement in the harbour commenced, there have been expended upon it vast sums. A pier was constructed to the north of the harbour entrance (formed by the river Dee joining the sea), and now extends 2,500 feet seaward. A wet dock of 29 acres, and with 6,000 feet of quays, was completed in 1848, and called Victoria Dock, in honour of Her Majesty's visit to the city in that year. The diversion of the river and the new south breakwater were later undertakings. The first turf cut in the diversion of the river was by Lord Provost Leslie, on the 22nd of December, 1869. The new course is about a mile in length, and forms a large arc of a circle, from the suspension bridge to about opposite Marischal street, and from that point to Torry, where it joins the harbour entrance. The bottom of the new channel is 170 feet deep. The north bank has a gradient of 1 in 3, and the south bank 1 in 10. The new breakwater, the entire length of which is 1,050 feet, is carried out to a depth of water of 50 feet at high tide. Two new quays have since been constructed, named respectively after two provosts—Mr. George Jamieson and Mr. James Mathews; and a new and spacious graving dock was opened in June, 1885. It is situated in what was the old bed of the river Dee, now known as the Albert basin. The length of the floor is 500 feet; the total length of the dock being 524 feet. It is 48 feet wide at the floor, the width gradually widening till it reaches 74 feet at the cope; the depth on the sill is 20 feet. The graving dock is furnished with hydraulic machinery of the latest and most approved type; its total cost was about £50,000. Within the past two or three years Aberdeen has become a great centre for trawling. At present close on 100 steam vessels prosecute the industry from the port, and there is every appearance of the number increasing. The trawling vessels discharge their cargoes in the Albert basin, where extensive quay space has been provided, and a commodious and excellently appointed fish market erected, at a cost of several thousand pounds. Another new feature in the trade of the port is the importation of foreign cattle, for which the Harbour Commissioners have provided adequate lairage accommodation and sale ring. A handsome harbour office, surmounted by a clock tower, for the accommodation of harbour officials, engineers, &c., was erected about the same time on Regent quay, from a design by Messrs. Mathews and Mackenzie, architects, Aberdeen. The fame of the "clipper bow" so justly due to the shipbuilders here, especially to the late Mr. William Hall, who successfully established his claim to the invention, has spread the fame of Aberdeen shipbuilding to all quarters of the world. In 1881 there were built 10 vessels, aggregate tonnage, 9,887—two sailing vessels, and eight steamers; and at the commencement of 1882 nine vessels were on hand—three sailing vessels and six steamers with a total tonnage of 11,200. In 1883 there were launched 16 vessels, with a total tonnage of 11,628; while there were seven vessels on hand, with a gross tonnage of 8,090. In 1891 there were launched 12 vessels with a gross tonnage of 6,724, as against 15 vessels, with a gross tonnage of 9,228 in the previous year. About the usual number of vessels was on hand. The salmon fishings on the Dee and Don are, as they have for a long time been, an important branch of industry.

Aberdeen has been the seat of manufactures from a very early period. We find Provost Alexander Jaffray, with his coadjutors, establishing a woollen manufactory in 1636, in the correction wynd, under a patent of Charles I. for the manufacture of "broad cloth, kerseys, serges and other coarse cloths." The manufacture of these and of stockings had been cultivated so successfully and extensively for some time, that Sir Patrick Drummond, conservator of Holland, remarked that "Scotland was more obliged to the town of Aberdeen for returns of money on its export trade than all other towns in Scotland." Messrs. Alexander Hadden & Sons, have three establishments—in the Green at Garlogie Mills, and at Gordon's Mills. Their chief products are carpets, tweeds, hosiery, worsted, and woollen yarns. In addition to the material manufactured on their premises, they give employment to a great number of women over the country by giving out worsted to be knitted into hose. Messrs. Crombie, of Grandholm Mills are also large manufacturers. The manufacture of winceys seems to have originated with the late firm of Messrs. John Barker & Sons, of Gordon's Mills. It is now successfully carried on by many firms in Aberdeen. The demand still continues to expand, the quality of the Aberdeen fabrics being found very superior. Jute spinning is also carried on by a limited liability company. The only cotton spinning establishment now in Aberdeen is that of Banner Mill, belonging to Messrs. Robinson, Crum & Co. Limited. The manufacture of combs was introduced about the year 1880, by Messrs. Stewart and Rowell, and has been conducted on a very extensive scale since that period, first by the original firm, and latterly by Messrs. S. R. Stewart and Co. It is also carried on by the Rosemount Company, Limited; Messrs. John Moir & Son, Limited; Marshall & Co. Spring garden; J. T. Morton, Rosemount; C. Gordon & Son, Green; and W. Bruce, Prince Regent street, among other firms, are engaged in the manufacture of preserved provisions. All manner of fish, flesh, soups, vegetables, fruits, &c., are preserved in the cases of all sizes, and every variety of preparation. Messrs. Mitchell & Muir, Limited, biscuit manufacturers to the Queen, have an extensive manufactory here. The extensive paper works at Stoneywood, carried on by Messrs. Alex. Pirie & Sons, Limited, were established nearly one hundred years ago, and they are the largest manufacturers in Scotland. Messrs. C. Davidson & Son, Limited, manufacture very extensively wrapping and packing papers of all kinds; they have also a patent for making paper bags, in which they do a considerable trade. There is also a large paper mill at Culter, belonging to a limited liability company, and the Gordon's Mills Paper Co. Limited, at Gordon Mills, Woodside. There are several large horticultural builders in Aberdeen. Among the most prominent may be mentioned Messrs. J. Garvie & Sons, and D. Macandrew & Co.; the former have erected hot-houses for Her Majesty at Balmoral. The chemical works at Sandlands, near the Links, cover several acres of ground, and were begun by Messrs. John Miller & Co. in 1843, for the purpose of working up the Gas Company's liquid products into naphtha, creosote oil, asphalt, sulphate of ammonia, &c. But several branches have been added since, the most important of which are the manufacture of artificial manures, paraffin wax, sulphuric acid, &c. The distillation of whisky is carried on extensively in Aberdeen by the representatives of John Begg, of the famed Lochnagar Distillery; Messrs. Henry Ogg & Co. of the Strathdee Distillery; and the Bon-Accord Distillery Co. Limited, &c.

The granite trade may be said to be indigenous to Aberdeen. The greater part of the county, and portions of the adjoining districts, are composed of igneous rock of all varieties, the quarrying, of which commenced about 250 years ago, but made little progress till the year 1741, when a disastrous fire occurring in Aberdeen, destroyed a large number of the wooden houses of which the town was chiefly composed. An act of the magistrates and council was then passed ordaining the outside walls of dwelling houses to be built of stone or brick. About 1761 the streets of London began to be paved with Aberdeen granite; but it was not till 1795 that larger blocks were required, and machinery began to be applied. Rubislaw Quarries then supplied stones for the Government docks; and Dancing Cairn, which began to be wrought about this time, supplied granite for the Union Bridge, and the new street extension of the city. Subsequently the demand has considerably increased, as granite is used extensively in the construction of bridges, docks, and other public works. The dockyards of Portsmouth and Shoerness, the docks of many ports along the east coast including those of Newcastle, Hull and Leith, as well as London Bridge, were all formed of Aberdeen granite, and the piers of the Forth Bridge were also made of granite from the quarries belonging to Mr. John Fyfe. There are over 20 quarries in operation in the district, yielding granite of various colour and quality. The quantity of stone quarried annually is very large, one quarry alone; Rubislaw, yielding about 50,000 tons of saleable material. A considerable export trade is carried on. Swedish and other foreign granites are beginning to be larger imported for the purpose of being polished here. It may be noted that last year there were shipped from the port 25,024 tons of granite causeway blocks, 5,816 tons kerb, paving and building granite materials, and 5,458 tons granite "chips"; but this does not represent the total export, large quantities being conveyed by rail for shipment at other ports. The trade is estimated to be increasing at the rate of about 500 tons annually. The facilities afforded by the railways in lessening the expense of carriage from the various quarries have tended to increase the demand. Granite polishing has now acquired large dimensions here. About fifty years ago the late Mr. Macdonald was the first to apply machinery to the cutting and polishing of granite. The firm of Messrs. Macdonald, Field & Co. (now Alexander Macdonald & Co. Limited), had the honour to supply the enormous granite sarcophagus, 30 tons weight, now containing the remains of his late Royal Highness the Prince Consort, in the royal mausoleum at Frogmore, besides a smaller one for her late Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent. The same firm also manufactured the massive granite sarcophagus in which the remains of Napoleon III. are entombed, and which was presented to the Empress Eugenie by Her Majesty the Queen, and a similar tomb also by Messrs. Macdonald & Co. was made to the order of the Empress Eugenie for the remains of the late Prince Imperial. Numerous other firms do considerable business. The process of all their operations is by steam machinery. Remarkable advances have been made recently in the various mechanical operations. Within recent years the use of sand for smoothing the surface of the granite, a system that has been in general use from the commencement of the industry, has been almost entirely discontinued and the use of chilled shot adopted instead. In the splitting of the large blocks, also, a method of sawing has latterly been introduced which entails a large saving in labour as well as in material. From 10,000 to 12,000 tons of granite are used annually for polishing purposes at the various works in Aberdeen, consisting not only of the native local rock, but also of granites from the West of Scotland, from Ireland, and from various parts of Germany and Sweden. The demand for polished granite increases every year, and orders for architectural, general, and monumental purposes are sent from all parts of the world to the Granite City.

There are three joint stock companies for the manufacture and sale of agricultural materials—the Commercial, the Lime, and the Northern Agricultural—each of them having steam mills for pulverising bones and carrying on the manufacture of oilcake, linseed oil, rape oil, &c. Messrs. Ben Reid & Co. have a large establishment for the manufacture of agricultural implements. Messrs. Harper & Co. carry on an extensive business in the manufacture of agricultural implements and machinery and wire weaving, especially the construction of wire suspension bridges. There are also brick and tile manufacturing companies, several soap and candle manufactories, coach builders, and many other large establishments, of which our space prevents us from giving details, located here. The iron and metal works employ a large number of skilled workmen. There are several engineering establishments and foundries, with other works connected with shipping, sail and rope works, boiler making, &c., &c. Apart from the import of foreign timber, there is a large business carried on in home grown wood, from the upper districts of Aberdeenshire. Deeside fir has been a staple article in Aberdeen from time immemorial.

The earliest banking company formed in Aberdeen was started in 1762. It was begun on a scale which must now be regarded as limited, even for the comparatively moderate requirements of that period, and it was not long ere the scheme was relinquished. In 1766 the "Aberdeen Banking Company" was originated and long enjoyed almost a monopoly of the banking business of the north. About thirty years ago it was merged in the "Union Bank of Scotland," sinking its individual title. It still maintains a good connection, and continues to do considerable business, both in the town and over the northern district. Besides representatives of most of the Edinburgh and Glasgow banks, there are in Aberdeen two thriving native banks—the Town and County Bank, Limited, established in 1825, having fifty-nine branches, and the North of Scotland Bank, Limited, established in 1836, with sixty-six branches. By each of these two establishments (which are both incorporated by Act of Parliament) an extensive business is carried on at their head and branch offices in the city, and through their numerous agencies in the principal towns and villages in the northern counties, as well as in several counties south of Aberdeen. The banking houses in Aberdeen are, on the whole, elegant structures. That of the Town and County Bank occupies an excellent position in the angle formed by the junction of St. Nicholas street with the line of Union street. The North of Scotland Bank occupies a similar position in the corner where the western side of King street joins Castle street. The National Security Savings Bank has been long in operation, and well patronised by the special class of depositors for which it is intended. Aberdeen is the head station of two prosperous insurance companies, namely, the Northern established in 1836, and the Scottish Employers' Liability and Accident. The Northern Assurance Company's offices, erected in 1885, at a cost of £20,000, situated in Union street, at the corner of Union terrace, occupy one of the most prominent sites in the city, and are built entirely of light grey granite in the Italian Renaissance style of architecture, having a frontage to the Union terrace of 110 feet, and to Union street of 64 feet. The floors are fire-proof, the interior of the public office being largely decorated with polished granite, in the form of columns, pilasters, wall panels, &c. A striking feature is the largeness of the blocks used in the construction of the building, there being thirty columns, each 18 feet high and 2 wide, the effect of which is to give the building massive and dignified appearance. The architects were Messrs. Matthews and Mackenzie, of Aberdeen.

Regular communication is maintained with London, Edinburgh, Liverpool, Newcastle, Hull, Glasgow, the Moray Firth, and the Orkneys and the Shetlands, by steam packets, a species of conveyance which has done more to lay open the north-east shore of Scotland to improvements from the South than any other means. In addition to the above, there exist the means of rapid transit by the Caledonian Railway and other lines to all parts south of Aberdeen; and access is given to the north by the Great North of Scotland and the Highland railways, to Wick and Thurso, and the Dngwall and Skye railway to Stromeferry, in Ross-shire. The Deeside line to Banchory was opened in 1853, and is now extended to Ballater, coaches running in connection with the trains past the Royal residences of Aberfeldie and Balmoral to Braemar. Of other conveyances the Directory furnishes full information.

There are several first-class hotels, in the city, among which may be mentioned the Imperial, adjacent to the railway station; it is a neat building in the Venetian-Gothic style of architecture, and internally fitted with all modern requirements essential to a first-class hotel, no expense being spared to render it in all respects equal to any other of the same character. The Palace Hotel, adjoining Union bridge, is most centrally and conveniently situated, and from its elevated and open position commands a fine view of Union street, the chief thoroughfare of the city, and is adjoining the railway station. The Douglas, in Market street, and Forsyth's in Union street, are also first-class hotels. A large and exceedingly handsome first-class hotel (The Grand) is in course of erection in Union terrace, adjoining Union bridge and the railway station, and which will be completed in November of this year (1892). There are besides many excellent inns, which afford accommodation to various grades of travellers.

The burghal constitution of Aberdeen has undergone various alterations since its first establishment. The original magistracy consisted of an alderman, four bailies, and a common council, chosen by the Merchant Guild; subsequently this arrangement gave way before the gradual and perfect introduction of a self-electing system. From the year 1817 until 1825 the city revenues were gathered by and dispensed under the control of trustees. The credit of the burgh may now be considered as good as that of any in the kingdom. The council now consists of a lord provost, six bailies, a dean of guild, a treasurer, a master of shore works, a master of lirk and bridge works, a master of mortification, a master of Guild Brethren Hospital, and nineteen councillors. By the "Aberdeen Municipal Extension Act, 1871," the whole powers and authorities of the former Commissioners of Police were transferred to the Town Council, and the business of the Police Department is managed by separate committees. By the same Act the undertaking of the former Gas Light Company was also transferred to the Town Council. The boundaries of the municicity were largely extended in 1893, and legislative sanction given to a large scheme of civic improvements, including the formation of an access to the Rosemount subw. In 1891 a further "Aberdeen Municipal Extension Act" was passed, by which the boundaries were greatly enlarged, the adjoining burghs of Woodside and Old Aberdeen, and the fishing village of Torry on the other side of the Dee being now included within the municipal area. The circuit court of justiciary for the counties of Aberdeen, Banff and Kincardine is held in Aberdeen. A sheriff's court is held every Wednesday and Friday; and the small debt court on Thursday, during the legal sessions. The city returns two members to Parliament, one for the Northern and the other for the Southern Division; the present representatives are—William A. Hunter, Esq., LL.B., barrister, London, Northern Division, and James Bryce, Esq., professor of civil law at Oxford, Southern Division. The parliamentary constituency for 1891-92 is—Northern Division, 8,892; Southern Division, 8,476. Aberdeen confers the title of earl on a branch of the noble family of Gordon, which was distinguished for its active loyalty to the crown in the seventeenth century.

There are seven incorporated trades:—1, the Hammermen, incorporated September, 1619; 2, the Bakers, recognised as a company as early as the year 1398; 3, the Wrights and Coopers, who obtained their original seal of cause on the 5th of August, 1527; 4, the Tailors, who were recognised in a corporate capacity about the year 1511; 5, the Shoemakers, acknowledged as a corporate body in the years 1484 and 1520; 6, the Weavers, the deacons of his corporation were approved by the council and sworn into office in the year 1449; and 7, the Fishers or Huthchers; these originally dealt in fish as well as flesh, but were prohibited in the year 1518 from practising more trades than one; they received a seal of cause in 1581. The several incorporations hold their meetings in the Trade's Hall, in Union street, at the south-east corner of Union bridge, a building of rather florid architecture, erected in 1846-7, from designs by the late Mr. John Smith, architect. The affairs of each corporation are under the direction of a deacon and box-master, who are chosen annually, a convener, master of hospital, and convener court governing the joint affairs of the seven corporations. The Rev. Dr. William Guild, one of the town's ministers, and afterwards Principal of King's College, founded in 1632 a Trade's Hospital for the benefit of indigent brethren, assigning to the incorporation for that purpose the monastery and other property that formally belonged to the monks of the Holy Trinity. The Advocates' Hall is in Broad street, in proximity to and connected with the Court House Buildings. The Society of Advocates (as the local legal practitioners are called) was elected into a corporate body in 1774, and had their privileges confirmed in more ample terms in 1799 and in 1862. A library, principally on law subjects, was established in 1786; it contains about five thousand volumes. The number of members belonging to this institution is about 120. Among several clubs formed in this city, the "Royal Northern Club" and the "New Club" are the principal. The Public Libraries Acts were adopted in April 1884. The result of that has been the institution of a library which after carrying on its work in temporary premises was in 1892 removed to a new building specially constructed for it on the Rosemount Viaduct. This erection, which is handsome in appearance and admirably planned and furnished, was opened to the public with much éclat by Mr. Andrew Carnegie, July 12th, 1892, one of the principal owners. The Reading Room, which is supplied with a large and varied stock of newspapers and magazines, has about 1,500 visitors daily. The Lending Department has about 23,000 volumes, and last year circulated over 250,000. The Reference Department with about 16,000 volumes, is now in full working order in the new building, the total cost of which was about £8,000. A Museum and Art Gallery, raised by public subscription, was a few years ago erected in Schoolhill, on the grounds in front of Robert Gordon's College. It is a handsome building of the Italian Renaissance order, and being largely constructed of light-red and dark-brown granite, presents a novel and striking appearance. It was designed by Messrs. Matthews and Mackenzie, architects; as was also an adjoining and symmetrical building, intended for an Art School, erected at a cost of £5,000, by the late Councillor John Gray, and gifted by him to the town. Both buildings are united by a noble archway. A nucleus for the Art Gallery has been formed by the bequest of a magnificent collection by the late Mr. Alexander Macdonald, of Kippleshie. The various institutions of a charitable, social, educational and humane character, are numerous and well supported. A list of them will be found under the head "Public Buildings," &c. Three daily morning newspapers, two daily evening, two weekly satirical papers, and a bi-weekly advertiser are issued from the Aberdeen press—their titles and other particulars are given in their place. The first almanac ever printed in Scotland was published in Aberdeen, in 1623, by Edward Raban, the year after setting up the first printing press in the North. It was entitled "A New Prognostication for the Year of our Lord God, 1623, being the third after Leape Year, serving most fitly for the Kingdom of Scotland, and all the partes of North Britain, &c." The almanac seems for a long time to have been looked upon as a property of the Aberdeen printers, for a successor of Raban named John Forbes, issued one entitled "A New Prognosticator calculated for North Britain." He sold fifty thousand copies annually, and the price of each was only a plack, or the third part of a penny sterling. His success induced the publication of pirated editions at Edinburgh, which were suppressed by the Court of Session, and for many years the town enjoyed a complete monopoly in the sale of almanacs.

Prominent among the ecclesiastical edifices of the city are the East and West churches. These form one building, and occupy the site of the ancient parish church of St. Nicholas, which consisted of nave and aisles, transept and chancel, and was built progressively probably between the 11th and 13th centuries. The present West church occupies the site of the old nave, and was erected in 1755, from a design by the celebrated architect Gibbs, who was a native of Aberdeen. It is in the Roman style, with nave and side aisles divided by massive square piers and semi-circular arches, and has a finely proportioned interior. It contains sittings for about 1,450. There are several monuments in it worthy of attention, particularly one in marble to the memory of the late Mrs. Allardyce, of Dunottar, which is a splendid specimen of the skill of the sculptor. Bacon. The large west window has been filled in with stained glass. The old East church, which it was deemed necessary to take down in 1835, was built in 1447, partly on the site of the chancel, and formed the choir of the church. The east end was semi-octagonal, and under it was St. Mary's chapel, which still remains. The present East church was erected in 1836, from a design by the late Mr. Archibald Simpson, in the decorated Gothic style, of finely dressed granite. The old transept, known as Drum's and Collison's aisles, was at the same time opened up southwards, and formed a vestibule for the East and West churches. Over the transept at its intersection with the churches there was a short tower, with a wooden steeple, which on the 9th October, 1874, was destroyed by fire, along with the interior of the East church and Drum's and Collison's aisles. The East church has since been restored, and contains sittings for about 1,350 people. A handsome new tower with spire of granite has also been erected, from a design by Mr. W. Smith, architect, Aberdeen; the spire rises to the height of about 195 feet from the ground. The old Norman arches and piers under the tower were taken down and rebuilt in their original form with the old stones. In the tower a fine peal of 38 bells has been introduced at a cost of about £1,000. St. Clement's, or Footdee, church has a tower forty-five feet high, with a clock presented by the magistrates. Greyfriars, or College church, which stands on the east of Broad street, near Marischal College, said to have been erected by Bishop Dunbar, for the Grey Friars, about the beginning of the sixteenth century, and is now the only church in the town where the Roman Catholic worship was performed previous to the Reformation. In view of the proposed extension of Marischal College it also will have to be demolished. The South church is situated in Belmont street, and is calculated to accommodate 1,450 persons. It is in the Gothic style, and is distinguished by a handsome square tower, which forms a striking object in the approach from the south. The North church, in King street, is an edifice in the Grecian style, executed in finely dressed granite, from a design by the late Mr. John Smith, architect, and contains sittings for about 1,450. Old Machar church, at the northern extremity of Old Aberdeen, in the parish of Old Machar, consists of the nave of a cathedral founded by Bishop Alexander Kyninmuode II., about the middle of the fourteenth century. The ceiling is of the finest oak, of curious workmanship, and may vie with anything of the kind in Scotland. It consists of three compartments of square panels, joining at the opposite angular points. On these panels are painted the arms and titles of the princes, nobles, and prelates who contributed towards the expenses of the building. Along the top of the walls on the south side are inscribed the names of the successive sovereigns from Malcolm II. to Queen Mary. On the north side are the names of the several bishops, from Nectanus to William Gordon, the last Roman Catholic prelate. All these inscriptions, as well as those on the roof, are painted in the old black Saxon character. Several of the windows have, of late years, been filled in with stained glass; conspicuous amongst these is an "Artists' Window," to the memory of Jameson, Dyce, and Phillip, all Aberdonians. St. Paul's chapel was erected for the accommodation of such Episcopalians as refused to submit to the jurisdiction of the Scotch bishops. It contained sittings for 1,000 persons, but has been superseded by a very handsome new church. The other English Episcopalian chapel is St. James's, a small but striking building in red Corranie granite, at the corner of Union street and Holburn street. St. Andrew's, or Scotch Episcopalian chapel, is a neat edifice built in 1813. It occupies a site on the east side of King street; the gable or end fronts the street, presenting a centre and a side aisle, the corners of which are ornamented with lofty octagonal turrets, those on each side of the entrance being upwards of eighty feet in height. The turrets are finished with pinnacles and richly crocketed pinnacles. The entrance gate is embellished with clustered columns and crocketed mouldings, and the windows are finished with tracery in a corresponding style. The interior presents a simple style of Gothic architecture, corresponding with the front entrance. At the west end is a large and fine-toned organ, underneath which is a handsome statue of the late Bishop Skinner, by Flaxman. The building has been enlarged and much improved of late years, a chancel having been added, from a design by the late Mr. G. E. Street, R.A. In 1885 an elegant reredos was placed in the church, to the memory of the late Bishop Sutherland, for many years its incumbent. St. John's chapel, in St. Mary's place, for Scotch Episcopalians, with a small spire on the north end, will contain about 500 persons; the interior has undergone much alteration and repair. Another Scotch Episcopalian chapel is St. Mary's, Carden place, the most Anglican and Ritualistic of all in design and construction. There is also an Episcopalian chapel in the Gallowgate, named St. Margaret's. The Roman Catholic Cathedral of St. Mary's of the Assumption, in the early pointed Gothic style, in Huntly street, was consecrated on the 16th of March, 1859. Longitudinally the church is almost east and west, with a nave, north and south aisles, north and south porches, tower and spire, the latter reaching to a height of 200 feet, in which there is a peal of nine bells, the largest weighing 30 cwt. The sanctuary, situated at the east end, forms a continuation of the nave. On each side of the sanctuary are vestries; and in advance of the high altar, which is raised seven steps, are two side altars under arched recesses, formed in the east end of the aisles. Internally the dimensions of the church are one hundred and fifty feet in length, sixty-nine feet wide, and sixty-nine feet high from the floor to the apex of the roof, and it will comfortably seat 1,500 persons. The whole of the windows excepting the large west one, are filled with fine painted glass, by Wailes, of Newcastle. The principal entrance is from Huntly street, and above this entrance is the large west window, which is thirty feet high by fifteen feet in width, with tracery and sculptured figures in the centre. On the north side is the priests' house, and on the south a convent, the schools running backwards from the convent along the wall of the south aisle—all having access by a doorway to the church—the whole of which (the arcade excepted), is built of Aberdeen granite. The cost of erection was about £20,000, and the bells £1,800 in addition; the architect was Mr. Alexander Ellis. There is in connection with the church a very handsome schoolhouse, in Constitution street, erected in 1892 from a design by the late Mr. John Smith, architect, in which Catholic children belonging to the congregation are educated. In addition to these places of worship, there are others belonging to various denominations, for the names and situations of which, we must refer our readers to a list given at a subsequent page, where will be found also the names of the officiating ministers.

The two colleges, which were united by Act of Parliament in 1860, and now form the University of Aberdeen, are very ancient seminaries of learning—King's College in Old Aberdeen, and Marischal College in Broad street. The former was first instituted in the year 1494, by William Elphinstone, Bishop of Aberdeen, under the authority of a Bull of Pope Alexander VI. The original foundation charter is still extant in the charter chest of the College. The students wear a scarlet cloth gown, but do not reside within the college. The building forms a quadrangular court, and has been almost totally reconstructed of late years, spacious class rooms being erected, along with a large library, in which is a very valuable collection of books. The old chapel, however, is retained and possesses an antique screen of woodwork; the tomb of Bishop Elphinstone is in the middle of the entrance passage. Beautiful stained glass windows have been inserted in memory of Principal Campbell, Professor Macpherson, and Professor Nearns; the large west window was filled with a rich design in stained glass some years ago, the expense being borne by Mr. John Webster, late M.P. for the city. The chapel has been restored internally at a cost of about £8,000. The opening service taking place in 1892. On the south-east corner is a lofty square tower, strengthened by buttresses and covered with a flat roof, having on the top a parapet, over which springs from each of its corners a slip of stonework highly ornamented; these slips meet at the top and form four open arches, in imitation of an imperial crown. On the top of this is a stone lantern, surmounted with another imperial crown of stonework, with a globe and cross. The tower formerly contained a peal of thirteen bells. The Senatus room is ornamented with portraits of Bishops Elphinstone, Dunbar, &c. The erection of the original buildings commenced about the year 1500. Marischal College was founded and endowed by George Keith, Earl Marischal of Scotland, in 1593, by a charter ratified by Act of Parliament. The college buildings stand on the site of a Franciscan convent, and were rebuilt in 1836-41, at a cost of £21,240. Of this sum Government granted £15,000, and the balance was raised by public subscription. The new college is a spacious, elegant and convenient building, in the Gothic style, from a design by the late Mr. Archibald Simpson, architect. It forms three sides of a square of one hundred feet, and the accommodation consists of twenty-five large class rooms and laboratories, a hall, a museum, &c. The University authorities have resolved to extend Marischal College, at an estimated cost of £80,000, in order to meet pressing requirements for additional accommodation. The Government have promised a grant of £40,000, on condition that a similar amount is raised locally, and already (July, 1892) about £80,000 has been subscribed.

The Grammar School is a new and handsome building at the west end of the town. It is in the old Scotch baronial style, and was built in 1863, at a cost of about £15,000, from plans drawn by Mr. James Matthews, of Aberdeen. It contains a large public school, 80 feet by 40 feet, lofty, airy and well lighted; five class rooms on the ground floor for the classical department, and four class rooms for arithmetic, writing and modern languages; the library and reading room are in the upper storey. The school is of very ancient origin, the first recorded date being as far back as 1263. There are nearly thirty bursaries in connection with the school for the education of poor scholars, and in 1694 Dr. Patrick Dunn left a bequest for the better payment of the masters. Many eminent men have received their education here, among whom may be mentioned Lord Byron, 1797; Sir James McGregor, 1784; David Wedderburn, 1602; Thomas Reid, private secretary to James VI.; Dr. James Dunn; Dr. James Melvin, &c.

The Free Church Divinity Hall, at the top of Union street, is a beautiful building in the Elizabethan style of architecture, erected in 1850, at a cost of £2,000. In this hall the Aberdeen Synod of the Free Church hold their stated meetings. There are now a good library and fair museum attached, both owing much to the liberality of the late Mr. Thomson, of Banchoy, near Aberdeen. Latterly, the library has been placed in a separate building specially designed for the purpose.

Robert Gordon's College, Schoolhill, is a spacious building, standing on the ground anciently possessed by the Dominican Friars, and having an extensive piece of ground in front. It consists of a centre or main building and two wings. The original structure occupies the greater part of the centre, and is three storeys in height, having a small neat spire rising from it. The hall on the second floor is 30 feet by 20 feet wide and 12 feet high. This building was erected in 1739 after a design by Gibbs, and at an expense of £3,800. The remaining part of the centre and the wings was completed in 1832, from a design by the late Mr. John Smith, at a cost of about £13,000. The latter erection is in the Grecian style of architecture, presenting a chaste and elegant appearance. The more ancient part has been altered to correspond, and a colonnade now traverses the building from the old house to the projecting fronts at the ends of the wings. The ground in front, which is tastefully laid out, much improves the appearance of the edifice. The sum originally bequeathed was £10,000; this was invested in land, and at the present time the annual revenue is about £4,000. The object of the charity was to maintain and educate the sons and grandsons of decayed burgesses, but by a Provisional Order, obtained in 1881, the original bequest of the founder, Robert Gordon, was set aside, the "Hospital" system abandoned, and the institution converted into day and evening schools, the application of its benefits being also widely extended, the restriction to sons and grandsons of decayed burgesses being abolished.

The Royal Infirmary, situated on Woolmanhill, is a modern erection, and consists of a central compartment and projecting wings, the length in front being about one hundred and fifty feet, and the breadth one hundred and twelve. The building rises to the height of three lofty storeys, the lowest containing the requisite offices for the establishment, and the other floors wards and private apartments. There is accommodation for 300 patients. One of the wings is so contrived that it may be used as a separate fever hospital. In the centre of the upper part of the front is a spacious operation room, lighted from above through a dome thirty feet in diameter. The whole is designed in a simple style of Grecian architecture, and executed in dressed granite. From the elegance of the design and the beauty of the materials, as well as the situation of the building, it forms an ornamental feature of the city from various points of view, and is allowed to be a highly creditable proof of the skill of the architect, the late Mr. Archibald Simpson, to whose talents the city is indebted for some of its most tasteful public buildings and private mansions. It has been found, however, not to be in accordance with modern hygienic ideas; and in 1887 Lord Provost Henderson was successful in raising an Extension Fund of about £80,000, as a memorial of the Queen's Jubilee, to be devoted to the erection of new wards behind the present building, the latter to be used solely for administrative purposes. The extension has now (July, 1892) practically been completed. The Lunatic Asylum consists of two buildings, one of which was raised in 1800, the other in 1819. The insufficiency of the old building for the purposes of the institution rendering the erection of a more spacious and commodious one necessary, an adjoining field of three acres was purchased, and an elegant edifice erected according to a plan by the architect of the Infirmary, Mr. Archibald Simpson. Since that period it has received additions, under the superintendence of Mr. William Ramage, architect. Elmhill House is an establishment of a superior description, in connection with and under the same management as the Royal Asylum, and designed for the accommodation of the wealthier class of patients. The Asylum for the Blind, situated in Huntly street, was opened in 1848. It is supported partly by revenue from endowments and partly by legacies and public subscriptions. Work is provided for blind persons of both sexes belonging to the city of Aberdeen and the three counties of Aberdeen, Banff and Kincardine. The chief industries carried on are twine spinning and basket and mattress making. From fifty to sixty blind persons are thus employed. In addition, blind children and young persons are kept in the institution, and receive education in ordinary subjects and in industrial training. The Board of Management, as re-constituted under the authority of the Endowment Commission, consists of persons elected by the subscribers, or nominated either by benefactors to the institution, or by certain public bodies in Aberdeen or the above mentioned counties. The institution for the education of the Deaf and Dumb is in Belmont street, and is principally supported by voluntary contributions. The average number of pupils of both sexes is thirty. The Boys and Girls' Hospital in King Street road was instituted in 1853. Its objects are the maintenance and education of poor children of the parish of St. Nicholas. The Medical Society's Hall, King street, has a handsome front, with a portico of four Ionic columns. It contains a library and museum, a large room for the meetings of the society, committee rooms, &c. It was built in 1818, at a cost of £2,000, from the plan of the architect of the Infirmary. In the hall are some portraits, among the rest an original painting of Harvey by Vandyke. There are also two by James Gils, R.A., which are both favourable specimens of the skill of this distinguished native artist.

The weekly markets are held on Wednesday and Friday, and the feeding markets Friday before and after the 26th of May, Friday before and after 22nd November; wool markets, Thursday and Friday of first and second week in July; timber, the last Wednesday in August. The population of Aberdeen, according to the returns for 1881, amounted to 105,054. The inhabited houses at the same date was 20,341. In 1891 the population numbered 112,923, the number of inhabited houses having increased to 24,481.

OLD ABERDEEN stands about a mile to the north of the city, on an eminence on the south bank of the river Don, in the parish of OLD MACHAR, of which it is the capital. Formerly this town was the seat of the Bishop of Aberdeen, but it now derives its original importance from King's College (amalgamated with the University of Aberdeen) and the Cathedral. The charter was renewed by George I. when the power was conferred of electing its own magistrates, which are now a provost, three bailies, a treasurer, and council, with the deacons of six incorporated trades. The principal curiosity in the neighbourhood is the old bridge, which crosses the river Don by one Gothic pointed arch. Mr. Kennedy in his "Annals of Aberdeen," states it to have been erected in the time of Robert Bruce, by Bishop Cheyne. WoodsIDE is a police burgh in this parish, distant from Aberdeen 2 miles, and a station on the Great North of Scotland railway. The parish of Old Machar lies in the peninsula between the Dee and the Don, where they join the ocean. Its length is about seven or eight miles, and its greatest breadth four. The land rises in a gentle slope from the sea, and is beautifully diversified by undulating grounds. The windings of the Dee and Don—the manufactories and the woods on the banks of the latter, interspersed with many gentlemen's seats and villas, together with the numerous admirable prospects of the sea—impart a pleasing variety to the general appearance of the parish. Great improvements in agriculture, at a very considerable expense, have been effected, which have been the means of materially enhancing the value of the land, and beautifying the neighbourhood of Aberdeen. The parish of Old Machar possesses an acreage of 12,143; in 1871 its population was 42,477, and in 1881 it had increased to 56,002.

NIGG is a parish in Kincardineshire, situated near the termination of the ridge of the Grampian mountains. It is bounded by the Dee on the north, which separates it from Aberdeen, and on the south and west by Banclry-Denevick. It extends four miles in length by two in breadth. The parish church is distant 2 miles s. from Aberdeen. The coast is bold and rocky. The north-east point, called Girdleness, is a remarkable promontory, forming the south side of the estuary of the Dee. There is a small bay called the Bay of Nigg, close beside which are the ruins of the old parish church, dedicated to St. Fiacre. The district comprises the fishing village of Torry, which has a small harbour and pier, and contains extensive brick and tile works; also a preserved provision manufactory. The Victoria Bridge, a handsome granite structure, now spans the Dee, and connects Torry with Aberdeen. COVE is also a small fishing village in the parish, situated 4 miles s. from Aberdeen, and is a station on the Caledonian railway. The parish has an acreage of 4,432. The population in 1881 was 2,935, and in 1891, 4,513.

COLT is a pleasant suburb of Aberdeen in the parish of Peterculter, situated on the north bank of the Dee, on the road to Ballater, distant from Aberdeen 4 miles s.w. and is a station on the Deeside branch of the Great North of Scotland railway. In the vicinity are many handsome villas and cottages, chiefly the residences of those engaged in business in Aberdeen.

KINCARDINE-O'NEILL, GLENTANA, BIRSE AND LUMPHANAN.

ABOYNE, or CHARLESTOWN OF ABOYNE, is a small village in the parish of Aboyne, district of Mar, 80 miles W.S.W. from Aberdeen, 4 w. from Kincardine, and 11 N.E. from Ballater, situated on the north bank of the Dee, and in the county court district of Aberdeen. There is a station here on the Dee Side railway. The parish is united to that of Glentana, and is watered by the river just named, and likewise by the Tana and the Allachy, which during heavy rains become impetuous streams. The forest of Glentana is extensive, and contains some large timber. Woodend, the seat of Sir William Cunliffe Brooks, Bart., is pleasantly situated in the district of Glentana. The Dee here is crossed by a very handsome suspension bridge, built at the sole expense of the Marquis of Huntly in 1830 (re-erected by the County Road Trustees in 1871), whose seat, Aboyne Castle, ornaments this locality. In the grounds of the castle is a remarkable stone, shaped like a coffin, with a cross cut upon it. Loch Cannor is situated about 4 miles from Aboyne. It contains some small islands, on one of which there is said to have been a castle built by Malcolm Canmore. In the loch have been found articles of antiquity, among them an old axe, several caucos of oak, cut out of the solid tree, and a bronze pot. There is a good library and reading room in the village. In the parish there is an Established church, besides a Free church, a Roman Catholic chapel and two schools. Fairs are held at Aboyne on the third Thursday in January, March, May, August, September and December, second Wednesday in April, last Wednesday in June, the Friday after Aiky fair in July, first Tuesday and Wednesday in October (old style), and second Wednesday in November. The parish which has an area of 25,265 acres, in 1881 contained a population of 1,427, and in 1891, 1,473.

KINCARDINE-O'NEIL, a parish and village, the latter the seat of a presbytery, is situated on the public road and the banks of the Dee, between Aberdeen and Ballater, 26 miles W. from the former, 16 N.E. from the latter, and 24 N.W. from Stonehaven. St. Erchan's well, whose waters are said to be of a medicinal character, is situated near this village. At TORPHINS, in this parish, are public schools, a Free church, an Established church, and a station on the Dee Side railway, about three miles from Kincardine-O'Neil. Dess station is about two miles from Kincardine, and in the neighbouring parish of Aboyne. The buildings, which principally enround the church, command an extensive prospect up the river, towards the Grampian mountains, and the place is much resorted to for the summer retirement of invalids, being much protected from the north and east winds. In early days, Kincardine was of some note, for it is upon record that a wooden bridge was built across the Dee 600 years ago, the expense of which was defrayed by a knight called Allan Durward. The parish, which is about nine miles in length by six in extreme breadth, is partly hilly and pastoral and partly arable, while in some places are thriving plantations. The greater portion of the inhabitants are occupied in agriculture, and others are employed by the manufacturers of Aberdeen in knitting worsted stockings. The village contains Established, Free, and Episcopalian churches, a public school, and a hall, which was erected in 1885 by public subscription. Fairs are held on the second Tuesday in May, and on the Wednesday and Thursday after the last Tuesday in August (o.s.). Markets are held at TORPHINS in January, May, November and December. The acreage of the parish is 18,132, and the population in 1881 was 1,931, and in 1891, 1,006.

BIRSE, the most southern parish of Aberdeenshire, lies on the south bank of the river Dee, and forms nearly a square of ten miles. There are three districts in the parish, enclosed by the same number of ridges of hills, which take a south-westerly direction towards the Grampians from the river Dee; in the valleys formed by these ridges run two streams of water—the Feuch and the Chattie. The proportion of uncultivated land is very considerable, but the old system of agriculture is giving way to modern improvements. The road from Dundee to Inverness passes through this parish. Large upright stones, cairns, and other monuments of antiquity are frequently met with, as is limestone in abundance. The parish church is distant about 28 miles W. by S. from Aberdeen. The manse of the Free church was erected in 1844, the church itself being built in 1843. In the parish there are four public schools. Acreage of the parish, 31,218. Population in 1881, 1,031, and in 1891, 1,094.

LUMPHANAN parish, which lies to the north-west of the village of Kincardine-O'Neil, is about six miles in length and four in breadth, and is nearly surrounded by hills. The name signifies "the bare little valley," but this designation is not in the present day applicable to the lowlands, which are now well-cultivated and fruitful. This is the district in which the usurper Macbeth is said to have been slain by Macduff, in the year 1057; the spot on which tradition asserts the combat to have taken place is about a mile north from the kirk, on the brow of a hill, where a large cairn of stones (in the midst of which a stone coffin was found some time ago) has been raised commemorative of the event, and corroborative of the finale of Shakspere's drama. The parish, which contains a public school, and an Established and a Free church, consists of 8,754 acres, with a population in 1881 of 1,130, and in 1891, 992.

ALFORD,

GLENBUCKET, KEIG, KILDRUMMY, STRATHDON, TOUGH, TOWIE, TULLYNESSLE WITH FORBES AND LEOCHEL-CUSHNIE.

ALFORD is a village and parish—the former, the seat of a presbytery, is 27 miles W.N.W. from Aberdeen, and 18 S.E. from Huntly, and is the terminus of the Alford Valley line, a branch of the Great North of Scotland railway. The Parish is seven miles in length, and about three in breadth, and covers an area of 9,102 acres. In the village are branches respectively of the North of Scotland Bank, Limited, and the Town and County Bank, Limited. The places of worship are Established, Free and Episcopalian churches. Markets are held on the 14th November, and every third Tuesday; the half-yearly feeing markets being held on the Mondays before the 26th May and the 22nd November. Population in 1881, 1,472, and in 1891, 1,402.

KEIG, a small parish intersected by the Don, is nearly of circular form, and between three and four miles in diameter. Castle Forbes, the seat of Lord Forbes, is in this parish, surrounded by thriving plantations, besides a natural wood of considerable extent. The seat commands a fine view of the windings of the river Don for many miles. Two druidical circles are in this parish, also a barmekin or old celtic fort. The parish is about 4 miles N.E. from Alford, and 25 N.W. from Aberdeen, and it has an area of 8,059 acres. The nearest railway station is at Whitehouse, 2 miles distant. Population in 1881, 776, and in 1891, 748.

GLENBUCKET is a parish of 11,084 acres, in the district of Mar, 12 miles N. from Alford (its nearest railway station), and 29 S.W. from Huntly, situated on both sides of the Bucket, a tributary stream to the Don, and extending about four miles in length by about one in breadth. The ruins of Budeynon House, alluded to in the popular Scotch song of "John of Budeynon," are in this parish. Population in 1881, 506, and in 1891, 408.

STRATHDON parish lies between those of Glenbucket and Kildrummy. The land in this district is for the most part fertile, and tolerably well cultivated. Acreage, 47,728. Dinnet is the nearest railway station, 12 miles distant. Population in 1881, 1,316, and in 1891, 1,220.

KILDRUMMY parish lies in a valley, distant 6 miles W. from Alford, 35 W. from Aberdeen, and 16 S. from Huntly. The castle of Kildrummy, which anciently belonged to David, Earl of Huntingdon and Garioch, was a seat of King Robert Bruce, and served as a place of retreat to his queen in the winter of 1306. It is a ruin of great antiquity, and appears to have been strongly fortified, having subterranean passages and concealments. It was distinguished by its seven towers, one of which, from the whiteness of its stone, was called the Snow Tower; these ruins cover an acre of ground. Alford is the nearest railway station, 7 miles distant. The parish has an area of 10,852 acres, and its population in 1881 was 656, and in 1891, 569.

LEOCHEL-CUSHNIE is a joint parish situated 3 miles S. from Alford. The ruins of the ancient castles of Linturk and Coise are within the parish. In the latter were born several of the Forbes, one of whom (Patrick Forbes of Coise) wrote a Commentary on the Revelations. Craigievar Castle, the elegant seat of Lord Semphill, is also in this parish, and from its elevated situation commands an extensive prospect of the country. The nearest railway station is at Whitehouse, about 2½ miles distant. Acreage 12,856. Population in 1881, 1,217, and in 1891, 1,146.

TOUGH parish is 2 miles S.E. from Alford, 23 S.E. from Huntly, and 22 N.W. from Aberdeen. Several druidical temples may be seen in this district, one of which, on the hill, about two miles from the church, still retains the name of the Old Kirk of Tough. The nearest railway station is at Alford, 2 miles distant. Area, 7,108 acres. Population in 1881, 681, and in 1891, 675.

The parish of TOWIE is 8 miles W.W. from Alford, and 23 S. from Huntly, and is watered by the Don, which flows through it from east to west. The general appearance of the country is hilly, and the eminences are mostly covered with heath. Alford is the nearest railway station, 8 miles distant. Acreage 12,150. Population in 1881, 759, and in 1891, 734.

TULLYNESSLE AND FORBES, parishes united, lie 27 miles N.W. from Aberdeen, and 18 S.E. from Huntly, on the north bank of the Don. The appearance of the country is hilly, or rather mountainous. Some of the hills are of considerable altitude, and game is abundant. The nearest railway station is at Alford, one mile and three-quarters distant. Acreage, 11,279. Population in 1881, 981, and in 1891, 976.

AUCHTERLESS,

BADENSCOTH, GORDONSTOWN, MONTQUHITTER, CUMINESTOWN, AND GARMOND AND INVERKEITHNY (BANFFSHIRE)

AUCHTERLESS, a parish situate about midway between Aberdeen and Banff, is about 7 miles long and 3 broad; the soil is generally productive, and is watered by the river Ythan. The vestiges of an extensive fortified camp, the enclosed area of which is computed at 120 acres, are well worthy the attention of the antiquary. The places of worship are the Parish and a Free Church.
The Great North of Scotland railway has a station 3 miles from the village. Acreage, 16,826. Population in 1881, 2,144, and in 1891, 1,698.

BADENSCOTH AND GORDONSTOWN are small places in Auchterless parish. Rothienorman is the nearest railway station, 2 miles distant.

INVERKEITHNY, a parish in the south-eastern corner of Banffshire, lies on the right or south bank of the Deveron, along which it extends about 6 miles, and measures from one to four miles in breadth. Marnock bounds it on the north, Turriff and Auchterless on the east, Forgue on the south, and Rothiemay on the west. The district is chiefly hilly. The parish church is the only place of worship. Huntly and Turriff are the nearest railway stations, each 9 miles distant. Acreage, 7,641. Population in 1881, 909, and in 1891, 826.

MONTQUHITTER is a parish extending about 9 miles from north to south, and 6 from east to west, bounded by Turriff on the west, King Edward on the north, New Deer on the east, and Fyvie on the south. The surface is uneven and arable in the lower parts. The district was once very mossy and moorish, but has been considerably improved. The parish is watered by two small rivers; one of these discharges itself into the Ythan, and other into the Deveron; both abound with trout. Turriff is the nearest railway station, 6 miles distant. Acreage, 17,493. Population in 1881, 2,794, and in 1891, 2,220.

CUMINESTOWN is a considerable village in Montquhitter parish.
The parish church is situated close to the village, and there are also a Free Church and one belonging to the Episcopalians. GAR-MOND is also a small village in the same parish. Turriff is the nearest railway station, 6 miles distant.

POST OFFICE, AUCHTERLESS, John Cheyne, Post Master.—Deliveries, 11 15 a.m. and 2 25 p.m.; despatches, 5 30 and 11 20 a.m.—The nearest Money Order Office is at TURRIFF, six miles distant.

POST OFFICE, AUCHTERLESS STATION, George Williamson, Post Master.—Deliveries, 8 50 a.m. and 1 5 p.m.; despatches, 6 40 a.m. and 8 35 p.m.—The nearest Money Order Office is at TURRIFF, four miles distant.

POST OFFICE, BADENSCOTH, John Henderson, Post Master.—
Deliveries, 10 15 a.m. and 1 0 p.m.; despatches, 6 a.m. and 1 15 p.m.—The nearest Money Order Office is at ROTHENORMAN, two miles and a half distant.

POST AND MONEY ORDER OFFICE AND SAVINGS BANK, CUMINESTOWN, John Lamb, Post Master.—Deliveries, 11 30 a.m. and 5 30 p.m.; despatches, 6 45 a.m. and 5 30 p.m.

POST OFFICE, INVERKEITHNY, James Walker, Post Master.—
Delivery, 12 20 p.m.; despatch, 12 30 p.m.—The nearest Money Order Office is at FORGUE, two miles distant.

Letters for Auchterless, Cuminestown, Garmond, Montquhitter and Inverkeithny should be addressed "via TURRIFF;" and for Badenscoth and Gordonstown "via ROTHENORMAN."

BALLATER,

WITH THE PARISH OF GLENMUCK, AND THE VILLAGES OF GLENGAIRN, TULLICH, PANNANICH WELLS, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

BALLATER is an agreeable and quiet village, in the parish of Glenmuck, pleasantly situated upon the river Dee, 42 miles w.s.w. from Aberdeen, 11 w.s.w. from Aboyne, and 18 E. from Braemar. It is much resorted to in the summer by tourists, on account of the scenery around, which combines both the picturesque and the grand. The neighbourhood is also occasionally honoured by the presence of royalty—Balmoral Castle being 9 miles distant, and Abergeldie Castle, a seat of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, 6 miles distant. The ruins of Knock Castle are ornamental to the scenery at one point, and the country is studded with many seats of the gentry. Loch Camor is in this neighbourhood; on a small island within it are the ruins of a castle, said to have been once a hunting seat of Malcolm Canmore. The lake is beautiful and romantic in its features, and skirted with birch, hazel and other woods. Speaking of this district, indeed, it may be pronounced one of the most interesting in Aberdeenshire. The village of Ballater is small, but regularly formed—the Established church standing near to its centre, and the Free church upon the outskirts. Many houses have been erected expressly for the reception of visitors, and additional accommodation is found in a very superior hotel—the Invercauld Arms—containing every convenience that may be desired either by families or commercial gentlemen. The Great North of Scotland railway from Aboyne terminates here. A military barracks, to accommodate about 70 men, was erected here in 1870. Fairs are held at Ballater on the second Tuesday in May, and the second Monday and Tuesday in September (o.s.), and on the Saturday previous to the 22nd November (N.S.). Population in 1881, 759, and in 1891, 981.

GLENMUCK is a large parish in the district of Mar, formed by the union of the parishes of Glenmuck, Tullich, and Glengairn. It lies about 40 miles W. of Aberdeen, is about 18 miles in length, and 15 in breadth, intersected by the Dee, and several of its tributary streams. The soil is shallow and early, producing good grain; the hills are of considerable elevation, and many of them covered with wood to their very summits. Specimens of lead ore have been found near the castle of Glengairn, and limestone is everywhere abundant. Acreage, 87,541. Population of the whole parish in 1881, 2,100, and in 1891, 1,885.

In the village of TULLICH are seen the remains of an old kirk, the walls of which enclose the burial place of the Farquharsons of Whitehouse. The view from this spot looking towards the west is much admired, and presents a series of hills rising one above another, with the lofty Lochnagar towering over all.

The mineral wells and baths at PANNANICH are within about two miles of Ballater, on the banks of the Dee. The waters are highly serviceable in cases of scrofula and dyspepsia, and in all complaints where the blood is either deficient in quantity or vitiated in quality; they have also proved beneficial in cases of stone and gravel. The increasing demand for accommodation evinces that the wells are justly rising in public estimation. There is a good hotel adjacent to the wells.

BRAEMAR, BALMORAL, AND CASTLETOWN.

CRATHIE, or Crathly, is an extensive mountainous parish, in the heart of Mar, among the Grampian mountains, incorporating the suppressed parish of BRAEMAR; jointly they comprise a territory 40 miles in length and 20 in breadth. This district is supposed to be more elevated above the level of the sea, and farther distant from the coast in every direction, than any other parochial section in Scotland. On some of the mountains snow may be found all the year round; Ben-Methul, 4,300 feet in height, and Lochnagar, 3,800 feet in height, are among the stupendous eminences in this quarter. Nearly the whole of this district was once covered with wood, and was called the Forest of Mar, which, with those of the Duke of Athole, in Perthshire, and the Duke of Gordon, in Badenoch and Glenavey, constituted the principal part of the great Caledonian forest. In Braemar a considerable portion of the wood still remains, which is well stocked with deer.

BALMORAL CASTLE, the highland residence of Her Majesty Queen Victoria, and Abergeldie Castle, a seat of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, are in this parish, as is also Lochmuich, one of the shooting boxes of His Royal Highness. Many seats of the nobility and gentry embellish this interesting locality. Population in 1881, 1,566, and in 1891, 1,534.

LOCHNAGAR, so famed for its whisky distillery, is likewise in Crathie parish. The principal lakes are Loch Callater and Loch Brochan, which contain trout, salmon and eels. The great military road from Blairgowrie to Fort George passes the whole extent. On this line is the village of BRAEMAR, or CASTLETOWN, near which are the ruins of an ancient castle, said to have been a hunting seat of King Malcolm Canmore. The village is divided by the river Cluay—the one side of the water, called ACHTERDYNNE, belonging to the Duke of Fife, and the other to Alexander Haldane Farquharson, Esq., of Invercauld. At a short distance from Braemar, is the castle of Braemar, once garrisoned by King William, and burnt in the contest which took place between the Royal forces and the Earl of Mar; it was rebuilt in 1749, and till within the last few years was occupied by Government troops, to prevent the smuggling which was so frequent in this district. This part contains inexhaustible quarries of limestone and fine slate. Braemar, with a population of about 680 persons, possesses two first-class hotels, and is much resorted to in summer by tourists.

CRIMOND,

[LONMAY, RATHEN, ST. FERGUS, CAIRNBURG, INVERALLOCHY, ST. COMBS, AND KININMONTH.]

CRIMOND is a parish about 8 miles n.w. from Peterhead and the same distance s.e. from Fraserburgh, upon the coast of Buchan, with a front to the German Ocean of about three miles in breadth, which declines to a point, inland, at the distance of rather more than five miles. Rattray Head, on the coast, is a very dangerous promontory, and a large number of ships having gone ashore at this point, a light-house is now (1892) in course of erection. Near the east end of the lake Strathbeg is a small hill, called the Castle Hill, where Comyn, Earl of Buchan, had a castle. About a hundred years ago, there was communication between the loch of Strathbeg and the sea, and a harbour at the east end, close to the castle, for small craft; in one night the mouth of the harbour was filled up by the drifting of sand, and the communication has been interrupted ever since. On this harbour formerly stood the burgh of Rattray, near the site of which is a ruin of a small chapel, said to have been erected by the Earl of Buchan, about the year 1200. The only place of worship is a church under the Establishment, and there is also a public school in the village. The area of the parish is 5,891 acres, and its population was in 1881, 882, and in 1891, 808.

LONMAY parish, 4 miles s.e. from Fraserburgh, has about four miles of sea coast, is ten miles long, and varies in breadth from half a mile to four miles. The soil is various, but generally fertile. There are two Established and one Episcopal church in the parish, also several public schools. A considerable branch of the river Ugie passes through the southern boundary of the parish for half a mile.
There is a railway station at this place. Population in 1891, 1,726.

KININMONTH is a small hamlet in the parish of Lonmay, where there are a church of the Establishment and two public schools.
Mintlaw is the nearest railway station, 2 miles distant.

St. COMBS is a fishing village also in the parish of Lonmay, which is the nearest railway station, 4 miles hence. Population in 1891, 561.

RATHEN parish is about 3 miles s. from Fraserburgh, and is about eight miles long, with a medium of two in breadth, covering an area of 9,587 acres. The places of worship are the parish church, a neat modern edifice, and a Free Church; there are likewise a public school, and a station on a section of the Great North of Scotland railway.

There are two old castles in ruins in the parish, which seem to have been places of considerable strength. This parish is destitute of growing timber, though large masses of oak are occasionally dug up from morasses. Population in 1881, 2,825, and in 1891, 2,638.

CAIRNBURG and INVERALLOCHY are two fishing villages, in the parish of Rathen, and are divided by a small stream. At the latter place there is a church of the Establishment, also a public school.
The nearest railway station is Rathen, 2 miles distant. Population in 1891, 657.

ST. FERGUS, a village and parish, though locally situate on the coast of Aberdeenshire, is in that part of the district of Buchan which belongs to the county of Banff. It is bounded on the east by the North Sea, and on the south by the small river Ugie, which separates it from Peterhead. The village is 5 miles N. from that town, and 13 s.e. from Fraserburgh. Here are Established and Free churches, and a Baptist chapel, also public and endowed schools.
The great Field Marshal Keith, of whom a statue in bronze was presented to the town of Peterhead by King William I. of Prussia, was born in 1696, at Invergie Castle, the ruins of which, in a bend of the river, still attract the notice of the traveller. Acreage of the parish, 8,856. Population in 1881, 1,527, and in 1891, 1,318.

ECHT,

CULTS, DRUMOAK, PETERCULTER, MIDMAR, AND SKENE.

ECHT, a parish 12 miles w. of Aberdeen, is about 5 miles in length and the same in breadth. It is a hilly district, but having a large proportion of the land under cultivation. In this parish is Dunecht House, the property of the Earl of Crawford and Balcarres, whose observatory here, founded in 1872, is one of the best equipped in the kingdom. It is fitted with a 15 inch equatorial refractor, by Grubb, besides several others of smaller dimensions. There is also a library of about 15,000 titles, and a large collection of physical instruments. The remains of a Pictish camp, much prized by antiquarians, are upon the summit of a hill adjacent to Dunecht. Fairs are held on the first Monday in every month, with the following exceptions—the second Monday in May, the day before Michaelmas fair, in October, and the second Tuesday in November. The nearest railway station is Drumoak, 6 miles distant. The parish has an area of 11,948 acres, and in 1881 contained a population of 1,297, and in 1891, 1,207.

DRUMOAK parish 10 miles s. w. from Aberdeen, is chiefly in Aberdeenshire, having a small portion in Kincardineshire. It is about four miles long, and about the same in breadth, and embraces an area of 7,228 acres. The surface is hilly, a great part being fit only for sheep pasture, while the arable land is shallow and produces but moderate crops. There are two stations here on the Dee Side line. The tower of Drum is a very ancient edifice. Population in 1881, 980, and in 1891, 869.

PETERCULTER parish is about 8 miles in length and 6 in breadth, and is situated 7½ miles s. w. from Aberdeen. The surface is rugged and uneven, with hills and valleys, rocky eminences and marshy flats interpersed. On the banks of the Dee and its tributary streams, however, the soil is tolerably fertile. On the summit of the hills of Oldtown are the remains of a rectangular encampment. This parish embraces the modern village of CULTER, in which there are some handsome villas, chiefly the residences of Aberdeen merchants. The Dee Side Railway Company have three stations in the parish, in which are also the paper mills belonging to the Culter Mills Paper Co. Limited. Population in 1891, 3,635.

SKENE parish is about 8 miles W. from Aberdeen, the same number of miles in length, and 4 at its extreme breadth. On the south is the Luchar burn, a tributary stream of the Dee, issuing from Loch Skene, a small lake; and in the north-west direction thence is Skene House, an elegant country mansion surrounded by some thriving plantations. In this parish is an extensive spinning and carding mill, worked by Messrs. Alexander Hadden & Sons. A list of the churches of these several parishes, with their ministers is given under the head of Places of Worship. A fair is held on the Tuesday before Easter. Peterculter is the nearest railway station, $4\frac{1}{2}$ miles distant. Acreage, 10,246. Population in 1881, 1,787, and in 1891, 1,673.

MIDMAR parish, 15 miles W. from Aberdeen, is about $5\frac{1}{2}$ miles in length, and 4 in breadth. The vale of Corriehe, near the southern boundary, is well known as the scene of a battle fought during the reign of Queen Mary, when the contending parties were headed by the Marquis of Huntly and the Earl of Murray. The principal eminence in this part is the hill of Fare, which rises nearly 1,800 feet above the level of the sea. The nearest railway station is at Telfourie,

5 miles distant. Acreage, 10,868. Population in 1881, 1,041, and in 1891, 1,060.

ELLON, CRUDEN, FOVERAN, NEWBURGH, LOGIE BUCHAN, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

ELLON parish extends about nine miles in length from north to south, and five in breadth, and comprehends an area of 23,269 acres. The surface is uneven, and there are some rising grounds, the heights of which are considerable. The village of Ellon, at which there is a station on the Great North of Scotland line, is about 16 miles N. from Aberdeen, pleasantly situated on the Ythan, which is here crossed by a bridge. Upon the river, which is navigable for large boats within half a mile of the village, a trade in coal and corn is carried on of some importance; and the monetary affairs of the district are facilitated by three banking establishments; they are branches respectively of the Union Bank of Scotland, Limited, the Town and County Bank, Limited, and the North of Scotland Bank, Limited. Ellon was not at one time an insignificant village, but the assize town of a populous district—the scene of penal trial, the doomsman's place of execution, and the scene of mortal combat. Within the last few years several new and handsome buildings have been erected in the village, and the present proprietor (Arthur John Lewis Gordon, Esq. J.P.) gives every encouragement in the way of fees, for which there are several very eligible sites. It has many attractions, and therefore in the summer season there are many visitors, who find excellent accommodation at Lamont's Hotel, and also at the Station Hotel, adjoining the railway station. The trout fishing on the Ythan has long been celebrated, as are also the pearls which are found in that river, one of which is the great pearl in the Crown of Scotland.

The places of worship are Established and Free churches, and others for United Presbyterians and Episcopal congregations. The Established church a few years ago underwent several improvements, which included the erection of a new organ and the putting in of four additional windows, at a cost of about £500. A fine Episcopal church, called St. Mary's, from designs by the late Mr. G. E. Street, of London, is also in the village. There are several public schools in the parish. The market is held on the first and third Mondays in each month, also on Tuesday after the 11th of May, and on the Wednesday after the 12th of November. Population of the parish in 1881, 3,698, and in 1891, 3,212.

CRUDEN parish, about 7 miles S.S.W. from Peterhead, lies on the east of Buchan district, extending from eight to nine miles along the shore, and about seven miles inland, and has an area of 18,226 acres. The soil is various, a large proportion being a deep rich clay, while the remainder is light and gravelly, with some mosses. Slains Castle the seat of the Earl of Erroll, a large edifice on a precipice overhanging the sea, and the celebrated "Buller of Buchan" are in this parish. The latter is a large rocky cavern, open to the sky, into which the sea rushes through a natural archway. The rocks are probably one hundred feet in height, both to the interior of "The Pot" and also on the sea front. It is scarcely possible to overstate the impressing magnificence of these granite sea walls. The places of worship are Established and Free churches, and others for United Presbyterians and Episcopalians. There is also a well conducted school. The nearest railway station is at Peterhead, about 7 miles distant. Population of the parish in 1881, 3,444, and in 1891, 3,595.

The parish of FOVERAN extends seven miles in length from east to west, and about two in breadth, and comprises 10,537 acres. It is 10 miles N. from Aberdeen, and 4 S.E. from Ellon, its nearest railway station. Its general appearance is level, but the ground rises by a gradual ascent from the sea, though not to any considerable height. The soil varies from sand to a rich loam and strong clay, the whole of which is arable. The Ythan, navigable for about three miles, forms the boundary on the north. The places of worship are the parish church and a Free church. At the mouth of the river is the small village of NEWBURGH, in which a considerable trade is carried on in grain, lime, bones and guano. In this parish are to be seen the ruins of several ancient castles and chapels. Population of the parish in 1881, 2,042, and in 1891, 1,945.

LOGIE BUCHAN parish is over nine miles in length, but does not average one mile in breadth. It is 13 miles N. from Aberdeen, the turnpike road crossing the parish between 2 and 3 miles from Ellon, and again 4 north of the same place. It is divided into two parts by the river Ythan, to the right of which stands the parish kirk. The surface of the country is tolerably level, and is well cultivated, the soil being in general fertile. The Ythan is navigable with the tide for boats to the extent of four miles up the country, which is of material advantage to the agriculturists, by supplying them with lime, &c. The nearest railway station is at Ellon, 3½ miles distant. Acreage, 6,608. Population in 1881, 767, and in 1891, 762.

FRASERBURGH AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.

FRASERBURGH is a flourishing seaport town and burgh of barony and regality, in a parish of the same name, 161 miles N.E. of Edinburgh, 42 N. of Aberdeen, 22 E. of Banff (26 by the new road), and 18 N.W. from Peterhead; situated on the south side of Kinnaird Head, a bold promontory, surmounted by a lighthouse, which is one of the oldest under the Commissioners of Northern Lights. It is built upon the site of a very ancient castle, which was about five hundred years ago occupied by the Saltoun family. The parish occupies the north-eastern angle of land in this part of the county, and extends about three miles and a half each way, containing 8,867 acres. At one time the name of the parish was Philorth, and the possessions of Lord Saltoun here retain this appellation. The original name of the burgh was Faithlie, and in 1546 it was declared a free port and burgh of barony by royal charter, in favour of Sir Alexander Fraser, of Philorth. By a precept of sasine granted by King James VI. in 1592, the name was altered to Port de Fraser, and by a crown charter dated April 4th, 1601, the same monarch caused it to be a burgh of regality and the name changed to Fraserburgh, from the name of the proprietor or superior, Sir Alexander Fraser, of Philorth, to whom and his heirs these charters gave the superiority of the burgh and the right and authority of provost. The town is neatly built, forming a square, is well supplied with water, and the streets, which are tolerably spacious, are lighted with gas by a company. Near the centre are the Town's House and a Cross—the latter of modern date. A sheriff's small debt court is held monthly in the Dalrymple Hall. The burgh is governed under Lord Saltoun as superior, by a town council consisting of a baillie holding a commission from his lordship, a dean of guild, and thirteen councillors, of whom one is chosen as treasurer; there is also a procurator fiscal and town clerk. An election takes place annually in November, when the old magistrates and councillors nominate the new for his lordship's approval. The dean of guild has charge of the weights and measures, and the supervision of tenements and prevention of encroachment on the streets and public thoroughfares. The magistrates and council direct the municipal affairs of the burgh, the chief and most important part of which are the administration of the common good. George A. Morris, Esq., is Lord Saltoun's commissioner and factor. In 1872 the burgh adopted the General Police and Improvement (Scotland) Act, 1862, and under that Act there are twelve Commissioners, elected by occupiers of £4 rent, three of whom are bailies. The Police Board is quite distinct from the Town Council, and has no control, except for police purposes, over the town's property or its revenue. Under the Police Act of 1892, which has now become law, the Town Council and Police Commissioners will be amalgamated, thus putting an end to the antiquated election of the councillors by the superior.

There is an excellent harbour, which has been much improved during the last dozen years, under a Provisional Order of 1878, and a new harbour act obtained in 1878. The harbour (the annual revenue from which is £8,000 to £10,000) is managed by the superior of the burgh, the acting chief magistrate, the factor for the superior, five persons elected by the tenants, two by the shipowners, two by the police commissioners, three by the harbour ratepayers, and one by the town council. A breakwater (commenced in 1875, and upon which £72,000 has been expended) extending about 860 feet into the bay in a southerly direction, has been completed. Besides affording a berthage to a large number of ships and boats at low water as well as high water, it shelters an area of 12½ acres, where from 500 to 600 fishing boats can be comparatively safe at all states of the tide. A further sum of £70,000 has been expended in deepening the south and the north harbours, widening the piers, and other additions to existing works. The berthage has also been greatly enlarged, and now extends to about 9,250 feet, where fishing boats can safely lie and discharge fish, and of which 6,425 feet is available for shipping. With these improvements Fraserburgh now possesses one of the finest and most commodious harbours on the east coast of Scotland. During spring tides vessels drawing from 16 to 18 feet enter the harbour, and during neap tides the depth is from 13 to 15 feet. The herring fishery, which has been established here for upwards of half a century, has been so largely developed within recent years that Fraserburgh may now be put down as the foremost station in Scotland. The number of boats engaged in this fishery is about 800, and the annual value of herrings exported reaches from £200,000 to £300,000. Within the last few years the shipping entering the harbour has averaged from forty to fifty-five thousand tons. A pretty large trade is done in timber, imported from Norway and Sweden, the other chief imports being coals, salt, white fish, &c., while the principal exports are herrings, grain, empty barrels, potatoes, &c. Within the burgh has been erected, at a cost of £3,300, a hospital bearing the name of the donor, being called Thomas Walker's Hospital. The site was given by the Right Honourable Lord Saltoun, of Philorth. It is supported partly by an endowment of £1,000, and by assessments on Fraserburgh and the neighbouring parish of Rathen. Dalrymple Hall and Café is also a new erection, having cost in its entirety about £4,500. The origin of this, like the hospital, is indicated by its name, and is due to the credit of the late Captain John Dalrymple, who, anxious to do something for the good of his native town, presented to a body of his townsmen the site along with a sum of £1,700 as a nucleus for its erection. The style of architecture is a modification of the Scottish baronial. In addition to the café, dining rooms, &c., it has a news room, library, museum, school of art, recreation room, baths, &c., together with a public hall capable of holding 1,100 people, with necessary ante-rooms.

The places of worship are two churches of the Establishment, two Free churches, a Scotch Episcopal church, a United Presbyterian church, one for Congregationalists, and chapels each for the Baptists and the Evangelical Union. The Free church, which was erected in 1880, at a cost of £6,500, on the site of the old parish school, near the railway station, was built chiefly by subscriptions from the congregation. It is of granite, and highly ornamental both in the interior and exterior, and on the whole is one of the most handsome buildings of the kind in the north. A new Free Church congregation have acquired the old Episcopal church in Mid street, and adapted it under the name of the West Free Church. A handsome Episcopal church (Bishop Jolly Memorial), has recently been erected in Charlotte street. The building, which is dedicated to St. Peter, at present consists of chancel, nave and aisles, and was consecrated on August 31, 1892, by the Hon. and Right Rev. Arthur Gascoigne Douglas, D.D., Bishop of Aberdeen and Orkney. The educational requirements of the parish are supplied by several institutions in the town, and of these the most important is the new public schools, which were erected at a cost of £7,000, and opened on the 12th September, 1892, by the Right Hon. Lord Saltoun. The building is of large dimensions, and has an imposing appearance. At the north end of the schools a tower, in which are a clock and a bell, rises to a considerable height, adding greatly to the architectural features of the building and the importance of the burgh. The interior is fitted up with all the latest improvements for the comfort of the pupils, including a system of folding doors whereby large rooms are speedily sub-divided into several smaller ones, and complete isolation thereby obtained for each class with their teacher. Fraserburgh Academy, which is also a well appointed building, was built at a cost of £2,500, and endowed by James Park, Esq.; it was opened in 1870. There is also a school belonging to the Episcopalians, and an endowed school, which was instituted in 1863, by Miss Strachan, of Cortes, in memory of her brother, James Strachan, Esq., M.D., Inspector-General of Army Hospitals, Madras; it is managed by a body of trustees composed of the members of the Kirk Session and Lord Saltoun's commissioner. In the fishing village of BROADSEA, which is within the burgh, there is a school of considerable dimensions, exclusively for the accommodation of the village children; it is under the management of the Kirk Session. A Fishermen's Hall was also erected in the village in 1887, by public subscription, and is a neat and commodious building. The district of TECHARTY, which though part of Fraserburgh parish, is disjoined therefrom by the parish of Kagen, contains a school under the management of the School Board; it is also used as a preaching station in connection with the Established church. On the 1st May, 1895, the Fraserburgh extension of the Formative and Buehan railway was opened, and has greatly added to the interests of the town. There are two first-class hotels here—the Saltoun Arms Hotel and the Station Hotel, in either of which will be found every convenience. The market, chiefly for corn and cattle, is held on Tuesday. Population of the burgh in 1881, 6,583, and of the whole parish, 7,596; in 1891 the burgh numbered 7,466, and the parish 8,352.

FYVIE AND METHLICK,

WOODHEAD, MILLBEX, AND ROTHENORMAN.

FYVIE is an inland parish of 29,586 acres, on the high road from Aberdeen to Banff, 8 miles N.W. from old Meldrum, and 25 N.W. from Aberdeen, lying on both sides of the river Ythan, which, between Fyvie and Methlick, flows through a romantic wooded gorge called the Bines of Gight. Fyvie Castle, the seat of A. J. Forbes-Leith, Esq., stands in a delightful situation; it is among the first specimens of Gothic architecture, and has been repaired and greatly improved. The scenery around is highly pleasing, and a beautiful loch intersects the grounds. Near the church, on the banks of the river, are the ruins of a priory, founded along with the parish church, in honour of the Virgin Mary, by Fergus, Earl of Buchan, in 1179, and was given to the abbey of Arbroath. The places of worship in the parish are established and free churches—one each, and two Episcopal churches, respectively situated at Woodhead and MEIKLEFOLLA, and one mission church in connection with the Establishment. The Great North of Scotland railway has a station a mile from the village. Cattle markets are held at the railway station on the third Thursday in every month, and fairs on the third Thursday in February and July. Population of the parish in 1881, 3,313, and in 1891, 3,050.

METHLICK parish, about 7½ miles E.S.E. from Fyvie, the same distance S. from Old Meldrum, and 22 N.W. from Aberdeen, is bounded by Fyvie on the west, New Deer on the north, Savoch and Ellon on the east, and Tarras on the south; it extends nine miles in length, by upwards of four in breadth, and covers an area of 14,842 acres. The district is intersected throughout its extent, from the north-west to the south-east, by the river Ythan, on the banks of which there now appear some thriving and decorative plantations. The village is neat and rural, and close to it the river is crossed by an iron bridge. There is a church of the Establishment and also a free church in the village, the former erected in 1867, by the Earl of Aberdeen, at a cost of about £5,000. About two miles from the village is Haddo House, a seat of the Earl of Aberdeen. Fairs are held in the village on the first Thursday after the 11th of May, and the first Wednesday after the 18th of November. Arnage is the nearest railway station, six miles distant. Population of the parish in 1881, 2,162, and in 1891, 2,067.

MILLBEX, a small village formerly in the parish of Fyvie, is now a quoad sacra parish, and contains a church of the Establishment and a public school. Fyvie is the nearest railway station, six and a half miles distant. Population in 1891, 1,291.

ROTHENORMAN is a small village in the parish of Fyvie, about 3½ miles S.W. therefrom, and a station on the Great North of Scotland railway. Cattle markets are held here on the second Monday of every month. Population returned with the parish.

WOODHEAD is a small village in the parish of Fyvie, which is also the nearest railway station, two and a half miles distant.

HUNTLY,

WITH THE PARISHES AND VILLAGES OF CAIRNEY, FORGUE, GLASS, DRUMBLADE, GARTLY, YTHAN WELLS AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

HUNTLY, a burgh of barony and seat of presbyter, is a pleasing and modern town, the capital of that name; 123 mile N. of Edinburgh, 66 E. of Inverness, 38 N.W. of Aberdeen, 21 S.W. of Banff, and 18 S.E. of Forchabers. The parish is about 10 miles in length and 4 in breadth, formed by the annexation of the parishes of Dunbean and Kinnoir. Perhaps there is no part of the county in which agriculture has achieved more success than in this parish. A few years ago the general surface was anything but productive, but, through systematic culture and perseverance, it has been wonderfully enriched, and now, for production and quality, is inferior to none in the North of Scotland. The acreage of arable land is very considerable, and some of the eminences are clothed with fine plantations. The district is watered by the Bogie and the Deveron. St.
Mungo's hill, in the district of Kinnoir, has the appearance of a volcano, and on the summit there is an opening, which is generally filled with water, though in dry seasons part is obtained from it, strongly impregnated with sulphur; and pieces of lava, have, it is said, been found round it. Limestone, some of which approaches to the nature of marble, and takes a very high polish, is obtained in the parish.

The town, which is well lighted with gas by a joint-stock company, is in a dry and salubrious situation, on the point of land formed by the confluence of the Bogie with the Deveron, the stream of each being crossed by a bridge. This place is neatly built, having two principal streets crossing each other at right angles, and forming a spacious square for the market place, the chief ornament, in which is the Huntly Brander Public Library, erected in 1885. This fine building is in the perpendicular Gothic style of architecture of the sixteenth century, and was presented to the town by William Brander, Esq., of London, as part of a gift of £6,500 for educational purposes to his native town. The library consists of about 7,000 volumes of useful literature. A weekly newspaper, the Huntly Express, is published in the town on Saturday. Stewart's Hall, in Gordon street, burnt down in 1886, and rebuilt in 1887, is an imposing structure, surmounted with a tower containing a clock; the large hall, used for public meetings, &c., has sitting accommodation for 650 people. The Duke of Richmond, who is superior, appoints a baron baillie. Justice of peace courts are held at occasions require, in the above mentioned hall, and a sheriff's small debt court quarterly, the jurisdiction of the latter extending over twelve parishes. The principal hotel is the Gordon Arms, where tourists and visitors will find every accommodation. Huntly is a station on the Great North of Scotland railway. A constant supply of manures, coals, &c., and facility for the transmission of agricultural produce, are amongst the advantages which this line affords the town and neighbourhood. The town was once famed for the weaving of fine linen, introduced by an Irish manufacturer in the year 1768, and the quantity annually manufactured used to amount to £30,000 or £40,000, but since the beginning of this century this branch of industry has gradually decreased. It is now a place of no particular manufacture, and the trade is merely local and domestic.

There are besides the parish and Free churches, several other places of worship in Huntly and its vicinages for the various religious denominations, of which a list with their officiating ministers is appended; among them is a handsome Roman Catholic chapel. Several public and charitable educational establishments are well sustained, and conducted with ability. The Gordon schools, opened in 1841, were founded by her late Grace of that title, in 1839, and are situated near to the Lodge, formerly the residence of that lady. The school premises, which were in 1838 enlarged to accommodate 1,000 children, are now fitted with all modern appliances and apparatus, under a new scheme, propounded by the Educational Endowment Commissioners of Scotland, providing accommodation for a general public school and a senior department, the nucleus of which is formed of the Brander Foundations, and those whose education is paid for from the funds of the newly reformed Gordon Trust. A home for the aged, founded and endowed by the late Alexander Scott, Esq., of Craibstone House, affords an asylum for the aged destitute of both sexes. A cottage hospital was erected by subscription in 1887-8 as a memorial of Her Majesty's Jubilee. It contains sixteen beds, fever ward, &c., and is maintained by five surrounding parishes. Markets for cattle are held on the first and third Wednesdays of every month. A sheep fair is likewise held on the Thursday before the second Tuesday in August (o.s.). Fleeing markets for hiring servants are held on the Thursday before the 25th of May, the second Thursday in July, and the Thursday before the 2nd November. Population of parish in 1881, 4,888, and in 1891, 4,583, of which the town contained 3,760.

CAIRNEY is a tolerably extensive parish, contiguous to that of Huntly, lying chiefly in the county of Banff. The land for the most part is mountainous, but much of it is, notwithstanding, in a high state of cultivation, and bears prolific crops. Population of the parish in 1881, 1,505, and in 1891, 1,473.

FORGUE is a parish 9 miles in length, and its greatest breadth about 6; its situation is 4 miles N.E. of Huntly, and it is intersected by two rivulets—the Fendraght and the Forgue. The soil in the lower parts produces good crops, but towards the south the ground is mostly covered with heath. On several of the estates much has been done in planting and improving the wastes. The celebrated Glendronach distillery is situated in this parish. The places of worship are Established, Free, and Episcopal churches, the latter consecrated in 1858 and dedicated to St. Margaret; there are also several public schools. YTHAN WELLS is a quoad sacra parish containing a church of the Establishment and public schools. Acreage, 17,354. Population in 1881, 2,422.

The parish of GLASS is likewise adjacent to that of Huntly on the west, and is also in both counties, lying on either side of the river Deveron. Here is Blairmore House, the seat of Alexander Geddes, Esq., a mansion in the castellated style. Population of parish in 1881, 654.

DRUMBLADE parish extends from 5 to 6 miles in length and from 4 to 5 in breadth. There are three tumuli, near one of which are the remains of an encampment of King Robert Bruce, after he had defeated Comyn, Earl of Buchan, near the burgh of Inverurie. The soil is generally fertile, and the surface greatly diversified. There are Established and Free churches and a public school. Population of the parish in 1881, 943, and in 1891, 956.

The parish of GARTLY, partly in Aberdeenshire and partly in Banffshire, is of an irregular oval figure, extending about 12 miles in length by 6 in breadth. The Great North of Scotland railway has a station at the southern extremity of the parish. The places of worship are Established and Free churches, and there are also public schools, one of which is a modern erection, occupying a central position. The Duke of Richmond is sole proprietor of this extensive tract. An excellent quarry of blue slate is in the parish, and the hills afford peat in abundance. Improvements in agriculture have been actively progressing for some years past. Population of parish in 1881, 889, and in 1891, 928.

INSCH,

CHAPEL OF GARIOCH, CULSALMOND, DAVIOT, LESLIE, MEIKLE WARTLE, OYNE, PITCAPLE, PREMNAV, RAYNE, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

INSCH is a burgh of barony in the Upper Garioch district, 27 miles N.W. from Aberdeen and 13 S.E. from Huntly, and is a station on the Great North of Scotland railway. The parish extends 5 miles in length, by 3 in breadth, and is bounded by Culsalmund on the east, Kinnethmont on the west, and separated by the water of Urie from Drumblae and Forgue. The village, which is lighted with gas, has two banking establishments and a savings bank, and there are also a church of the Establishment, a Free Church, an Episcopal Church, a Congregational Chapel, and a public school. On the top of the hill of Dun-Id-Deer are the ruins of an old castle. In the most elevated part of the hill of Foudland, within this parish, are quarries of blue slate. There is good hotel and posting house at the railway station. Markets are held on the fourth Monday of every month, and feeling markets in May and November. BAINSHOLE is an outlying part of the parish, 6 miles N. from Insch. Acreage, 8,370. Population in 1881, 1,536, and in 1891, 1,884, of which number the village contained 578.

CHAPEL OF GARIOCH is an extensive parish lying in the centre of the county, 20 miles N.W. from Aberdeen, 18 S.E. from Huntly, and 5 N.W. from Inverurie. It is 13 miles in length, and from 3 to 4 in breadth, embracing an area of 13,059 acres, the river Don dividing it on the south from Kemnay. The castle of Balquhain, now in ruins, in this parish, is famed for an echo. There is also a very singular sculptured stone called "the Maiden Stone." The parish church is situated in the small village of its name, and at the southern extremity of the parish is the chapel of Blairdaff. The other places of worship are a Free Church, near Pitcaple, and a Roman Catholic church, at Fetternear; there are also three public schools in the parish. In this district was fought the battle of Harlaw, in 1411, between Alexander, Earl of Mar, and Donald, Lord of the Isles. Buchanan relates that the number of nobility who fell in this obstinately-contested action was greater than had fallen in any foreign engagement for many years before. Pitcaple is the nearest railway station, 1 mile distant. Population in 1881, 1,228, and in 1891, 1,690.

CULSALMOND parish is distant from Huntly 10 miles S.E. and from Aberdeen 28 N.W. Newton House, the seat of Alexander M. Gordon, Esq., is the principal residence in this parish, which extends about 3 miles both in breadth and length. The parish church occupies an elevated site near the village of COLPY. The other places of worship are Free and Episcopal churches; there are also public schools. An annual fair, chiefly for horses, is held at ST. SAIRS on Wednesday after last Tuesday in June (old style). Insch is the nearest railway station, 3½ miles distant. Acreage, 6,994. Population in 1881, 826, and in 1891, 791.

DAVIOT, a parish in the district of Garioch, 21 miles N.W. from Aberdeen, and 5 N.W. from Inverurie, and is about 5 miles in length by 4 in breadth; the surface is level, and has a south-eastern exposure. It has two druidical temples, one of which forms part of the church-yard. Here is a branch of the Aberdeen Royal Lunatic Asylum. The small village of DAVIOT contains a church of the Establishment and a public school. Pitcaple is the nearest railway station, 8 miles distant. Acreage, 4,454. Population in 1881, 515, and in 1891, 520.

LESLIE, a parish in the district of Garioch, is watered by the small river Gadie, a stream celebrated by Arthur Johnston in his elegant Latin poems, and in a familiar Scotch song. Here is the fine old ruin of Leslie Castle. Several remains of druidical temples, cairns, and an ancient encampment are pointed out. The parish church and a public school are seated near the river side. DUNCANSTONE is a detached part of parish, lying about 4 miles from Insch. There is a Congregational chapel here. Insch is the nearest railway station, distant 3 miles from Leslie. Acreage, 4,444. Population in 1881, 523, and in 1891, 461.

OYNE, a parish likewise in Garioch district, is of an irregular figure, stretching about 6 miles in length, by from 2 to 3 in breadth; the high hill of Benachie lying within it. There is a station on the Great North of Scotland line here. Aberdeen is distant about 25 miles S.E., and Huntly 14 N.W. Petmathen House, the residence of Major Thomas Leith, is within a short distance of the railway station, and near to it is West Hall, the seat of Mrs. Disney Leith. Here are Established and Free churches, and there is also a public school. In this parish are the ruins of an old castle, believed to have belonged to the family of Leith. A detached part of the parish (Tillyfour), lies along the river Don. Here is Tillyfour Castle, the seat of Francis Robert Gregson, Esq. J.P. Acreage, 10,131. Population in 1881, 962, and in 1891, 883.

PREMNAV parish is 25 miles N.W. from Aberdeen, and extends 4 miles in length, by from one to two in breadth. It is bounded by Insch on the north, Oyne on the east, Tough and Keig on the south, and lies on the north side of the hill of Benachie. The castle of Lickliehead is in this parish. The places of worship are the Established and Free churches, and there is also a public school. AUCHLEVEN is a small village in this parish. ROTHNEY village, which now forms part of Insch, and where the railway station for that place is situated, is also in this parish. Insch is the nearest station for Auchleven, 2½ miles distant. Acreage, 5,431. Population in 1881, 930, and in 1891, 926.

RAYNE parish lies on the left bank of the Urie, betwixt Culsalmund on the north-west and Daviot and the Chapel of Garioch on the south-east. It extends about 4½ miles from the Urie, by a breadth of from 2 to 4 miles, and covers an area of 7,885 acres. Except a small eminence, covered with heath, on the north side of the parish, the surface is flat, with a few rising spots on the banks of the Urie. The district on the whole has a pleasing appearance, and is ornamented by plantations. In the central part of the parish stands the village of Rayne, and on the public road along the Urie is the village of OLD RAYNE, distant 25 miles N.W. from Aberdeen and 9 N.W. from Inverurie; it is in Rayne that the parish church is situated. There are two public schools in the parish. An annual fair is held on the second Wednesday in August. The small village of MEIKLE WARTLE (or Warthill), is about 2½ miles E. from the Kirk of Rayne, and half a mile distant from Wartle railway station. Oyne is the nearest station for Old Rayne, 2 miles distant. Population in 1881, 1,284, and in 1891, 1,225.

PITCAPLE is a small village in the parish of Chapel of Garioch, and a station on the Great North of Scotland line. Pitcaple Castle is the seat of Col. Henry Lumsden, D.L., J.P. Near it is the house of Logie Elphinstone, the seat of Sir Graeme D. H. Elphinstone, Bart.

INVERURIE AND KINTORE,

KEITH HALL, KINMUICK, KINKELL, PORT ELPHINSTONE, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

INVERURIE is a parish of 4,946 acres, lying at the termination of the peninsula between the river Urie on the north and the Don on the south. The town, which is a royal burgh, is 16 miles N.W. of Aberdeen, 22 S.W. of Huntly, and 5 W. by S. of Old Meldrum; pleasantly situated on the neck of land formed by the confluence of the streams before mentioned. Tradition reports that Inverurie was erected into a royal burgh by King Robert Bruce on the occasion of a signal victory obtained by him in the neighbourhood over Comyn, Earl of Buchan, the King of England's general in Scotland. The oldest charter is a novodamus by Queen Mary, the preamble of which states that Inverurie had been a royal burgh from time immemorial, but that the charter of its erection had been lost during the civil wars. The town is now governed by a provost, three bailies, a treasurer, and four councillors; and is included in the parliamentary division of the Elgin Burghs. A Town Hall was erected here in 1862; it is a handsome structure of light-grey granite, containing public hall, market hall, council chamber, committee room, public library and museum, &c.; the cost was nearly £3,000. Inverurie confers the title of baron on the Earl of Kintore, who has a fine mansion, Keith Hall, a little to the east of the town. By means of the influence and under the patronage of this noble family, a bridge was erected in 1791 over the Don, at an expense of £2,000, and subsequently another was carried over the Urie. The Bass of Inverurie, a conical mount, 50 or 60 feet high, overhangs the isolated churchyard situated near it. The Bass appears to have been the site of the chief castle of the Earls of Garioch, as early as about the year 1200. The field in which it stands is still called the Castle yards of Inverurie. The Town and County, the North of Scotland, and the Union Banking Companies have each a branch establishment here, and there is also a Savings Bank. Inverurie has become a favourite resort during the summer months, the Don and the Urie affording ample sport to the angler. There is a first-class hotel here, the Kintore Arms. The opening of the Great North of Scotland railway from Aberdeen to Inverness, which has a station here, and a branch line to Old Meldrum, gave a new stimulus to industry, and the town, which is well lighted with gas, and amply supplied with good water brought from the lands of Keith Hall, has a thriving appearance. At the village of PORT ELPHINSTONE, about a mile from Inverurie, are established meal and paper mills and a brewery; here also have been erected several prettily-situated residences. The places of worship in the town are Established and Free churches, Episcopalian, Independent, Methodist, and Roman Catholic chapels. There are two public Schools in the town. A school built by Mr. William Clark is also well attended. Population of the parish in 1831, 3,038, and in 1891, 2,954; of this number the burgh contained 2,625.

KINTORE is likewise a royal burgh, and gives its name to the parish, which comprises 9,092 acres. The town, which is small, is 12½ miles N.W. from Aberdeen, and between 3 and 4 S.E. from Inverurie, situated on the public road near the Don. It is a station on the Great North of Scotland railway, which is also the junction for Alfred. The burgh is governed by a provost, two bailies, a dean of guild, and a treasurer, assisted by a council of eight other burgesses; and is in the same parliamentary division as Inverurie. In this parish are numerous cairns and tumuli, which are said to point out the position where Robert Bruce overtook and destroyed the army of Edward I. after the defeat of Comyn, Earl of Buchan, near Inverurie; and within the parish are the ruins of Hall Forest Castle, formerly a hunting seat of King Robert, now the property of the Earl of Kintore, to whom three-fourths of the parish belongs. Two churches, respectively Established and Free, with two Board schools and a Session school, are in the parish. The North of Scotland Bank, Limited, have here a branch establishment. The markets formerly held here have been discontinued. PORT ELPHINSTONE, which is noticed under the head of Inverurie, is in this parish. Population of the parish in 1881, 2,327, and in 1891, 2,409; 686 of this number belonging to the town.

KEITH HALL and KINKELL form a united parish of 7,601 acres, in the district of Garioch, lying on the left banks of the Urie and Don, which rivers unite opposite its centre. It is recorded that many who fell in the battle of Harlaw were buried at Kinkell, which at that period was the principal church in this part of the county. The Earl of Kintore has a seat in this parish. At KINMUICK, in this parish, the Society of Friends established themselves about the year 1662. The present meeting house was probably built about 1681, and formerly contained accommodation for a school and residence for the master. It has since been improved, and contains a free library with many ancient and modern works, illustrative of the history and doctrines of the Society. Their burial ground is near it, on the opposite side of the road. Inverurie is the nearest railway station, about three miles distant. Population in 1881, 880, and in 1891, 822.

MONYMUSK,

CLUNY, KEMNAY, FETTERNEAR, TILLYFOURIE, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

MONYMUSK parish is about 7 miles long and from 4 to 5 broad, with an area of 10,728 acres, and is distant 8 miles s.w. from Inverurie. Monymusk House, the seat of Sir Arthur Grant, Bart., is situated on the right bank of the Don, environed by fine plantations. The village is built in the form of a square, with the parish church in the centre, a part of which is believed to have been erected about the time of Malcolm Canmore. There was formerly an ancient priory beside it. The estate is remarkable for its fine timber, some larch and fir trees near the river being of unusual size. The Alford branch of the Great North of Scotland line has a station about half a mile from the village. TILLYFOURIE, where are extensive granite quarries, is also a station on this line. Population in 1881, 1,155, and in 1891, 1,025.

CLUNY parish is in the district of Kincardine-O'Neil, situated between the Dee and the Don waters, distant 18 miles w. from Aberdeen and 8 s.s.w. from Inverurie. In length it is about 10 miles, and in breadth from 2 to 3 miles. Four-fifths of the parish is under cultivation. There are three druidical remains and several cairns in this district, besides two large castles—Castle Fraser, said to have been erected in the beginning of the 15th century, and Cluny Castle, the chief part of which is a handsome modern erection. Linton House is also in this parish. There are ruins of a large castle at Tillycairn. Acreage 9,741. Population in 1881, 1,238, and in 1891, 1,217.

KEMNAY parish is 4½ miles in length, and 3 in breadth. The village is distant 15 miles N.W. from Aberdeen, and 5 s.w. from Inverurie, and is a station on the Alford branch of the Great North of Scotland railway. The house of Kemnay is delightfully situated, and at a short distance from it, on the other side of the river Don, is the house of Fetternear, the seat of the Leslies of Balquhain. The Kemnay quarries are worked for a beautiful blue granite, suitable both for building and polishing purposes. In the village are a church of the Establishment, a Free church, and a public school. Acreage, 5,110. Population in 1881, 1,636, and in 1891, 1,799.

NEW AND OLD DEER,

AUCHNAGATT, BRUCKLAY, FETTERANGUS, LONGSIDE, MINTLAW, MAUD, STEWARTFIELD AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

NEW DEER parish lies almost in the centre of Buchan district, and extends fourteen miles from north to south, and about seven in breadth. The village which is well built, is situated about 30 miles N. from Aberdeen. The places of worship in the parish are the parish church, a Free church, and a Congregational chapel in the village of NEW DEER, and one each of the Establishment at NEW MAUD and SAVOCH. There are also Presbyterian churches at WHITEHILL and ARTANFORD. The educational requirements of the parish are well supplied by public schools. About two miles from the church stands an old castle, called Federate, which appears to have been a place of considerable strength. There are a few remains of druidical temples, and several tumuli; these having been opened were found to contain urns, enclosed in stone coffins. A market is held on Tuesday, and fairs on the third Wednesday in January, Wednesday after the 12th of April, Thursday before 26th, or 26th if Thursday, of May, Wednesday after 19th of June, second Tuesday in August, Wednesday after 19th of October, and Thursday before 22nd, or 22nd if Thursday, of November. Acreage 26,750. Population of the entire parish in 1881, 4,876, and in 1891, 3,585.

OLD DEER parish is ten miles in length, by a mean breadth of between five and six, and comprises 27,363 acres. Like New Deer, it lies in the district of Buchan, and contiguous to the former parish. The village is situated some five or six miles distant, 10½ W. from Peterhead, and 30 N. from Aberdeen by the Mintlaw road, and has places of worship in connection with the Established and Episcopalian churches. In the parish are eight public schools. A branch of the river Ugie intersects the parish about its centre, whilst another branch enters it for a short course on the north; upon these streams are several mills. The Abbey of Dee, which stands about a mile from the village, was built in the beginning of the 13th century, by William Comyn, the Earl of Buchan; it is mostly in ruins, but there is still enough remaining to show what it originally was. There were at one time no less than twelve druidical temples, of which four, tolerably entire, are yet remaining. The Druid's temple at BIFFER is the most conspicuous, and is an object of great attraction to the antiquarian and traveller. The pleasure grounds and woods of Pitfour, the seat of Colonel George A. Ferguson, J.P., will at once strike the stranger with admiration. Near the village of Old Deer is a cemetery, which was opened in 1875. A fair is held at Aiky Brac on the first Wednesday after the 19th of July, and at Old Deer on the first Wednesday after the 19th of December. ARDALIE is a hamlet in this parish. The population of the whole parish in 1881 was 5,104, and in 1891, 3,881.

LONGSIDE, also a parish in Buchan, contains the village of its name, which latter is about 30 miles N. of Aberdeen, 6 W. of Peterhead, and 4 E. from Old Deer. A handsome church was opened here on 7th of August, 1836; an Episcopalian church, a Free church, and public schools are also in the village. Cattle markets are held at Longside on the second Thursday after the second Tuesday in every month. Feeding fairs are held on the second Thursday in May and the second Tuesday in November. Acreage of the parish, 16,896. Population in 1881, 3,222, and in 1891, 3,018.

AUCHNAGATT is a village in the parish of New Deer, at which place there is a railway station.

BRUCKLAY is a village in the parish of New Deer. Brucklay Castle, built in the year 1540, the seat of Mrs. Christina Dingwall Fordyce, is about two miles from the village. The situation of the castle is most romantic, and the scenery delightful; the lawns are tastefully laid out, and the park is beautified and encircled by the waters of the Ugie. Many parts of the castle have been rebuilt, adding greatly to its beauty. There is a railway station here.

FETTERANGUS is a village in the parish of Old Deer. Here are Established and United Presbyterian churches and a female school. Mintlaw is the nearest railway station, about 5 miles distant.

MAUD, a village in the parish of New Deer, contains an Established church, a public school, and a railway station. Population in 1891, 1,100.

MINTLAW is a village in the parish of Longside, at which place there are a railway station and a public school. Population in 1891, 435.

STEWARTFIELD is a village in the parish of Old Deer, and possesses Free and United Presbyterian churches, an Independent chapel, and a public school. The nearest railway station is at Mintlaw, 4 miles distant.

NEWHILLS,

WITH AUCHMILL, DYCE, AND KINELLAR.

NEWHILLS parish is of an irregular hexagonal form, six miles and a half in diameter, distant from Aberdeen 5 miles N.W., the river Don forming its boundary on the north-east. The general appearance of the country is hilly, and towards the west becomes mountainous.

AUCHMILL is a village in the above parish, distant from Aberdeen 4 miles. Here are the extensive paper mills of Messrs. Alexander Pirie & Sons, Limited, and Messrs. Charles Davidson & Sons, Limited. STONEYWOOD and BUXBURN are also small villages adjoining, at each of which are stations on the Great North of Scotland Railway. In the parish are also large granite quarries. The places of worship are the parish church, a Free church, and one for Episcopalians, and there are also public schools. The parish has an area of 10,282 acres, and in 1881 contained a population of 5,480, and in 1891, 5,528.

DYCE parish is of considerable extent, lying on the south bank of the Don, which river separates it from Frinray, and Newhills parish divides it from Old Aberdeen. The Tyre-begar ridge runs through the district from south to north, one of the loftiest hills being surmounted by a druidical temple. The parish kirk is seven and a half miles from Aberdeen, and four from New Machar. There is also a Free church and good school accommodation within the parish. The Great North of Scotland Railway Company have a station at the village of Dyce. Acreage of the parish, 5,237; population in 1881, 1,162, and in 1891, 1,342.

KINELLAR is a small parish on the south side of the Don, on the Inverness road, distant from Aberdeen about 8½ miles N.W. It comprises an irregular assemblage of hills of considerable elevation, the summits of which are covered with small plantations of firs. There are a church of the Establishment, a Free church, and two public schools in the parish, which also contains the village of BLACKBURN, and at KINALDIE is a station on the Great North of Scotland railway. The acreage of the parish is 4,217, and its population in 1881 was 580, the figures for 1891 being exactly the same.

NEW MACHAR,

BELHELVE, FINTRAY AND UDNY.

NEW MACHAR is a parish in the district of Buchan, lying chiefly in Aberdeenshire, but partly in the county of Banff; it extends nine miles in length, by two and a half in breadth, and has an area of 9,002 acres. The parish kirk is situated in the village of SUMMERHILL, 10 miles N.W. from Aberdeen, where there is also a Free church and a public school. The New Machar station of the Great North of Scotland railway is just out of the village. The country is generally rather flat, and the soil is mostly arable, with several patches of wet mossy land; while in the southern quarter are some fine plantations. There is a small lake near the boundary of Old Machar, called Bishop's Loch, in which is an island, whereon stand the ruins of a castle once belonging to the Bishops of Aberdeen. Population in 1881, 1,505, and in 1891, 1,397.

FINTRAY parish is five miles in length, by from three to four in breadth. On the banks of the Don, the land is fertile and susceptible of profitable cultivation, but other parts are hilly. An abbey formerly existed in this parish. The Rev. J. Leslie, a late minister, possessed a stone inscribed with the date 1386, supposed to have formed a fraction of the building, and a silver cup, dated 1633, which tradition records to have been manufactured from the silver of the image of St. Meddin, the tutelary saint of the parish. The kirk is about 10½ miles N.W. from Aberdeen. There is a station on the Great North of Scotland line of Kinallidie, about one mile from the village of Hutton. Acreage, 7,319. Population in 1881, 1,032, and in 1891, 999.

UDNY parish extends about five miles in length and breadth, and contains a neat and pleasantly situated village, 14 miles N. of Aberdeen, and 4 N. from New Machar. The soil of the parish is for the most part fertile, and the land enclosed and well cultivated. There is a church of the Establishment, a Free Church, and two public schools in the parish, and a station near the village on the Great North of Scotland railway. Fairs are held at Udney station the last Thursday in every month. Acreage, 11,543. Population in 1881, 1,638, and in 1891, 1,712.

BELHELVE is a coast parish in the district of Formartine, 8 miles N. from Aberdeen. The aspect of the country is very unfavourable, especially at a distance from the sea coast, where it exhibits nothing but heath and stones; towards the sea, however, there is some arable land. The places of worship are the parish church and one for United Presbyterians. The nearest railway station is New Machar, 4 miles distant. Acreage, 12,184. Population in 1881, 1,850, and in 1891, 1,613.

OLD MELDRUM,

AND THE PARISHES OF BOURTIE AND TARVES.

OLD MELDRUM is a parish, a burgh of barony, and a market town—the latter pleasantly situated on the road from Aberdeen to Banff, 18 miles N.W. from the former, 27 S.E. from the latter, and 5 N.E. from Inverurie. The Great North of Scotland railway has a branch line here from Inverurie. The streets and dwellings are irregularly laid out, but of late have been much improved. The principal public buildings are the Town Hall, which has a neat tower, with an illuminated clock, and the public school. The North of Scotland Bank, Limited, and the Town and County Bank, Limited, have each a branch establishment in the town. Meldrum was constituted a burgh of barony in the year 1672, under the jurisdiction of two bailies; B. C. Urquhart, Esq., is superior of the burgh. The seat of this gentleman (Meldrum House) is romantically situated, and from its antique style of architecture, has a striking effect; and being surrounded with fine scenery, presents the characteristics of a delightful residence. The principal branches of business are composed in an extensive distillery and a brewery. The district is partly arable and partly pastoral; the soil of the southern portion is fertile, but that of the northern shallow and less fruitful. The places of worship are the Established, Free, United Presbyterian, and Episcopal churches. The market is held every third Tuesday. Acreage, 8,102. Population in 1881, 2,254, and in 1891, 2,019, of which number 1,321 were returned for the town.

BOURTIE, a parish four miles in length and two in breadth, and covering 5,698 acres, is generally cultivated; it lies between Meldrum and Inverurie. About the middle of the parish there are two ranges of hills—the greater part clothed with refreshing verdure. The remains of ancient fortifications are visible throughout this district.

There is a church of the Establishment and a public school within the parish. Old Meldrum is the nearest railway station, about two miles distant. Population in 1881, 463.

The parish of TARVES lies between Ellen and Old Meldrum, the village being $4\frac{1}{2}$ miles N.E. distant from the latter place. The parish is bounded by Methlick on the north and Old Meldrum on the west, and is watered in its eastern quarter by the river Ythan; its length is about nine miles and its breadth six, and embraces an area of 16,803 acres. The general outline of the parish is a flat surface, interspersed with some hills of inferior altitude. The soil is diversified in its composition, but is for the most part fertile, and there are some fine plantations on the verge of the river. In the village is the parish church and public school. BARTHOLOMEW CHAPEL and CRAIGDAM are hamlets in this parish, at the former of which is a church of the Establishment and a public school, and at the latter a United Presbyterian church and a public school. The nearest railway stations are Old Meldrum, 5 miles, and Udny, 6 miles distant. Population in 1881, 2,558, and in 1891, 2,197.

PETERHEAD,

WITH THE VILLAGES OF BODDAM, BUCHANHAVEN, BURNHAVEN, INVERNETTIE, INVERUGIE, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS,

PETERHEAD is a considerable sea-port town, burgh of barony, and parish, within the district of Buchan, 141 miles N. by W. of Edinburgh, 34 S.E. of Banff, 32 N.E. of Aberdeen, 18 S.S.E. of Fraserburgh, and 524 miles from London. It is situated upon a peninsula (the most easterly point of Scotland), about a mile south of the mouth of the river Ugie, the isthmus between the peninsula and the mainland being only eight hundred yards wide. The town is built in the form of a cross, and is divided into four districts called the Tirktown, Ronheads, Keith Inch, and Peterhead Proper. The houses, which are built of granite (so abundant in various parts of the country), are all of them neat, and many of them commodious and elegant. The town is gas-lighted, and the inhabitants are plentifully supplied with excellent spring water. In years gone by the wells of Peterhead were much frequented; the waters are chalybeate and are abundant in the town and neighbourhood. Fossil shells in great quantities, and of various kinds, are found in the neighbourhood, twenty or thirty feet above the level of the sea, and these of kinds not to be met with in an original state; many curious pebbles also may be picked up on the shore. Numerous elegant buildings have within recent years been erected in the centre of the town. The Court House, a handsome building of granite, is in Queen street, in which the sheriff's court is held on the three first Fridays in the month. A public building which claims particular attention is the Town House, at the head of the principal street. It is an elegant edifice, 60 feet long and 49 feet wide, with a spire 129 feet high, and a fine illuminated clock. The town hall, one of the apartments, is a spacious room. The Music Hall buildings, a large and beautiful pile, comprising upper and lower halls, small halls and convenient ante-rooms, &c., with fine shops on the ground floor, and the new lines of houses in Chapel street and Queen street, add much to the attraction and importance of the town. Peterhead was founded and erected into a burgh of barony by George, Earl Marischal, in the year 1593; but in 1715 it was forfeited by this family, in consequence of their adherence to the unfortunate house of Stuart, and purchased, with the neighbouring lands, by the York Building Company in 1726, but that concern being dissolved, it was bought by the trustees or governors of the Merchant Maiden Hospital, Edinburgh, for £3,000, who are still the superiors. In front of the town hall and facing the main street, has been erected a pedestal of granite, on which has been placed a magnificent statue in bronze of Field-Marshal James Francis Edward Keith, born at Inverurie, in 1696, which statue was presented, by request, to the borough of Peterhead, by King William I. of Prussia, in 1868. The pedestal bears the following inscription:—"Field-Marshal Keith, born at Inverurie, 1696; killed at the battle of Hochkirchen, 14 October, 1758. The gift of William I. King of Prussia, to the town of Peterhead. August, 1868. Probus viri, fortis obit."

Peterhead is governed by a provost and magistrates and town council. The nomination of the magistrates was, by charter, vested in the superiors of the town and the magistrates and councillors, the latter of whom were formerly elected by a majority of the feuars, but since the elective franchise was conferred upon the burgh, the magistrates and councillors are elected by the householders therein. The town now enjoys the privileges of a parliamentary burgh, and in conjunction with Kintore, Elgin, Cullen, Banff and Inverurie, returns one member for Parliament, the present representative being Alexander Asher, Esq. Upon the county of Aberdeen being divided into an Eastern and Western Division, and returning two members to Parliament, Peterhead was created the returning burgh for the eastern division, and is known as the capital of Buchan, or East Aberdeenshire.

For a long series of years the harbours of Peterhead have been held to be of great importance. So early as 1661, in the first Parliament of King Charles II. an act was passed "for a contribution for repairing the harbours of Peterhead." In 1705 an act of the Scottish Privy Council was obtained for a voluntary contribution within all the parish churches of the three Lothians and best of the Forth, for building and repairing these harbours; and in 1729, and again in 1739, the convention of royal burghs authorised a voluntary contribution throughout all the royal burghs in Scotland for the same purpose. In 1807, and again in 1827, acts of Parliament were obtained for their further improvements. In recent years very large sums have been expended on the harbours, and when the contemplated works are finished, Peterhead will possess one of the finest and safest harbours to be found along the whole of the east coast of Scotland. The harbours are managed by a rotary board of trustees, a certain number of whom are elected annually from among the proprietors of land and heritages in the burgh, the ship owners, and shore due ratepayers. The revenue can be applied only to the maintenance of the harbours, the payment of the interest of the debt, and the liquidation of the principal; no individual or body of persons have any pecuniary interest in them. In 1884 Peterhead was selected as the site of a national harbour of refuge for the Scotch coast, to be constructed by convict labour, and a large convict prison has since been erected, to which all Scotch convicts are now drafted. The Harbour of Refuge Works are also being prosecuted on an extensive scale and employ a large amount of free labour. Although a start has not yet been made with the breakwater up to the present (1892) year, quarrying operations, laying of lines, and other preliminary work is being rapidly proceeded with. At present Peterhead possesses the grand advantage of north and south harbours, respectively of eleven and seven acres in extent, communicating by means of a canal or channel, over which is an elegant and permanent cast-iron swing bridge, upon the construction of which upwards of £3,000 was expended. In the north harbour there are two graving or dry docks, and at the entrance to both harbours are good lighthouses. Adjacent to the north harbour is also the recently built boat harbour of Port Henry. The South Bay, which is the site of the projected harbour of refuge, has good anchorage. The revenue of the harbours in 1800 was only £100, while in 1849 it amounted to £4,000; in 1853, to £4,391 19s. 7d.; in 1875, upwards of £8,000; in 1881 the income was over £10,000; and in 1884, upwards of £11,000; since then, however, owing to the depression in the local fisheries, it has to some extent declined. In no object is this community more deeply interested than in the whale and sea fisheries, many having their capital largely invested, and others their friends and relatives engaged in this important but hazardous branch of industry. More than eighty years have now elapsed since the first vessel sailed from Peterhead for the icy regions; and while many other ports have been declining, and some have given up the trade altogether, Peterhead has still continued it, and holds a high position among the British ports in the whale fishery. In the year 1788 one vessel was sent out, and up to 1803 there was no increase. From 1804 to 1814 the number varied from two to eight, and to 1830 from ten to sixteen; but in 1843 it had decreased to nine. After that date the number again increased, but within the last twenty years it has considerably declined, and at present owing to the exhaustion of the Arctic fishing grounds, the industry is threatened with extinction. The herring fishery, which was commenced here in 1818 by a joint stock company, has become important, Peterhead having now attained the first rank in this branch of maritime industry. Independent of the fishing and shipping trades, the town enjoys a good local trade. There are also two extensive and prosperous granite polishing establishments, employing upwards of 100 men, and Peterhead granite has attained considerable popularity throughout the world. Between the years 1817 and 1823 inclusive, 35,112 tons of this stone were shipped at Peterhead, chiefly in large blocks, for the docks at London; but since that period its exportation has considerably decreased. The quarries are largely worked by Aberdeen polishing firms. The Formartine and Buchan section of the Great North of Scotland Railway, opened in 1862, connected Peterhead with Fraserburgh and Aberdeen.

The Established church, situated at the conjunction of the south and west roads, combines elegance with convenience, and has a fine spire. There are also three quoad-sacra chapels in Queen street, Boddam, and at Blackbills. The Episcopal church is a handsome modern edifice, in the design of which the architect has displayed considerable taste. The other places of worship include two for the Free Church, a chapel erected in 1870 for Independents, a United Presbyterian church, a chapel for Methodists, a Baptist meeting house, and a chapel for Roman Catholics; the last named is one of the best specimens of architecture in the town. The governors of the Merchant Maiden Hospital, of Edinburgh, proprietors of the estate at Peterhead, have laid out and enclosed a large space of suitable ground at Peterhead as a public cemetery.

Amongst the literary institutions of the town may be mentioned, as the principal, a Reading Society, established in 1808, and a Mechanics' Institution, founded in 1836. The library belonging to the Reading Society numbers upwards of five thousand volumes and the library of the Mechanics' Institute about one thousand. There is also a solicitors' library. A very valuable museum, collected by the late Adam Arbuthnot, Esq., by whom it was bequeathed to the authorities for the use of the town, contains a great variety of specimens from the animal and mineral kingdoms, while the collection of coins is one of the most complete to be met with. The museum is under the care and management of the magistrates and town council. With a view of providing better accommodation for this museum, and the Free Libraries' Act having been adopted in 1890, a magnificent structure, to be used as a Free Public Library and Museum, was erected in 1892, at the corner of Queen street and St. Peter street. The foundation stone was laid, 8th August, 1891, by Mrs. Carnegie, wife of the famous millionaire, Mr. Andrew Carnegie, of Pittsburg, who has contributed handsomely to the funds of the building. There are also several excellent schools. There are two newspapers published here—the Peterhead Sentinel, established in 1856 (the proprietor, Mr. David Scott, having published several interesting works connected with the district), and the East Aberdeenshire Observer, both creditably conducted, and enjoying an encouraging circulation in the district of Euchar. Both are issued twice a week. The market is held on Friday, and the fairs on the third Tuesday in May and the second Tuesday in November. The population of the burgh was in 1851, 10,953, and in 1891, 12,195.

BLACKHILLS is a scattered village within the burgh of Peterhead, which is the nearest railway station, 4 miles distant.

BODDAM is a neat village and considerable fishing station, in the parish of Peterhead, about 4 miles s. of that town. The harbour here was extended a few years since by the Earl of Aberdeen, at a cost somewhat exceeding £2,000, and an act of Parliament was passed in 1845, constituting Boddam a port or harbour. Some years ago the estate of Boddam was purchased from the Earl of Aberdeen by William Aiton, Esq., who lives on the estate. The fishery here is prosecuted with great diligence and success. Boddam is a quoad sacra parish, and in the village are an Established church, a Free church, a public hall, and a Board school. The population in 1891 was 1,117, and in 1891, 1895.

BUCHANHAVEN is a small fishing village within the burgh of Peterhead, the nearest railway station being at that place.

BURNHAVEN and INVERNETTIE are two small villages in the parish of Peterhead, situated about half way between that town and Boddam, and chiefly inhabited by fishermen. At Invernettie are the very extensive works of the Glenugie Distillery. The nearest railway station is at Peterhead, 2 miles distant.

INVERUGIE is a village, situated about 2½ miles w. from Peterhead. Here are the ruins of Inverugie Castle, the walls of which are still standing, and by means of a winding staircase in one of the towers, an ascent may be made to the roof, and a beautiful view of the valley of the Ugie obtained. The ruined castle of Ravenscraig stands on the opposite side of the river, about a quarter of a mile from Inverugie Castle. It is built upon a rock, and is a very good specimen of the ancient Scottish baronial style, in the square form so common to the beginning of the 13th century. Its walls are of such strength that, previous to the use of artillery, they would have rendered the place impregnable. There is a railway station at this place.

RHYNIE AND ESSIE,

AUCHINDOIR AND KEARN, WITH LUMSDEN, CABRACH, CLATT, AND KENNETHMONT.

RHYNIE and ESSIE is a united parish in the district of Strathbogie, comprehending an area of 30 square miles, and bounded on the North by the barony of Gartly, on the south by Auchindoir, and on the west by Cabrach. The centre may be about 10 miles s. from Huntly. The soil is rich and fertile on the banks of the Bogie; towards the hills it is light and gravelly, yet productive. The only antiquity in this parish deserving of notice is a vitrified fort on the top of the hill of Noth. There are two springs in the neighbourhood of Rhynie, remarkable for the surprising quantity of water they discharge, each being capable of turning a mill at its source. The places of worship are Established and Free Churches, and a chapel belonging to the Congregationalists, and there are also public schools. Fearing markets are held on the Mondays before the 28th of May and the 28th of November, and cattle markets are held from November to May, on the Saturday before the fourth Monday in each month, and the day after Keith in September, and the day after Kennethmont in October. Gartly is the nearest railway station, 4 miles distant. In 1881 the parish, which covers an area of 12,897 acres, contained a population of 1,125 persons, and in 1891, 1,043.

AUCHINDOIR, a parish with KEARN has been incorporated, is about 7 miles long and 5 broad, distant from Huntly 12 miles, the acreage being 15,310. A bluish coloured fibrous asbestos is found in great quantities in the fissures of the rocks. The parish also abounds with freestone. The only river of note is the Bogie. There are Established and Episcopal churches and a public school. The nearest railway station is at Gartly, 8 miles distant. Population of the parish in 1881, 1,514, and 1891, 1,374.

CABRACH parish, part of which was formerly in the county of Aberdeen, is now all included in that of Banff, extending in length 5 miles by about 3 in breadth, distant from Aberdeen 45 miles, w.n.w. and from Huntly 20 s.w. In the parish are an Established church, one in connection with the United Presbyterians, and two public schools. The Deveron and the Fiddich water this parish. The mountains abound with game. Dufftown is the nearest railway station, 10 miles distant. Acreage, 34,103. Population in 1881, 682, and in 1891, 646.

CLATT is a parish of 5,711 acres. The village is situated 10 miles s.s.e. from Huntly, and 33 w.n.w. from Aberdeen, on the rivulet Gaudie, which afterwards falls into Urie. It is a burgh with power to hold weekly and annual markets. The superiority belongs to the family of Gordon, of Knockespeck. The only place of worship is a church under the Establishment, and there is also a public school. Kennethmont is the nearest railway station, 3½ miles distant. Population of the parish in 1881, 452, and in 1891, 458.

KENNETHMONT parish extends about 6 miles in length by 3 in breadth, and is about 8 miles s. from Huntly. The parish, the extent of which is 8,468 acres, is watered by several small streams, and generally the soil is fertile. Here are Established and Free churches, and a public school. It is a station on the Great North of Scotland railway. Population of the parish in 1881, 999, and in 1891, 932.

LUMSDEN is a considerable village in the parish of Auchindoir, and named after its proprietor, about 4 miles s. from Rhynie, and contains a Union Free Church, and a public school. Cattle markets are held from December to April, on the first Monday in each month, and fairs on the second Tuesday in May, the second Friday in June, and the third Tuesday in August. Gartly is the nearest railway station, 8 miles distant.

ROSEHEARTY IN PITSLIGO,

WITH THE VILLAGES OF SANDHAVEN, PITTLIE, AND ARDLAW.

ROSEHEARTY is a maritime village and burgh of barony, in the parish of Pitsligo, $4\frac{1}{2}$ miles w. from Fraserburgh and 18 e. from Banff. It has a good harbour, capable of admitting vessels of from eighty to one hundred tons, which, during the last few years, has been considerably extended. The chief imports are timber, coal, and salt, and it exports fish and grain; its commerce, however, is not extensive. Although inconsiderable in size, it is a burgh of barony, having been raised to that distinction by a charter of Charles II. dated July 18th, 1681. The places of worship are the Established church at Pitsligo, and a Free church and one for the United Presbyterians at Roseheart. The parish of Pitsligo lies in the district of Buchan, on the sea coast, betwixt New Aberdeen on the west and Fraserburgh on the east, commencing about two miles west of Kinnaird Head. The land is generally fertile, and the face of the country level. Pitsligo Castle, formerly the seat of Lord Pitsligo (a title in the Forbes family) is an ancient structure, now in ruins, surrounded with extensive gardens. The labouring portion of the population in the parish are principally employed in fishing, and others in agriculture. SANDHAVEN and PITTLIE are two small villages in this parish, both situated between Kinnaird Head and Roseheart Point, inhabited chiefly by fishermen. There is a good harbour at Sandhaven, which has been considerably enlarged and improved, £20,000 having been expended on it by the proprietor, the Honourable Charles J. K. H. S. Forbes Refusis. The places of worship are a church of the Establishment and a Free church. A new public school was erected in 1886, at a cost of about £1,400. ARDLAW is a small hamlet in this parish. The nearest railway station is at Fraserburgh, about $4\frac{1}{2}$ miles distant. In 1881 the parish of Pitsligo, the acreage of which is 4,741, contained a population of 2,582, and in 1891, 2,942, of which 1,236 were residents of Roseheart.

STRICHEN,

NEW ABERDOUR, TYRIE, NEW PITSLIGO, BOYNDLIE, NEW LEEDS, AND PENNAN.

STRICHEN is a parish in the district of Buchan. The village which is a neat one, is well supplied with water, and there is also a gas company, but the streets are not lighted. It is 33½ miles N. of Aberdeen, 20 W. of Banff, 16 W. by N. from Turriff, 15 N. by W. from Peterhead, and 9 S. from Fraserburgh, situated on the north bank of the Ugie. The town house is a convenient and neat structure, erected in the year 1816, by the Right Hon. Lord Lovat, at an expense of £2,000. On the side of one of the hills in this parish are the figures of a horse and a stag, formed by large pieces of stone, which have a singular effect at a distance. Upon the same hill is a hunter's lodge, on which is inscribed, "This Hunter's lodge, Robb Gibb commands." About one mile S. W. from the village is Strichen House, the property of George Alexander Baird, Esq., of Strichen and Stickhill—a substantial building, in the Gothic style, erected in 1820-2; it is surrounded by an extensive park, embracing the finest woods and trees in Buchan district. The Formentor and Buchan section of the Great North of Scotland railway passes through this parish, and has a station in the village. The places of worship are a church of the Establishment, a Free church, and Episcopalian church, and one for the Roman Catholics at Woodside; and there are public, Episcopal and Free schools. Fairs are held here on the first Thursday of every month. Acreage of parish 10,183. Population of Strichen in 1881, 1,204, and in 1891, 1,902.

NEW ABERDOUR parish, 9 miles W. of Fraserburgh, and 16 E. of Banff, stretches along the Moray Firth for about 10 miles, its area being 15,508 acres. The shore here is so bold and precipitous that there are only three places where boats can effect a landing; and the rocks have been excavated by the sea into innumerable caves, one of which is ninety feet long and twenty-two broad. Upon a precipice overhanging the sea are the ruins of the ancient castle of Dundargue, a place of great strength and importance in feudal times, and noted for sustaining a long siege in 1336, when Henry de Beaumont, the English Earl of Buchan, was obliged to capitulate to Andrew Murray, Regent of Scotland, during the unwarrantable captivity of King Robert Bruce in England. The places of worship are the parish and Free churches, and one belonging to the Establishment, at Auchmedden; there are also three public schools in the parish. The nearest railway station is Strichen, 7 miles distant. Population of New Aberdour in 1881, 628, and in 1891, 647, and of the whole parish, 1,885.

TYRIE parish extends about ten miles in length, by four and a half in breadth, and comprises an area of 11,182 acres. The surface is agreeably diversified with hill and dale, heath, moss, meadow, corn land and grass parks. On the northern verge of the parish is the church of Tyrie, an ancient structure, supposed to have been originally erected about the year 1004, when the Thane of Buchan routed the Danish army upon the neighbouring eminences. In 1787 Sir William Forbes founded, in the southern quarter of the parish, the village of New PITSLIGO, into which the weaving of linen was introduced, but since power-loom weaving began, it gradually decreased, and at the present time there is scarcely any done, but the weaving of pillow lace. Wincey and woollen manufacturing are carried on to a small extent, affording employment to some of its inhabitants. Near the village are a few granite quarries. There is a gas company here, but the streets are not lighted. There is a church of the Establishment, also an Episcopal church, dedicated to St. John the Evangelist, erected in 1871, at a cost of about £4,000, the style being early English. The other places of worship are a Free church and a Congregational chapel; there are also public and Episcopal schools. The population of the entire parish of Tyrie was in 1881, 3,391, and in 1891, 3,238; of which 2,438 belongs to New Pitsligo.

PENNAN is a small fishing village in the parish of and about 2 miles W. from New Aberdour. The nearest railway station is Strichen, 11 miles distant. Population in 1891, 157.

NEW LEEDS is a small village in the parish of Strichen some 4 miles distant. There is a U.P. church in the village. The nearest railway station is Mormond, 1 mile distant. Population in 1891, 160.

BOYNDLIE, like New Pitsligo, is a part of the parish of Tyrie, and is a large farming district. There is a public school here. The nearest railway station is Strichen, 5 miles distant.

TARLAND,

COULL, LOGIE-COLDSTONE, AND MIGVIE.

TARLAND parish forms a very irregular and disjointed district on the western borders of Aberdeenshire. The village of Tarland—which is a burgh of barony—is 31 miles w. from Aberdeen, 14 s.s.w. from Alford, 6 n.w. from Aboyne, and 12 n.n.e. from Ballater, situated nearly in the centre of the district of Cromar. The lands about the village are mostly level, but the greater proportion of the parish is mountainous, and the seasons are cold; the woods which have been planted will, however, be the means of materially ameliorating the latter inconvenience. A small rivulet runs by the village, and falls into the river Dea, near Aboyne village. Branches respectively of the Union Bank of Scotland, Limited, and the Town and County Bank, Limited, are established in the burgh. There are also an Established and a Free church, two public schools, and a Public Hall. Fairs are held on the Wednesday before the 5th of January and on the 5th of Wednesday, second Wednesday and last Wednesday in February, first Wednesday and Wednesday after 26th in May, Friday after St. Sairs in July, on the Friday after the first Tuesday in August, second Wednesday after first Tuesday in October, Tuesday and Wednesday after 22nd, or on that day if a Tuesday, in November. The nearest railway stations are Aboyne and Dinnet, each distant 5 miles. Population of the parish in 1891, 889.

COULL is a parish in the district of Cromar, the kirk being about 30 miles w. from Aberdeen, lying at the head of Strathcromar, and separated from the Dee on the south by Aboyne. It is a finely sheltered tract of land, triangular in shape, and generally fertile, the hill portions being, however, bleak and pastoral. The ruins of the very old castle of Coull are distinguishable, but of its ancient possessors little is known. The nearest railway station is Aboyne, 4½ miles distant. Acreage, 9,044. Population in 1881, 783, and in 1891, 745.

LOGIE-COLDSTONE, to which the Boundary Commissioners have added the old parish of MIGVIE, now forms a joint parish, and is bounded on the east by Tarland and Coull, on the south by Dinnet, on the west by Strathdon and Glangairn, and on the north by Towie and Strathdon. The nearest railway station is Dinnet, 5 miles distant. Population in 1891, 994.

TURRIFF,

KING EDWARD, AND NEW BYTH.

TURRIFF is a free burgh of barony (of which the Earl of Fife is the feudal superior), the seat of a presbytery, and the capital of the parish of that name, 34½ miles N.N.W. of Aberdeen, 17 N.N.W. of Old Meldrum, and 11 S.E. of Banff, situate on a tributary stream of the Deveron, near that river. Its charter, dated the 10th of March, 1511, was granted by James IV. in favour of Thomas Dickson, prebend of Turriff. By this the inhabitants were entitled to hold a weekly market on the Sabbath day, and three fairs annually, each to continue eight days. A sheriff's small debt court is held quarterly in the Town Hall, and justice of peace and police courts when required. In 1858 the householders adopted certain provisions of the Police Improvement (Scotland) Act of 1850, and latterly almost the entire provisions of the more recent act of 1862, in virtue of which the affairs of the burgh are regulated and administered by nine commissioners of police, three of whom are elected annually. These commissioners elect from their own number one senior and two junior magistrates, who in their turn appoint a procurator fiscal and clerk of court, and within their jurisdiction exercise in all cases of petty offences the functions of sheriff and magistrates of police. Turriff is one of the most flourishing little towns in the north of Aberdeenshire. The place is clean and neat, and gas-lighted by a joint-stock company, formed in 1897. In the same year a branch of the Commercial Bank of Scotland, Limited, was established here, and subsequently three other banks, all doing a prosperous business. One of these, the North of Scotland Bank, Limited, has erected, at a cost of about £2,000, a handsome building situated at the junction of Main street with High street, the style of architecture being the old Scotch baronial. The stone used is the red sandstone from the quarries in the neighbourhood. The tower contains a clock having dials facing north, south, and west, which is fitted up with self-lighting apparatus, and serves as a town's clock. There are several inns and posting houses. The places of worship are Established, Free and Episcopal churches, and there are public schools, and a private academy in which boarders are received. The vicarage of Turriff is of an agreeable character, and among its residents are several families of distinction. Forglun House, the seat of Sir Robert J. Abercromby, Bart., a few miles distant, is one of the most elegant and imposing mansions in the north of Scotland. Turriff is a station on the Macduff section of the Great North of Scotland railway. Fairs are held on the second and fourth Wednesday in each month, also Saturday before the 27th of May (feeling market), and Saturday before the 23rd of November. The population of the parish of Turriff, the acreage of which is 18,386, was in 1881, 4,343, and in 1891, 4,253, of which the town contained 2,341.

KING EDWARD is a parish, 6 miles N. from Turriff, in the northern part of the county, 12 miles in length from west to east, by from 2 to 5 in breadth, its western extremity being washed by the Deveron; on the north it is bounded by Gamrie, on the east by New Byth, and on the south by Turriff. The general surface is undulating; there are extensive plantations, and the district is advanced in agriculture. A streamlet, tributary to the Deveron, pursues a westerly direction through the parish, and on its right bank stand the ruins of the ancient castle of King Edward, once the seat of the potent Comyns, Earls of Buchan. King Edward is a station on the Macduff section of the Great North of Scotland railway. Acreage, 18,570. Population in 1881, 3,068, and in 1891, 2,317.

NEW BYTH, formed into a quoad sacra parish in 1868, is bounded by Gamrie and Aberdour on the north, King Edward on the west, Turriff and Montquhitter on the south, and New Deer and Tyrie on the east. It is composed of part of King Edward, New Deer and Aberdour, and was provided with a chapel in 1798. The village of New Byth is situated about a mile from a public road, the inhabitants being chiefly engaged in agriculture. Excepting towards the north and west, the general aspect of the parish is bleak. Byth House, one of the seats of B. C. Urquhart, Esq. of Old Meldrum, is situated about a mile north of the village, and is surrounded with wood, the only relieving feature of the district. FISHERIE and CRUDIE are places in this parish. Turriff is the nearest railway station, 9 miles distant. Population in 1891, 1,847, of which the village contained 398.

ARGYLSHIRE,

OR, as it is frequently written, Argyllshire, is a large county in the south-western extremity of the Highlands. What may be termed the continental part is bounded on the north by Inverness-shire, on the east by that county and Perthshire and Dumbartonshire, and on the south and west by bays and straits of the Atlantic Ocean. Its extreme length is one hundred and fifteen miles; its breadth averaging about thirty-three, and it has not less than six hundred miles of coast washed by the sea. The mainland, including the peninsula of Kintyre, has been computed to contain 2,735 square miles; while the islands connected with it are supposed to comprise 1,063 more; whereby the whole extent of land in Argyshire may be estimated at 3,798 square miles. In point of size, Argyshire ranks as the second county in Scotland, and in population as the eleventh. The county is divided into six principal districts—ARGYLE PROPER, COWAL, ISLAY, KINTYRE (or Cantyre), LORNE, and MULL. Cowal is divided from Dumbartonshire by Loch Long, and bounded by Loch Fyne on the west; betwixt Loch Fyne and Loch Linnhe, and stretching away to the north, is Lorne; from which, on its south-west quarter, there extends in a southerly direction into the Irish Sea the peninsula of Kintyre. The islands of Mull, Jura, and Islay are divided from the continent, or from each other, merely by narrow sounds, and may be taken from their proximity and accessibility as little else than portions of the mainland, surrounded by salt water rivers. There are other districts of inferior size within the principal ones—as Ardnamurchan, the most westerly point of Sunart; Appin, a piece of Lorne bordering on Loch Linnhe; Glenorchy, another portion of Lorne on its eastern side; and Knapdale, occupying a position between Kintyre and Nether Lorne.

EARLY HISTORY.—This county, together with that of Perth, is presumed to have constituted the ancient Caledonian Kingdom, while the Romans and Picts were in possession of the greater part of Scotland. In former ages the western coast of Argyshire was perpetually exposed to descents and depredations of the Danes and the Irish, but the original inhabitants never suffered them to penetrate any considerable distance into the interior; if an enemy landed, or was seen hovering on the coast, in the course of a few hours the whole country was alarmed, and the men repaired to the shore completely armed. The heroes celebrated by Ossian were a militia, established in Argyshire, for the purpose of defending the country in any sudden emergency. Of old the chieftain was considered the father, rather than the master of his clan; his followers loved him with a degree of enthusiasm which made them cheerfully undergo any fatigue or danger; and it was his interest, as well as his pride and glory, to require so animated an adherence to the utmost of his power. The rent paid him was chiefly consumed in feasts given at the habitations of his tenants; on these occasions they all lived together as friends, and the departure of the chief always occasioned deep regret. The cattle and corn formerly consumed at these feasts of hospitality were, in more polished times, required to be brought to the landlord's mansion, and thus friendship degenerated into oppression. Campbell of Auchinbreck had anciently a right to carry off the best cow he could find upon several properties each Martinmas, by way of mart—the island of Islay paid five hundred such cows yearly; but this badge of slavery has been converted into a modus of twenty shillings a head. The inconveniences attending this state arose from the petty quarrels between neighbouring clans, excited by a spirit of plunder, and absurd notions of fantastical honour. At this period

Scottish kings had no authority over this part of the country; the Macdonalds of the Isles assuming royal powers, holding parliaments, and enacting laws, until the Bruces brought the disorderly clans into some kind of subordination. From this time, in their different wars with the English, the chiefs had recourse to the assistance of the Highlanders, with whom, and the inhabitants of the Low country, they contracted debts, rendering the condition of the middle classes worse, as the chiefs found it necessary to require an addition to their yearly revenue; and in order to enforce obedience, recourse was had to penal laws. In this respect the king was obliged to gratify his feudal barons; for they were always formidable to his throne. But when the laws presented any obstacle to their rapacious exactions, they openly set them at defiance; they erected gibbets, and hanged their tenants without trial or mercy. The evil at last became so flagrant, that a jury and bailiff or sheriff were introduced; but this measure did not remove the mischief, for the law officer was not unfrequently bribed to spare the real culprit, while the poorer and more innocent were considered fit subjects for the gallows. In 1748 these abominable jurisdictions were totally abolished; and no sooner were men emancipated from their fetters than they began to improve their properties; and since that time the face and condition of this county has undergone the happiest change. The ancient inhabitants of the Highlands of Argyshire prided themselves on their endurance of hunger and fatigue; they were passionately fond of music and poetry, and the song and dance soon made them forget their toils. Now the sound of the bagpipe is more rarely heard; the taste for poetry has disappeared; the deer have almost abandoned the mountains, and extensive forests are either converted into sheep walks, or have succumbed to modern cultivation.

SOIL, SURFACE, PRODUCE, CLIMATE, &c.—The surface of this county is like most other parts of the Highlands, mountainous, bleak, and uncomfortable to the view; hills, rocks, and huge mountains rise upon each other in stupendous and fearful disorder. Glenoree and Glencoe are, perhaps, amongst the most awfully picturesque valleys that can be contemplated. The coast is rocky, but indented with navigable bays and islets, which afford good harbours for shipping. From the nature of the county, agriculture is not widespread, but in certain districts in Lorne, near Campbeltown, and in Islay, farming is favourably pursued. The staple corn crop is oats and barley; rye, beans and peas being likewise grown, as are also large quantities of excellent potatoes. The mountains feed immense numbers of sheep, and the cattle bred are of the hardy Highland type and reared for exportation to the Lowland markets. Limestone is abundant, and granite is occasionally met with, whilst near Campbeltown is worked a remarkably productive seam of coal. Lead is wrought in Islay, but the chief mineral is slate, of which there are several quarries, the most extensive being at Ballachulish, and in Ewsdale. Soil and Luing islands. In the beginning of the eighteenth century, much of the natural wood was cut up and sold by the proprietors, at prices by no means proportionate to the injury perpetrated on the face of the country; despoiling it of one of its most interesting features, and finding the introduction of modern plantations but a meagre substitute for the noble forest tree. The county altogether abounds more in romantic scenes than fertile plains and wood-clad hills. The number of acres in tillage bears an insignificant proportion to those occupied by pasture, wood, hills, lakes and rivers. The CLIMATE of the lower parts of Argyshire is mild and temperate, but in the upper inland districts the atmosphere is severe. On the tops of many of the hills the snow often lies for months, chilling the air and giving the country a cheerless wintry aspect, even in tolerably mild open weather. In the sinuosities of the valleys the air is of a more bland nature, these places being protected from the north and north-west winds, and having generally a southerly exposure. The central districts are more subject to rains than the coast, from the proximity of high hills, whose summits attract and break the clouds from the Atlantic. The most considerable elevations in Argyshire are:—Beninturk, 2,170; Slagcoil, 2,223; Benetton, 2,306; Scur Choinice, 2,364; Beninna, 2,389; Crnach Bein, 2,439; Paps of Jura, 2,476; Bennabun, 2,515; Buchael Etive, 2,537; Benreisipoll, 2,661; Benanambran, 2,720; Scur Dhonnul, 2,730; Bein-More, 3,185; Crnachlassa, 3,000; and Crnachan, 3,670 feet respectively above the sea.

The MANUFACTURES of Argyshire are yet in so feeble a state as to be scarcely worthy of notice. The principal article made on a large scale for exportation is whisky, which is of a remarkably fine quality. Campbeltown alone boasts about twenty distilleries, and there are others in several parts of the county, for which Glasgow is the depot. Among the other branches of industry may be named net and rope making, and the manufacture of woollen cloth and gunpowder, for which latter there are several extensive works. From the peculiar form and watery intersection of this county, the communication between its insular and mainland portions has been greatly facilitated by steam navigation; and now a very considerable number of steam vessels are constantly employed conveying passengers and goods to and fro throughout the county, and in transporting produce to Glasgow. There is not, at the present day, a bay, a loch, or inlet, but holds a daily or commands a weekly communication with the Lowlands, and the several districts of the county. By this means the farmers are encouraged to fatten stock which they would never otherwise think of rearing. Steam boats are, in short, the lively cause of every kind of improvement in this county, and in agriculture changes are yearly witnessed in the different districts, from the modern improvements in husbandry.

RIVERS, LAKES, AND RAILWAYS.—The county is well watered by rivers (not considerable), brooks and lochs, which abound with fish. Loch Fyne is celebrated as furnishing the best herrings of any found on the coast of Scotland, and it was estimated that there were caught in this arm of the sea from twenty to thirty thousand barrels annually; but the "take" has greatly fallen off in later years, the herring having deserted the loch, which has caused the fishing centre to be removed from Tarbert to Campbeltown. Loch Awe (pronounced Loch O), is a beautiful fresh water lake, about twenty-eight miles long and from one to two broad, reckoned the most picturesque lake of any in the Highlands, and possesses many lovely woody islets, among which are seen the ruins of several old castles. Its waters, which abound with salmon, trout, and eel, discharge themselves into Loch Etive, a branch of the Atlantic Ocean, at Bonaw Ferry. There are many smaller lochs, some of them situated amidst grand and mountainous scenery. The only line of railway in this county is the Callander and Oban line, which was opened through to Oban on the 1st July, 1880.

ECCLESIASTICAL DIVISIONS, REPRESENTATION, &c.—This extensive county is divided, ecclesiastically, into not more than fifty parishes, which contain only two Royal burghs, INVERARAY, at the head of Loch Fyne, and CAMPBELTOWN in Kintyre. One member is returned to Parliament for the county, the present representative being D. H. Macfarlane, Esq. The burghs of Campbeltown, Inveraray, and Oban, in conjunction with Ayr and Irvine, are also represented, the sitting member being W. Birkmyre, Esq. The parliamentary constituency for the county was in 1891-92, 9,874. The Duke of Argyll is lord-lieutenant and high sheriff of the county, and is the proprietor of a large portion of the shire, and he is the chief of the family of Campbell, a surname which is found over the whole region, among high and low. His eldest son, the Marquis of Lorne, was, on the 21st day of March, 1871, married to Princess Louise, the fourth daughter of Her Majesty the Queen. The lordship of Campbell was elevated to the earldom of Argyll in 1477 by James III.; to a Marquisate in 1641 by Charles I., and to a Dukedom in 1701 by William III. The valuation of the county for 1831-92 (exclusive of burghs, railways, and canals) was £129,050. By the returns made to Government in 1881, the county contained a population of 76,468, and by those for 1891, 75,945, which show a decrease in the ten years of 523.

APPIN AND BALLACHULISH SOUTH,

WITH KINGAIRLOCH, AND THE ISLANDS OF LISMORE, SHUNA, AND THEIR VICINITIES.

APPIN, or as it is more generally called, PORT APPIN, is a small village in the united parish of Lismore and Appin, and comprised in a district of the latter appellation; situated on the point of a small promontory, on the eastern shore of Loch Linnhe, 13 miles north of Oban, 15 N.W. of Bonaw, 35 S.W. of Inveraray, 136 S.W. of Edinburgh, and 29 S.W. of Fort William. The parish is of great extent, chiefly occupied as grazing farms; the village contains very few houses, and is a mile and a half off the main road. About five miles and a half to the north is Appin House, the seat of the late R. Downie, Esq., of Appin; this mansion is surrounded by some of the finest timber on the coast. The estate is at present in the hands of trustees, the heir being a minor. The parish church, which was built in 1649, is centrally situated on the Strath of Appin, a little off the high road, a distance of two miles from Appin pier; and there is a parliamentary church nine miles distant, on the way to Ballachulish South. A new parish church was opened in July, 1890. The Episcopal church, Portnacraoish, stands a short distance from Rose place, on a lovely site, and in its churchyard rest the remains of the Stewarts of Fasnacloich. The Free church, built in 1816, is a neat little building situated on the south side of the beautiful bay running in past the Castle of Stalker up to Kinlochich, which is in the centre of the much admired Strath. The Strath public school is an imposing structure, and by its situation surveys almost the whole Strath. On a small island near Portnacraoish, full two miles north, is the ancient and partly dilapidated castle of Stalker. It is nearly square, of considerable height, and has evidently been a place of some strength; and though its area is not extensive, it occupies almost a moiety of the little islet on which it stands. About half a mile from the pier, situated in a park on the road to Shian, is Airds House, the residence of Robert M'Fie, Esq., of Airds and Oban, which commands a fine view of the head of Airds Bay. Beyond this, at a distance of a quarter of a mile, is Drimnell House, belonging to Dr. Laurie; it is an ornamental building, of which a good view is presented as the stranger enters Appin on board the steamer from Oban. There are also several other elegant mansions, among which may be named Barriemore House, the residence of Mrs. Campbell; Achnacraoish House, that of Alexander Stewart, Esq., and Kenlochich House, D. H. Campbell-Munro, Esq. There is a pier here where steamers call regularly. The district is principally devoted to agriculture and sheep farming. Fairs are held at CONNELL on Saturday before the last Wednesday in May, and on Thursday before the last Wednesday in October, and at CORRAN OF ARDGOUR on third Friday in October. At Duror Inn, five miles from Ballachulish, on the Appin road, a cattle market is held twice yearly. Population of the quoad sacra parish in 1881, 762, and in 1891, 669.

BALLACHULISH SOUTH is a straggling but populous village, on the south shore of Loch Leven, about 3 miles E. of Ballachulish Ferry (in the same parish), and 15½ N. of Port Appin. On a small island opposite the village of Ballachulish are the ruins of an old chapel, supposed to have been built by St. Mungo. The island is now used as a burying ground. GLENCOE is a wild and picturesque mountain pass, on the road from Ballachulish to Dumbarton, and is historically celebrated as being the spot where the massacre of the MacDonalds took place in 1691. There are Established, Episcopal and Free churches here, and also a post office. Near the village of Ballachulish, at the foot of Glencoe hills, are very extensive slate quarries the property of Lady Beresford, and others, of Ballachulish, which give employment to a number of the inhabitants. Within a mile of the quarries westward is an Episcopalian church, the largest in the Highlands, and a small one for the Established Church of Scotland, also one for Roman Catholics. The quoad sacra parish contained in 1881 a population of 1,414 persons, and in 1891, 1,477.

At BALLACHULISH SOUTH FERRY is a comfortable hotel and posting house, a commodious and handsome building, pleasantly situated. About three quarters of a mile distant, a pier, with waiting room, &c., has been erected; here the steamers call, and a conveyance from the hotel awaits their arrival. A sub-post office is also here. In the immediate vicinity, at the entrance of a sequestered valley, is Ballachulish House, the property of Lady Beresford; three miles from which is Ardsheal, the seat of W. D. Anderson, Esq. About a mile above the quarries, on the margin of Loch Leven, near the opening of a glen exceedingly wild and romantic, and almost embosomed by trees, is Invercoe House; and opposite, on the north shore of the Loch (which is here fully a mile broad), in the county of Inverness, is Callart, the modern mansion of the late Sir Duncan Cameron, Bart., of Fassfern and Callart, contributing in an eminent degree to the beauty of the landscape.

At CORRAN FERRY, where Loch Linnhe narrows to a quarter of a mile in breadth, a lighthouse has been erected. Bun Nevis is distinctly seen from here, and to the right there is a magnificent view of Glencoe.

LISMORE is an island in Loch Linnhe, 10 miles in length by about 2 in breadth; it lies between Appin and Morven, and belongs to the same united parish with the former place. Great quantities of excellent lime, as well as oats and potatoes, are exported from hence. The church is situated at the Clachan of Lismore, and is distant from the north point of the island about 3 miles. There is a United Presbyterian church about a mile and a half from ACHNACROISH, and at BACHUL is a Baptist chapel. There are public schools at BALIGERKULLE and BALIGARVE. There is a small village on this isolated fertile spot called PORT RAMSAY; and at a southern point on a ridge of rocks projecting some distance into the channel, stands a lighthouse, almost in a direct line between Oban and the sound of Mull; the light, a catoptical, is on a high rounded pillar of stone masonry, and is an excellent and most useful beacon. A pier has been erected at ACHNACROISH, at which the mail steamer calls twice daily. On this island are the remains of Doune or Auchindoune Castle, at one time the residence of the bishops of Argyll, the ruins of a Danish fort, and three fresh water lakes, in which there is a good supply of salmon, trout, &c. The principal industries are farming and fishing. Population in 1881, 735, and in 1891, 684.

CAMPBELTOWN,

WITH SALT-PANS, SADDLE, CARRADALE AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

CAMPBELTOWN is a royal burgh and seaport, 114 miles w. by s. of Edinburgh, and 100 s. w. of Glasgow, by sea, but by land the distance to either city is greater by 36 miles; 76 s.w. of Inveraray, 37 s. of Tarbert, 10 s. of Southend, and 6 s. of Salt-Pans, beautifully situated on a fine bay or inlet of the sea. It is a place of great antiquity, having been a royal residence so early as the fifth century, at which period Fergus the first king of Scotland fixed his residence here, and it continued the seat of his successors till 843. It was then called Dalruadhain, and a place on the north side of the present town is still known by the name, now written Dalaruan; but the appellation formerly applied to the site of modern Campbeltown was Cann Loch (i.e. "head of the Loch"), by which name the country people still designate the town in Gaelic; the present name was given to it in honour of the Duke of Argyll, when it was made a royal burgh in 1701. The town is sheltered on the north and south sides by lofty mountains, and has one of the safest harbours in the Western Highlands, possessing a depth from three to fifteen fathoms at low water. The haven is spacious, being nearly two miles in length by one in breadth, and protected at its mouth by the Isle of Davan, which is joined to the main land on the south side by a bar of sand, visible at low water, nearly half a mile long—the entrance to the bay being from the north. A lighthouse stands on the above island, which is far more efficient than the old one formerly on the shore. On opening into the bay, the stranger's attention is arrested by the grand though wild scenery, particularly on the south side; and the prospect immediately comprises the neat local capital, Campbeltown, situate at the head of Loch Kilkerran. The public buildings are seen towering above the dwelling houses, beyond which the eye is carried for some distance over a fine, fertile, yet mountainous country. From the shore, two quays project into the bay, so as to allow vessels to load and unload at low water; and there is a third small quay on the opposite side of the loch, adjoining that part of the town called Dalintober.

Campbeltown formerly derived great advantage from the herring fishery, for which it was particularly famed, but since the withdrawal of the bounty it has decayed, few vessels being now engaged in the trade. The staple industry at the present time is distilling whisky, and in this branch about twenty firms are engaged, producing an article, perhaps, inferior to none in the kingdom, chiefly for the Glasgow and English houses. Next in consequence, and mainly, if not entirely, dependent for its prosperity on the last-named branch, is malting. Agriculture of late years has risen into great importance. Some of the finest and richest land in this part of Scotland lies to the north and west of the town, and is chiefly the property of the Duke of Argyll and Hector Macneil, Esq. A wool-len manufactory, a colliery, a net manufactory, a rope walk, &c. add to the business importance of the place, whilst its neighbourhood abounds with lime, stone, &c. for building and other purposes. The County Building, opened in 1871, situate on Castlehill, is a fine stone building in the baronial style. It contains a justice of the peace court, sheriff's court, and the fiscal's offices. There is also the custom house, an extensive excise establishment, and the branches of the Commercial Bank of Scotland, Limited, the Clydesdale Bank, Limited, the Royal Bank of Scotland, and the Bank of Scotland, of which two are situated in Main street, and two in Longrow, besides a bank for savings in Bolgam street, which was established in 1827, under the provisions of the Act 59 George III. cap. 62. Steam vessels sail regularly to Glasgow, Greenock, and Ayr, and occasionally to the adjacent coast towns, and to Belfast, &c. in Ireland; and numerous coasting vessels, freighted to Liverpool and other parts of the country. The principal exports are whisky, wool, herrings, fishing nets, live stock, coal, potatoes, &c. The imports are barley, timber, grain, yeast, groceries, ironmongery, &c. Campbeltown is connected by telegraph with the principal towns and villages in the county, as well as with Glasgow, &c. The municipal government of the town is vested in a provost, two bailies, a dean of guild, and twelve councillors, and combined with Ayr, Inveraray, Irvine and Oban returns one member to the Imperial Parliament. The town is lighted by gas, and the inhabitants are well supplied with water by pipes conducted from Lochruan and Crosshill into the principal streets. The town Hall, a convenient building, ornamented by a handsome spire, contains a council chamber, and an assembly and other rooms. Campbeltown is the head-quarters of the Argyll and Bute Artillery Militia, and a large and efficient staff are here permanently stationed; in the town are also an Artillery Volunteer Battery, and a Rifle Volunteer Corps. For the latter a large drill hall, called the "Victoria Hall" in honour of Her Majesty's Jubilee, was erected in 1887, on part of the site of the old bowling green in Bolgam street, having a frontage to Kinloch road of about 70 feet.

PLACES OF WORSHIP, SCHOOLS, &c.—The Castlehill church, so called from its occupying the site of the ancient royal castle, was erected in 1781. The Gaelic church, so named from the language in which the service is rendered, was built in 1807, and a beautiful stone spire added in 1836. The United Presbyterian church was erected in 1767, and is ornamented with a handsome and substantial stone tower, in the Gothic style, raised in 1854. It was re-built in 1874, and is now a splendid structure in the Italian style of architecture, with a large stone tower 150 feet from the ground. The Episcopal church, situated in Argyle street, opened also in 1834, was at first occupied as a Secession church, and afterwards as a branch of the Scotch Episcopal church. There are two Free churches, one in Lochend, a beautiful stone edifice, and the other in Lorne street. The Roman Catholic chapel, opened in 1819, is a neat structure, with carved stone front and pinnacles, which give it a rather imposing appearance. There are a school of industry for girls, the Dalintober boys' and girls' schools, endowed by a Miss Lucy Campbell, in 1843, and Board and Roman Catholic schools.

The most remarkable piece of antiquity is an ancient cross, erected in the middle of the main street. The inscription is in the Saxon character, and the following is a literal copy, with the translation annexed—

Hæc est: crux: Domini: YVARI: M: H: EACHTRNA. quondam: Rectoris de KYREGAN. et: Domini: ANDRE: nati: ejus: Rectoris de KIL: COMAN: qui hæc crucem fieri faciebat: "This is the cross of Mr. Edward M. H. Enchan, once Rector of Crygan, and Master Andrew his son, Rector of Kilcoman, who erected this cross."

There is, however, no date, but it is said to have been executed about the twelfth century, and to have been brought from the Isle of Iona. South of the town is the high mountain called Bengoelion, from which there is an extensive view of the surrounding country, including the distant objects of Arran and Pladda islands, C. wau hills, the bay and heads of Ayr, the Lowlands as far as Loch Rann, Ailsa Craig, Black Head at the entrance of Belfast Lough, Donnaheary, Sania Isles, part of the Irish coast near the points of Garraon Heall, Red Bay and Fair Head, the dangerous bay of Machrihanish, the Mull of Islay and the Paps of Jura; also the cemetery at Kilkerran, with the pines of Saddell, Carradale, and Skipness. The north and south shores of Campbeltown are both pleasant and healthy. The market is held on Friday, and the fairs on the first Thursday in February, for horses; the second and last Wednesday in May, for horses and cattle; the Wednesday before the second Thursday in August, for sheep and lambs; and on the second Thursday in the same month for horses; the Friday before Kilmichael market in October, for cattle; and the third Thursday in November, for horses. Population of Campbeltown in 1881, 7,693, and in 1891, 8,235.

SALT-PANS, so called from salt having been made here from salt water, is a small village, 6 miles W. of Campbeltown, on the southern shore of Machrihanish bay, the dashing of whose waves can be heard at a great distance; and the continual heavy swell here, caused by the Atlantic rolling in between Islay and the northern coast of Ireland, is justly dreaded by the mariner. Nearly half a mile south is Losset House, the tasteful and modern mansion of Hector Macnail, Esq. of Ugadale. At Drumlembie, about four miles from Campbeltown, are the works of the Argyll colliery, which are connected with Campbeltown by a narrow gauge railway. Here is also a Board school.

SADDELL and SKIPNESS form a united parish, with an area of 46,872 acres, situated at the inner extremity of the peninsula of Kintyre, the village of Saddell being about 10 miles N. of Campbeltown. It contains the ancient castle of Somerled, the great chieftain and founder of the clan Macdonald; and the ruins of a monastery of the Cistercian order, founded by Somerled in 1160. Saddell is now the residence of Colonel John N. MacLeod, whose mansion stands in a good situation in the centre of this fine glen. The ancient castle, which is still entire, and the ruins of the monastery, in which is the cemetery of the ancient Macdonald family, are well worthy of being visited by the curious. Population of the joint parishes in 1881, 1,163, and in 1891, 1,152.

At CARRADALE, a village in the above parish, and 5 miles N. of Saddell, a pier has been erected, where the steamer calls on its voyage to and from Glasgow and Campbeltown. A sub-post office and a Board school are in the village.

CLACHAN, TAYINLOAN, KILLEAN, GLENBARR, BALLACHANTUIE, AND KILKENZIE,

WITH THE ISLANDS OF GIGHA, CARA, AND THEIR VICINITIES.

CLACHAN is a village in the parish of Kilmalmonell, situate in a fine valley on the banks of a small stream over which is a good stone bridge, and on the road from Tarbert to Campbeltown, 11 miles S. of the former, and 26 N. of the latter place. In the village is the parish church, a chapel in which Free Church service is held, and a Board school; and a little to the east is the residence of Sir William M'Kinnon, Bart., of Balmakill, who is proprietor of the village, and who has effected considerable improvements. In the vicinity, to the north-west, is a fortified fort on a large scale, and another contiguous fortification in ruins; and among the hills to the east are several fresh water lochs, well stored with trout. Eight miles south, on the same road, and near the coast is

TAYINLOAN, a small village in the parish of Killeen, about 19 miles N. from Campbeltown; and about a mile in a northern direction is Largie Castle, the residence of Mrs. McDonald, and opposite the village, but separated from the mainland by a sound about four miles broad, is the island of GIGHA, which is nearly six miles long, and from two to three miles broad, and is the property of J. W. Scarlett, Esq., of Achamore House. An established church and a Board school are on the island.

CARA is a neighbouring island, and is about one mile in length.

KILLEAN is about one mile S. of Tayinloan. Near the road stands the parish church, a small neat stone building, erected in 1787, and the parochial school; and about a quarter of a mile further, on an eminence, is a handsome Free church, with a tower, erected in 1846, and situate close by is a Board school. Seals are very often seen lying on the rocks near the coast. Population in 1881 of the quoad sacra parish, 1,368.

Nearly 3 miles S. of Killeen, and 12 N. of Campbeltown, is the village of GLENBARR, situate on the banks of the Barr water, which is well stocked with fine salmon and trout; and nearly a mile from the shore, in a rich and well cultivated glen, is Barr House, the property of Major Macalister, a fine structure, built in the Gothic style, and from its site an extensive view of the sea and north-east coast of Ireland may be obtained.

Three miles S. of Glenbarr and 9½ N.W. of Campbeltown, on the main road near the shore, is BALLACHANTUIE, a village in the united parish of Killeen and Kilkennie, containing a small church, erected in 1835, and a Board school. The road between this village and Campbeltown has been much improved of late years, and a new road several miles in length was cut along the shore, at a great expense, to avoid the hills on the old road. The chief employment of the people on this coast is fishing and agriculture.

DUNOON,

WITH THE VILLAGES OF KIRN, INNELLAN, GLENLEAN, SANDBANK, HUNTER'S QUAY, TOWARD, GLENDAUEL, MILLHOUSE, TIGH-NA-BRUAICH, COLINTRAIVE, AND THE PARISHES OF INVERCHALAIN, KILFINAN, KILMODAN, AND KILMORICH.

DUNOON and KILMUN is a parish lying on the western shore of the Frith of Clyde. The town of Dunoon, a thriving one is the principal place in the district of Cowal, and was created, along with Kirn and Hunter's Quay, a borough in 1868. It is 27 miles S.S.E. of Inveraray, 21 S.S.W. of Strachur, 7 S. of Kilmun, 74 W. of Edinburgh, 30 W. of Glasgow, 10 N. of Rothesay, 8 W. of Greenock, and 4 W. of Gourock. Its prosperity may be mainly ascribed to the pleasant site it occupies, having in front the famed Frith of Clyde, always studded with numerous sailing and steam vessels. The town extends over considerable space along the shore. For a distance of two miles in both directions there are several ranges of genteel-looking and well-furnished houses for the accommodation of families who resort hither in the summer season for sea-bathing. Intermixed with the lodging houses are many tasteful villas, chiefly occupied by the merchants and professional gentlemen of Glasgow, &c., for country retirement. There are also several good hotels. It is only since the year 1821 that Dunoon has become a place of resort for sea-bathing. At that time there were only three slated houses in the place, and the population did not number above 100. In 1835 a wooden pier was constructed, 300 feet long and 12 broad, with a projection nearly at right angles with the end, 90 feet long and 20 broad. This substantial and convenient work cost £1,500. A new pier was opened in or about 1856, at a cost of £8,000, and a further sum of £1,000 was expended on it in 1861. About a mile distant, at KIRN, is another pier, similarly constructed; and two miles north-east is Hunter's Quay, a good stone building, with a projection and slip, erected in 1828. Here is the Royal Clyde Yacht Club House, in connection with which is an annual regatta on the Clyde. Nearly a mile further, at the entrance of Holy Loch, on its southern shore is Hafton House, an elegant mansion, occupying a pleasant and picturesque situation, amid thriving plantations and tastefully arranged pleasure grounds. A little to the west of the pier at Dunoon is a cone shaped green mound, about 80 feet in height, with the ruins of a castle on its summit. This castle was formerly regarded as one of the most formidable strongholds on the coast of Argyllshire, and has been the scene of many stirring events and feudal conflicts. Dunoon is not without its share in the history of Queen Mary, who visited her sister, Lady Jane Stuart, at Dunoon Castle, about 1563.

The parish church was built in 1816, and considerably enlarged in 1835, and contains at present nearly 900 sittings; it is a Gothic edifice, with a square tower, and stands on the most elevated point of Dunoon. It is said that there was once a nunnery on its site. The graves of Bishops Boyd and M'Lean are to be seen in the burial ground of the church, covered with massive freestone slabs, having upon them armorial bearings and inscription, which are, however, nearly obliterated. A chapel of ease to Dunoon was erected near Toward Lighthouse, 7 mile S.W., in 1836-7, by subscription; it is a neat Gothic structure, containing 200 sittings, and cost £400. In 1823, a United Presbyterian church was erected in Argyll street, with 300 sittings; but this being found insufficient, a new one was built at a short distance from the old one, in 1874, at a cost of about £8,000. The old church is now used for services in the Gaelic and English tongue. The foundation stone of a new Free church was laid in July, 1876, by Alexander Stephen, Esq., of Fearann Colbie, now of Kelly; it is built of stone, in the French Gothic style of architecture, and cost upwards of £13,000. Mr. Robert A. Bryden, Glasgow, was the architect. A Scotch Episcopal church, an English Episcopal church, also chapels each for Baptists and Roman Catholics—all neat buildings—are the other places of worship in the town and immediate neighbourhood. There are also several public and private boarding and day schools. The police station is a neat stone building in the early Scotch style of architecture. Two churches, one for the Establishment and the other for the United Presbyterians, are situated at KIRK, and an English Episcopal church was erected in 1838 at Hunter's Quay, by John Anderson, Esq. of Glen Tower. A short distance on the road from Dunoon to Sandbank is the West of Scotland Convalescent Sea-side Homes. This institution, originated and promoted by the late Miss Beatrice Clugston, of Glasgow, was opened on the 14th of August, 1869, for the purpose of affording sea-air, bathing, &c., to those invalids whose circumstances prevent them from regaining in any other way the health and strength necessary to resume their work. The building is a magnificent stone erection in the Romanesque style of architecture. It was originally intended for a hydropathic establishment on an extensive scale, and cost about £12,000, and is capable of accommodating over 200 inmates. The Burgh Hall, Argyll street, built in 1873, is well worthy of mention. It is a handsome stone building, and contains a fine assembly room, which is sometimes occupied by London and provincial dramatic companies, &c. A sheriff and small debts court is held here every m.m. Fairs are held at Dunoon on the third Thursday in January and February. There are three weekly newspapers published in the neighbourhood, the Dunoon Herald at Dunoon, and the Argyllshire Standard and Dunoon Observer at Sandbank. Excellent golf links have been made near Kirk. The population of the united parishes of Dunoon and Kilmun was in 1881, 8,092, and in 1891, 8,620, of which the town of Dunoon contained 5,235.

INNELLAN is a thriving and respectable village, 4 miles w. of Dunoon, on the shores of the Firth of Clyde. The houses are mostly of a first class order, and the grounds adjoining being tastefully laid out, give them a neat appearance, many being the summer residences of the Glasgow merchants. There are an Established church, a Free church, an Episcopalian, and a United Presbyterian church, and a good school. The Royal Hotel, which deserves particular notice, is built on an elevated site; its dimensions are large and imposing. In front is the pier, at which steamers to and from Glasgow, Greenock and Wemyss Bay call several times a day. A few miles further on is Castle Toward, a massive modern edifice, erected by the late Kirkman Finlay, Esq., and now the residence of Colin C. Finlay, Esq. The grounds contain the ruins of the ancient castle, at one time the seat of the family of Lamont of Ardlamont. Population in 1881, 859, and in 1891, 1,029.

GLENLEA (or CLACHAIG) is a village in the parish of Dunoon, from 6 to 7 miles n.w. therefrom.

SANDBANK (or ARDNADAM) is a small but thriving village 3 miles n.w. of Dunoon, on the road to Kilmun. There are two churches in the village, one for the Establishment and the other a Free church. There is also a good school, several respectable shopkeepers and traders, and three hotels. Population of Sandbank in 1881, 570, and in 1891, 709.

INVERCHALAIN (or INVERALLAN) is a parish in Cowal district, between 4 and 5 miles s.w. of Dunoon, and is intersected by an arm of the sea called Loch Striven, running about eight miles into the country, the two sides of which present a sea coast of about three miles. The district is mountainous and pastoral. There is a church of the Establishment and a Board school in the parish. Population in 1881, 407, and in 1891, 359.

KILFAN is a parish and village in Cowal district, the latter about 10 miles n.w. from Tigh-na-Bruaich. The parish church is in the village, as well as a Free church and a Board school. MILL-

HOUSE and ARDLAMONT are districts in the southern portion of the parish. There is an Established church at KILBRIDE, a Free church at Millhouse, and Board schools at Ardlamont and Millhouse. Population of the parish in 1881, 2,153, and in 1891, 2,070.

KILMODAN is also a parish in Cowal district. The Clachan of Glendaruel in this parish is about 17 miles n.w. of Dunoon. There are an Established and a Free church, as well as two Board schools in the parish. Population in 1881, 322, and in 1891, 351.

TIGH-NA-BRUAICH is a village in the parish of Kilmun, pleasantly situated on the west bank of the Kyles of Bute. An Established and a Free church and a Board school are in the village; there are likewise two good hotels. Population in 1881, 771, and in 1891, 1,032.

COLINTRAIVE is a small village in the parish of Inverchalcain, also situated in the Kyles of Bute. It contains a Free church and Board school, also a good hotel.

EASDALE AND LUING.

SHUNA, TORSAY, BELNAHUA & FLADDA ISLANDS, WITH MELFORT, KILNINVER, KILMELFORT, & NEIGHBOURHOODS.

EASDALE is a village partly situated on the island of that name, and partly on the island of Seil, from which it is separated by a narrow sound; and in the united parish of KILBRANDAN and KILCHATTAN. It is 16 miles S.W. by S. of Oban, 30 N.W. of Lochgub, head, 40 W. of Inveraray, and 142 W. of Edinburgh. It is chiefly remarkable for its slate quarries, which are said to have been open for three centuries; they are the property of the Marquis of Breadalbane, and are wrought by the Easdale Slate Company, who employ about 250 men, and produce about 15,000 tons of slate annually, of a superior quality, which is exported to all parts of Scotland and the North of England. Several of the quarries are above two hundred and fifty feet below the sea, and are kept dry by pumping with steam engines. The geological formation of the slate rock here is similar, as to stratification and cleavage, to the Welsh rock; and the island of Easdale, which is nearly a mile in circumference, is entirely formed of this rock, except a few trap dykes which here and there intersect it. There is a good quay for shipping the slate, and safe anchorage in the sound, through which the Glasgow steam boats pass almost daily to and from the north. A pier was erected in 1873, at which the steamers call regularly. Ardmaddy Castle, an ancient seat of the Breadalbane family, about two miles east of Easdale, is situated on a fine pleasant bay; the grounds are well wooded and contain several pretty cascades. A marble quarry was wrought near the castle over a century ago. Lead mines have been worked in the island of Luing; and there are several caves in Kilbride well worth visiting. Portmary slate quarries, which were opened nearly a century ago, have lately been leased by Mr. A. McColl. The slates are of first-class quality and command a ready and extensive sale. There is good quay accommodation. Cuan slate quarries, adjoining the above, are also leased by the same gentleman. The slates are of a blue colour, and at the quay lately erected at Cuan, vessels are loaded in any state of weather or tide. New houses have recently been built at Portmary for the workmen employed there. Population of Easdale in 1891, 700.

At TOBERONACHY, slate quarries were opened about eight years ago by the lessees, Messrs. J. & A. McLean. There is good quay accommodation, and vessels can be loaded at almost any state of the tide. In 1891 the village had a population of 209.

BELNARUA, a small island to the north of Scarba, contains several quarries of excellent blue slate, at present wrought by Messrs. D. & J. McLean & Co. The number of men generally employed is about thirty. Population in 1891, 65.

SKUNA is a small island lying off the coast of Nether Lorn, in Kilbrandon parish, situated 14 miles s.w. of Oban. FIADDA, Luing, and Torsay are also small islands in the above parish.

MELFORT is a village, pleasantly situated at the head of Loch Melfort, a mile off the main road, and in the united parish of Kilbrandon and Kilmelfort. It is about 8 miles s.e. of Easdale, and 15½ s.w. of Oban. There is a convenient quay for the use of shipping, and in the village is a public school under the charge of the Kilbrandon and Kilmelfort School Board.

KILBRANDON and KILMELFORT form a united parish in Lorn district, lying on the west coast to the south of Kilmore. The Kilmelfort part of the parish lies south of Kilbrandon. There are public schools at both the above places, and a church of the Establishment at Kilbrandon. Population in 1881, 405.

INVERARAY,

WITH FURNACE, CAIRNDOW, CLADICH, DALMALLY, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

INVERARAY is a royal burgh, and the county town of Argyllshire, 102 miles w. by N. of Edinburgh, 60 N.W. of Glasgow, 32 s.e. of Oban, by Port Bonachan Ferry, and 42 by Dalmally, avoiding the ferry, 20 s.e. of Bonaw by the before-mentioned ferry, but 32 by the coach road and Dalmally, 24 N.E. of Lochgilphead, and 76 N.E. of Campbeltown. It is delightfully situated on the north-western shore of Loch Fyne, on a point of land (Ardreanich, or the Fern Point), forming a southern point of a fine bay, which receives the waters of the Aray and the Shira. Over the first is an elegant stone bridge of two arches, within half a mile of the town; the second is about a mile and a half east, and is crossed by a bridge of one arch. From the former of these streams the town derives its name, "Inver" signifying the mouth, from its proximity to the mouth of the Aray. A short distance from the town, at the extremity of the bay, stands Inveraray Castle, the princely residence of the Duke of Argyll. The architecture of this mansion is highly finished Gothic, with turrets at the angles, and its site is particularly beautiful and commanding. From its southern front there is an expansive view for several miles down Loch Fyne, and of the adjacent lofty mountains, which are adorned with fine plantations to their summits. A square pavilion, rising high above its turrets, supplies light to a gallery (which leads to all the upper chambers) and a spacious hall. The castle contains two beautiful pedestals of red granite, or porphyry, of a very rare kind, discovered by the present duke near the Ross of Mull; two slabs were sent to Aberdeen and converted into pedestals, in forming which it was found to be much superior and to take a higher polish than either the Peterhead or the Aberdeen granite. The late Duke of Sutherland subsequently procured a considerable quantity for the internal improvements of Dunrobin Castle. On entering the bay, the castle has a very majestic appearance, and the woods, that rising for a considerable distance adorn the domain, give the town an appearance of grandeur.

Every stranger is struck with the neatness of the town, which, though small, is well built. The park and grounds of the castle present a drive, almost in a direct line, of about two miles, with several others of great extent, all thrown open to the public. Upon the lawn is a lance gun that belonged to the admiral's ship Florida, one of the "Invincible" armada, blown up in Tobermory bay in 1588, where she was forced to put in through stress of weather. The gun, which was taken from the bay, and is about ten feet in length, is named the "Gunn-a-Cam," or "gleid gun," and is fired on certain occasions.

Loch Fyne terminates about nine miles from the town, and from the fineness of its scenery and the fame of its herrings, is justly remarkable. The value of herrings taken out of the loch in a single season, until within the last twenty or thirty years, frequently amounted to £80,000, but for some years it has hardly yielded any, and the scarcity is supposed to have been the results of trawling. In prosperous seasons there were at times from three hundred to four hundred boats employed at once on its waters. The loch is fifty miles long, and is about ten broad below Loch Gilp, seldom exceeding three above Otter Ferry. From a convenient part of the town, and projecting from the shore, is a well built quay. In the town are two branch banks—one of the National Bank of Scotland, Limited, the other of the Union Bank of Scotland, Limited, and two good hotels and posting houses. A handsome stone building, used as a coffee and reading room, is situated at the neck of the quay, and was erected at a cost of upwards of £1,000, in memory of the late Elizabeth Sutherland, Duchess of Argyll.

Inveraray was erected into a burgh by charter, granted by Charles I. in 1648, and its government is vested in a provost, two bailies, a dean of guild, with eight councillors, a town clerk and a treasurer. The burgh unites with Campbelltown and Oban in this county, and with Ayr and Irvine in Ayrshire, in sending one member to Parliament. The court house and gaol, forming a substantial building of stone, is situated on the shore, and has an imposing appearance when seen from the loch. In it a sheriff's court is held every Friday from 15th January to 15th March, from 3rd or 4th April to 31st July, and from 1st October to 15th December, and quarter sessions on the first Tuesday in March, May, August, and last Tuesday in October; also a borough court occasionally.

On the esplanade may be seen a sculptured stone cross, supposed to be of the date 1400; it is eight feet high, and bears the following inscription—"Hæc est crux nobilium virorum, videlicet, Dondani, Meic Gyllichomghan, Patricii filii ejus, et Macmore, filii Patricii, qui hæc crucem fieri faciébant." (This is the cross of the nobles, viz., Duncan M'Comyn, Patrick, his son, and Ludovick the son of Patrick, who caused this cross to be erected.) The cross was brought from Iona. In a garden near the church is a small obelisk, which marks the place of execution, in the year 1685, of some persons of the name of Campbell, for preaching against the errors of the Romish church. A splendid view can be had of the surrounding scenery from the top of "Dunquialch," which was in olden times a beacon or watchtower, mentioned in Sir Walter Scott's novel, "The Legend of Montrose." The places of worship are the Established church, a neat stone building, surmounted by a spire, situated in the main street, and in which service is performed both in Gaelic and English; a United Presbyterian church, erected in 1836, on land given by D. Paterson, Esq.; a neat Free church, built in 1844, at the south end of the town; and an Episcopal church, a small stone structure, erected in 1886, at a cost of about £1,600, the site being given by the Duke of Argyll. There are also two Board schools here. About a mile and a half north-east of Inveraray is Glen-Sheira, in length about six miles, the scenery through which is exceedingly beautiful—presenting gently sloping hills, whose sides are clothed with wood and rich meadow land, intersected with winding stream and lake (Duloch), the whole furnishing a landscape of no ordinary beauty. Fairs for cattle are held at Inveraray on the last Friday in May, and the last Thursday in October, and a wool market on the third Friday in July; at Glenorchy, on the third Wednesday in March, and fourth Tuesday in November. Population of the burgh in 1881, 864, and in 1891, 822.

CAIRNDOW is a small village in the parish of Kilmorich, situate near the head of Loch Fyne, about 11 miles N.E. from Inveraray. There are an Established church, a Board school, and an hotel, where tourists will find every comfort, anglers being allowed free fishing in the river Kintglas. Here is also the estate of Ardkinglas, the property of G. F. W. Callender, Esq.; the house is at present tenanted by Herbert Strutt, Esq., as a shooting residence. Population in 1891, 267.

CLADICH is a hamlet on Loch Awe, 10 miles N. of Inveraray, and in the united parish of Glenorchy and Inishail; a road to the left leads to Port Sonachan Ferry, three miles distant crossing Loch Awe, by which the distance to Bonaw and Oban is shortened 10 miles; another road from Cladich on the right leads to Dalmlally, and round the head of Loch Awe to Oban. Here is a Board school, an Established church, and a post office, and near to Port Sonachan is a Free Church. An Episcopalian church, a neat stone building, was erected in 1891, at a cost of £1,500, by James Thorpe, Esq., of Ardbrecknish. Population in 1891, 166.

DALMLALLY, 16 miles N.E. of Inveraray, is beautifully situated near the head of Loch Awe, and in view of the vale of Glenorchy. The parish church is situated on the road to Oban; a Free church is also close by, and there is also a Board school. Loch Awe is 23 miles long, and from one to half a mile broad; its most attractive scenery lies between here and Port Sonachan, the hills on each side being thickly clothed with timber, several small islands being interspersed on its surface. On a rock are the fine old ruins of Kilchurn castle, supposed to have been built about 1440, by Sir Colin Campbell, the first knight of Glenorchy. Since the opening of the line to Oban in connection with the Callander and Oban railway, a first-class station has been erected here, and the Dalmlally Hotel is situate within five minutes' walk from the station. Population in 1891, 252.

AT FURNACE, about 8 miles S. from Inveraray, on the western bank of Loch Fyne, are extensive granite quarries, leased and wrought by Messrs. William Sim & Co. Population in 1891, 172.

ISLAND OF ISLAY,

INCLUDING BOWMORE, BRIDGEND, BRUICHLADDICH, PORT-ASKAIG, PORT-CHARLOTTE, PORT-ELLEN, ARDBEG, PORTNAHAVEN, BALLYGRANT, AND THEIR VICINITIES.

ISLAY is a large island, and the most southerly of those called the Hebrides. In length from north to south it is about thirty miles, its extreme breadth about eighteen, and its contents about 154,000 acres. Port-Askraig, the most northerly port on the island, is distant from Edinburgh (by way of Tarbert) 170 miles, from Inveraray 76, and from Tarbert, 40. It lies in a westerly direction from the peninsula of Cantire, distant from it about 20 miles, and is separated on the north from the Island of Jura by a narrow channel. It comprises three parochial divisions, namely, Bowmore (or Kilarrow), Kilchoman and Kildalton. The mountains to the east of the island rise to an altitude of 1400 feet, and are the resort of eagles, falcons and other birds; and great numbers of seals are to be found along the coast. The shore is very rugged, but in some parts has fine flat beaches and sandy bays, and the face of the country is finely varied by hill and dale. Many parts are well planted, and the island contains several beautiful lakes, well-stocked with most delicious trout; there are also two rivers, the Sorn and the Laggan; the former empties itself into Loch Indaal, and the latter into Laggan Bay. The Laggan water is not surpassed in the West Highlands as a salmon stream. In boisterous weather many vessels come into Loch Indaal for shelter. Near the centre of the island is Loch Finlaggan, about three miles in circumference, with an islet of the same name in the middle. It was here the Macdonalds (Lords of the Isles), resided in all the pomp of royalty, and the ruins of their castle can yet be seen. Near the island of Finlaggan is another little isle, called Eilan-na-caille—the island of council—where a body of judges constantly sat to decide differences between the subjects of the Macdonalds. On the first island were buried the wives and the children of the Lords of the Isles, but their own persons were deposited in the more sacred ground of Iona. Before Islay became the seat of government of the Lords of the Isles, it appears to have been under the dominion of the Danes and Norwegians, as there are many duns and castles, evidently of Danish origin, besides many places which have Danish names. The land is tolerably cultivated, but it is still susceptible of great improvement. Upwards of three thousand head of black cattle, and several hundred horses of the Clydesdale breed, are annually exported, besides sheep. An immense quantity of whisky, the produce of the distilleries in the island, is also exported to Glasgow, England and America. Lead and iron are said to abound in this island, and a company was formed, called the Islay Mining Company, for extracting some of those minerals, which has, however, suspended operations for the present, on account of the fall in the price of lead. There is regular daily communication by steamer from Port-Ellen, and on Tuesday and Friday from Port-Askraig, with Glasgow and West Tarbert on the main land. There are many ruinous remains of ancient castles, churches, &c., scattered over the island; but, perhaps, the most remarkable natural curiosity in this part of the empire is Sloc-Mhaol-Doraidh, a large basin formed in the rock by the action of the sea, on the south-west point of Laggan Bay, about nine miles from Bowmore, into which the turbulent waters of the western ocean rush by two channels in the rock, covered with natural arches; the grandeur of the scene presented during the flowing of the tide is inconceivable. This cave is scarcely inferior to the famed one of Fingal, in Staffa, and can be only entered by a boat in fine weather. At the entrance stands a perpendicular rock, fifty feet high, with a belt round it, and is designated the "soldier," from appearing to guard the approach to it. The interior is doom-roofed and spacious, with a beautiful lake of fresh water "icy cold and crystal clear." There are several other interesting perforations in different parts of the island. The scenery in this locality, as well as several other points, is highly interesting, and occasionally approaches the sublime. It was on this coast that on the 27th of April, 1847, the Ezmouth was wrecked, when two hundred and forty-eight of the crew and passengers perished. Population of Islay in 1881, 7,526, and in 1891, 7,353.

BOWMORE is the principal place on the island. It was founded in 1763, and is situated on the east side of Loch Indaal, 3 miles S. of Islay House, 11 S.W. from Port-Askraig, and the same from Port-Ellen and Port-Charlotte. The village, which consists of two principal streets and several smaller ones diverging, possesses a good quay and a comfortable inn. It is a place of some business, several trading vessels belonging to it. The public structures are the parish church, a circular edifice, with a peculiarly formed spire; a neat Free church, a Baptist chapel, a union workhouse, a large public hall, with sitting accommodation for over 500 persons, and a building originally intended for a gaol, but now appropriated to the more beneficial uses of a public library, containing about 1,800 volumes. An assembly room is on the same floor as the library. There is also a large and excellent public school, with a house for the master. A sheriff's court is held here four times a year. There is a distillery worked by the Bowmore Distillery Co. The Bowmore and the Seaview Hotels are the principal in the village. Population in 1881, 884.

BRUICHLADDICH is a small village in the parish of Kilchoman, 8 miles from Bowmore, on the road to Port-Charlotte. Here are a large distillery, a temperance hotel, and post office; there is also a quay at which vessels of considerable burden can unload in fine weather.

At BRIDGEND, 3 miles N. of Bowmore, and 8 S. of Port-Askraig, is a branch of the National Bank of Scotland, Limited, which greatly facilitates the commercial transactions of the island. A court is held monthly for the recovery of small debts, and sessions for the trial of petty offences. A short distance to the west stands Islay House, surrounded with fine gardens and well planted grounds; it is situated at the head of Loch Indaal, of which it commands a fine view, as well as of the adjacent country.

PORT-ASKAIG is a small creek or harbour on the north-east side of the island, opposite Feoline, in Jura, from which it is separated by the sound of Islay, about a mile broad. The port is 11 miles N.E. of Bowmore, and has a quay where vessels of considerable burden can load and unload at low water. Here lobsters are found in great abundance.

About 4 miles from Bridgend, on the road to Port-Askraig, is the village of BALLYGRANT, where there is a lead mine, which when working gives employment to a number of hands. The lead is of first-rate quality, and contains a small quantity of silver.

PORT-CHARLOTTE is a small village in the parish of Kilchoman, on the west side of Loch Indaal, nearly opposite to Bowmore; it is 16 miles S.W. of Port-Askraig, and contains a good inn, a distillery, and an excellent school erected by Charles Morrison, Esq. Population in 1881, 502.

PORT-ELLEN is a seaport and village in the parish of Kildalton, on the east side of the island; it is 11 miles S.E. of Bowmore, and 22 S. of Port-Askraig. In 1824 there stood only one house here, but in 1886 there were above one hundred and fifty; the population and habitations have greatly increased since then. The bay is considered safe, and is nearly a mile wide. The quay, a commodious one, formed on a rocky promontory near the middle of the harbour, was erected in 1826, and enlarged and improved in 1882, by Campbell of Islay, who also erected a light-house, and was again further enlarged and improved in 1881, by John Ramsay, Esq. J.P., of Kildalton. Mr. Ramsay became proprietor of the parish of Kildalton (which includes the quoad sacra parish of Oa), in 1863, and during his proprietorship he has expended more than half the rental of the parish in agricultural improvements, including stone walls and farm steadings of uncommon stability. A branch of the Royal Bank of Scotland is established here. The village is substantially built, and contains two inns. The inhabitants are principally employed in agriculture and fishing, and the prosperity of the village may be said to have been increasing for several years. Population in 1881, 989; of Kildalton and Oa, 2,262.

About 4 miles E. from Port Ellen are the villages of LAGAVULIN and ARDBEG. At the latter place is one of the largest distilleries in the island; and there is a commodious harbour, with a quay, at which vessels of 12 feet draught of water can lie and discharge at ebb tide.

PORTNAHAVEN is a small village and seaport, 24 miles S.W. of Port-Askraig, and 16 S.W. of Bridgend. It is at the southern extremity of the island, having a quay formed by the rocks on the shore; and near the port is a lighthouse, erected in 1824-5. Here are also a parliamentary church, a Free church, and a public school. A considerable business is done in the season of fishing, the shores on this part of the island abounding with the finny treasures. Population in 1881, 361.

The fairs held in the island of Islay are as follows:—For cattle, Bridgend, last Wednesday in April, last Tuesday in June, July, August and September. At Bowmore, February, Tuesday if 12th, or first Tuesday after; August 12th, if Friday, or first Friday after, for horses; November for horses; Friday, if 12th, or first Friday after; for cattle, Tuesday before. At Bridgend, for cattle and horses, Tuesday before second last Wednesday in October. At Bridgend, for cattle, second last Wednesday in May. At Port-Elfen for horses and cattle, in November, day before that at Bowmore.

JURA, an island of the Hebrides, is 33 miles long, and from two to 10 broad, separated from Knapdale, on the western coast of Scotland, by the sound of Jura (10 miles broad), and from the island of Islay, to the south, by the sound of Islay (about a mile broad), and with the other islands form the united parish of Jura and Colonsay. Jura belongs to James Campbell, Esq., whose residence is at Ardfin, a fine mansion on the south shore of the island. It is the most rugged of the Western Isles, being composed chiefly of huge rocks piled one on another in the utmost disorder. The west side of the island is wild, intersected by numerous torrents, which come rushing down from the mountains. The inhabitants all live on the east side of the island. The most remarkable objects on the isle are the Paps of Jura, an eminence nearly 2,500 feet above the level of the sea; they are three in number, standing on the same ridge, but having two valleys separating them, the tops being round, and consisting for some distance down the sides of loose stones, rendering the ascent difficult; the southern one is called "Benachao-lais" (the Mountain of Sound), the next and highest, "Benavoir" (the Mountain of Gold), and the third "Ben-shnauta" (the Consecrated Mountain). There are five of the three conical peaks, but only three of them are distinguished as the Paps. Corrabhan (the steep peak) is the most precipitous, but lowest of the cluster. The island also contains several caves, one of them being so large that it is said a regiment of soldiers might perform their exercise in this spacious arena. To the north of the island, in a strait, nearly a mile broad, separating the Island of Scarba from Jura, is the gulf of Correy Vreckn, where the rush of water is so great during the ebbing of the tide, as to form a terrible whirlpool, the noise of which can be heard for many miles. The red deer abounds in the uplands of this island. Fairs are held on the second and last Friday in May, Friday after last Tuesday in June, Friday after last Thursday in July, and the second last Friday in October, all for cattle. Population in 1881, 781, and in 1891, 612

WITH THE VILLAGES OF STRONE, BLAIRMORE, ARDENTINNY, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

KILMUN, formerly the capital of a parish of the same name, now incorporated with that of Dunoon, is a pleasant, thriving village, and of late years has acquired no little notice as a place resorted to for sea bathing. It is situated on the north shore of Holy Loch, 22 miles S.E. of Inveraray, 16 S.E. of Strachur, 7 N. of Dunoon, 80 W. of Glasgow, and 8 W. of Greenock. This place may be almost said to owe its origin to the late proprietor, David Napier, Esq., for previously to attracting his notice there were very few houses, whereas it is now a respectable village, having many handsome dwellings, occupied as summer residences by opulent merchants and professional gentlemen of Glasgow. Holy Loch is fully three miles long; at its entrance it is scarcely a mile wide, but within it expands to a fine sheet of water, extending a mile and a half in width; at its head it receives the lesser and greater Echaig, the latter river flowing from Loch Eck, a beautiful fresh water lake, seven miles long and one broad, whose steep, rugged shores, rising to a considerable height, form a striking contrast on a fine day to its wide placid waters. Both the loch and the two rivers before mentioned afford plenty of sport to the angler, and the ride through the valley to Strachur or Loch Fyne is seldom exceeded for wild and sublime scenery. The quay, which was constructed by Mr. Napier, before mentioned, in 1829, will admit the steamboats alongside at all times of the tide. The quarantine station for the Clyde was formerly opposite this village.

Of the ancient history of Kilmun, little is known; but its old church, the mausoleum of the ducal family of Argyll, and especially the tower of the original church, evidence it to have been in former times a place of some note. Close by the church of Kilmun stands a square and dilapidated tower, which, as if to avert further decay, nature has covered with a mantle of ivy, which hangs in graceful festoons from its mouldering walls. In the church is the sepulchre of the Argyll family, which contains the mortal remains of six dukes and two duchesses. Near the sepulchre are statues of a lady and of an armed warrior, supposed to be Donnachie-an-aidh, or Fortunate Duncan; and suspended above are sundry warlike habiliments in a state of decay. About a quarter of a mile westward of the village is the Kilmun Seaside Home for Convalescent Poor, a handsome stone building, pleasantly situated, commanding a fine view of Holy Loch and the opposite shore. Population of Kilmun in 1881, 831, and in 1891, 867.

STRONE, a small village, which nearly joins Kilmun, has greatly improved within the last few years, many respectable houses and shops having been built, besides the erection of two churches. There is also a quay, which will admit steamers alongside at all hours of the tide. Population in 1891, 379.

PORTINSTOCK (or BLAIRMORE), on the west shore of Loch Long, adjoining Strone, is a small but improving village of recent erection. There is a neat wooden pier here. Population in 1891, 244.

ARDENTINNY, another small village about five miles higher up the loch, is situated in a beautiful vale, and celebrated for the picturesque scenery its neighbourhood affords. There is a neat stone church of the Establishment and a Board school here. Population in 1891, 203.

LOCHGILPHEAD.

ARDRISHAIG, BELLANOECH, KILMARTIN, KILMICHAEL, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

LOCHGILPHEAD is a thriving burgh, pleasantly situated at the northern extremity or head of Loch Gilp, from which the name is derived. It is 125 miles w. of Edinburgh, 51 n. of Campbeltown, 24½ s.w. of Inverary, 13½ n. of Tarbert, and 8 s. of Kilmartin. The town is of comparatively modern erection, and its site contained only two or three fishermen's huts at the commencement of the present century; it now consists of several well-formed streets, the footpaths of which are well paved, and the inhabitants are plentifully supplied with water from a reservoir constructed by the burgh commissioners. The streets are lighted by gas. Lochgilphead was constituted a burgh under the Act 25 and 26 Victoria, cap. 101, and is governed by nine commissioners of police, including one senior and two junior magistrates appointed under the provisions of the said Act. Under the Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889, Argyshire was created a county council, the meetings being held in May, October and December, at Dunoon, Lochgilphead, and Oban alternately. The inhabitants are principally employed in agriculture and fishing. Meetings of the Argyll Police and Lunacy Boards are held at stated periods, also monthly meetings of the Mid-Argyll district committee of the county council and of the local justices, and a sheriff's small debt court is held every alternate month. Lochgilphead is rapidly improving; in front of the main street a part of the loch has been embanked, and a piece of ground made for the convenience of the large cattle fairs or markets. The town is connected by numerous excellent roads with all parts of the county, and a line of telegraph also connects it with Campbeltown, Inverary, Oban, the Islands of Mull and Islay, &c., and Glasgow. On the Kilmory side is a quay for the accommodation of the small craft engaged in the herring fishery and coal vessels.

The parliamentary church, erected at the head of Argyll street, in 1878, was rebuilt in 1886, at a cost of £2,500. The building is of native stone, with freestone facings, in a early Gothic style. There is a Baptist chapel in the same street, a Reformed Presbyterian church, now Martyr's Free church, in Union street, a Free church in Lochell street, and there was erected in 1852, on the north side of the town, a handsome Scotch Episcopal cathedral church. The latter is a neat building in the decorated Gothic style of architecture, and consists of a nave and chancel, the windows of which latter are of stained glass with a figure of our Saviour and the arms of Argyll and the Isles. There is also a residence for the Bishop of Argyll and the Isles; this is at present occupied by Rev. F. E. Ramsay, M.A. the Bishop preferring to reside at Ballachulish. There are Board schools here. The site commands an extensive view of Loch Fyne to Arran, and the varied and beautiful scenery around. The burgh possesses a commodious court-house and gaol. The Argyll and Bute District Asylum, which has been considerably enlarged, and is capable of containing over 400 persons, is situated on the hill overlooking the town, and a combination porchouse has also been erected there. The Crinan canal passes a few hundred yards to the west of the town, and separates it from Anichendarroch, the residence of Alexander Campbell, Esq., on whose property the greater part of the town is built. A mile to the south-east is Kilmory House, the seat of Sir John Powlett Campbell Orde, Bart.; the house, surrounded with its well-wooded grounds, forms a conspicuous and interesting feature in the landscape from all parts of the loch, especially from Ardrishaig, which is nearly opposite. Ten miles north-west is Duntroon Castle, the property of John Malcolm, Esq., of Pottaloch, who possesses extensive demesnes in this part of the county, and on whose estate above two thousand acres of soft peat moss, at the head of Loch Crinan, have been converted into excellent corn and grazing land; the farm is appropriately called "Experiment." Pottaloch House, the elegant residence of this gentleman, erected at a cost of about £20,000, overlooks the fertile plain which has been thus reclaimed. Fairs are held on the third Thursday in March for horses, on the second Wednesday after the last Wednesday in May, and the second Wednesday after the last Wednesday in October for black cattle, and on the second Thursday after the fourth Thursday in November for horses. Population in 1887, 1,489, and in 1891, 1,820

ARDRISHAIG is 2 miles s. of its inhabitants being chiefly engaged in fishing and curing herrings, and in the transit trade which connects the Western Highlands with Glasgow and the other ports on the Clyde. This place may be said to be the port of Lochgilphead, with which it is now nearly joined. In addition to a protective pier of 400 yards in length, with a small lighthouse at its extremity, a commodious low-water pier and slip within the harbour, with a depth of seven feet, were erected in 1837 by the Government commissioners of the Crinan canal. This canal extends from Ardrishaig to Crinan, a distance of ten miles, and affords the means of obviating a boisterous passage of forty leagues round the Mull of Cantire. Steam packets pass through the canal on their way from Glasgow to all parts of the western coast, and by the Caledonian canal to Inverness. Here is an Established church, also a Free church, and a Board school. The Royal Hotel is the principal one in the neighbourhood. Many excellent sites are along the coast; several have already been built on, and some villas are let furnished as summer quarters, the increased communication with the south making it a favourite coast residence. Population in 1831, 1,324, and in 1891, 1,262.

BELLANOECH is a small village in the parish of North Knapdale, about 5 miles w. of Lochgilphead, situated in a glen on the southern bank of the Crinan canal, which here forms a fine triangular sheet of water, and terminates at Crinan, about a mile further west. The village contains a post office and a Board school. Population in 1891, 223.

KILMARTIN, a parish and small village, 8 miles n. of Lochgilphead, contains a comfortable inn, a Board school, a parish church and a Free church. About two miles to the east is Pottaloch House, the residence of John Malcolm, Esq. of Pottaloch; about a quarter of a mile more distant, standing on a prominent rock facing Loch Crinan, is Duntroon Castle, and within four miles of the last named are the beautiful ruins of Carnazarie Castle, formerly the residence of the bishops of Argyll. Eleven miles west of Kilmartin, by a circuitous road, is Craignish Castle, the residence of Charles F. T. Gascoigne, Esq. of Craignish. At BARBEROCK is the handsome mansion and demesne of Admiral Colin Yorke Campbell. Fairs are held at Kilmartin on the first Thursday in March, for horses, and the fourth Thursday in November, for horses and hiring servants. A prize show in connection with the Pottaloch Farming Society is held here for cattle, sheep, and horses, in September. The parish has an area of 25,102 acres, and in 1881 contained a population of 811, and in 1891, 695.

KILMICHAEL-GLASSARY, at one time a burgh of considerable reputation, now a small hamlet, is a parish situated about midway between Lochgilphead and Kilmartin. The parish church and manse of Glassary are here. A Board school, a market stance, and a good inn are at BRIDGEEND, on the river Add, half a mile west of Kilmichael. Between Kilmichael and Kilmartin there are numerous druidical remains. Two large and well frequented fairs are held here annually, at which from seven to eight thousand head of black cattle are generally exposed for sale—namely, on the last Wednesday in May, which is also for horses and sheep, and the last Tuesday before the last Wednesday in October—at both of which fairs the hiring of servants takes place. Population of the parish in 1881, 4,848, and in 1891, 3,586.

LOCHGOILHEAD,

WITH THE VILLAGES OF CARRICK, ST. CATHERINE'S, STRACHUR, AND STRATHLACHLAN, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

LOCHGOILHEAD, with KILMORICH, is an united parish in Cowal district, situated at the head of Loch Goil, between Lochs Fyne and Long. An Established and a Free church and a Board school are in the village. The place is mountainous and chiefly pastoral, and has beautiful surroundings of wood, water, and glen. Daily communication is maintained with Greenock and Glasgow by steamer, and by coach with St. Catherine's for Inveraray. CRINAN and CARRICK are hamlets in this parish. Population in 1881, 870, and in 1891, 790.

STRACHUR is a village on the eastern bank of Loch Fyne, in the united parish of Strachur and Strathlachlan, and is situated 19 miles N.W. from Dunoon. There are two churches of the Establishment, one at Strachur and the other at Strathlachlan, also a Free church at the former place, and three Board schools in the parish.

ST. CATHERINE'S is a small village in the united parish of Strachur and Strathlachlan, and is situated about 8½ miles N.E. from Strachur and 9 N.W. from Lochgoilhead. There is a Board school here, and also a good hotel. Population in 1891, 478.

OBAN,

ACH-NA-CLOICH, CONNELL FERRY, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

OBAN is a modern neat town and seaport, in the parish of Kilmore and Kilbride, 136 miles W.W.W. from Edinburgh, 117 N.W. from Glasgow, 40 S.W. from Fort William, 83 W.W.W. from Inveraray, and 80 S.E. from Tobermory. To visit Staffa and Iona hence, going round the Island of Mull, the voyage is about 120 miles, and it is about the same distance to Portree, in Skye. The town has a beautiful situation on west coast of Midloren district, and at the head of a fine bay, formed by the Island of Kerrara in front, having an entrance at each end. The bay is from 12 to 20 fathoms deep, is well sheltered by lofty mountains, and large enough to anchor with convenience a good number of merchantmen. There are three quays, which have been enlarged and improved, so as to afford ample accommodation to the various vessels frequenting the port. The imports of Oban consist chiefly of merchandise from Glasgow, Liverpool and Ireland, and its principal exports are whiskey, wool and sheep dip. The municipal government of the town is vested in a provost, two bailies, four councillors, and a town clerk, and Oban is contributory with the burghs of Ayr, Campbeltown, Inveraray, and Irvine in returning one member to Parliament, the present representative being William Birkmyre, Esq. The new Sheriff Court House and Police Station were completed in 1889, from the designs of the late Mr. D. Macintosh, of Oban. The Court House, the main entrance to which is in Albany street, contains the offices of the procurator-fiscal the sheriff clerk depute, &c. The style of architecture is the severe classic, the external appearance being commanding and boldly detailed. The front wing is entirely finished with polished freestone, and the back wing of gray granite with freestone dressings. Further along Albany street are the Police Buildings, consisting of the police station and the usual offices, the material employed being granite and freestone to match the back portion of the court house. A sheriff's court is held once a quarter, a justice of peace court for small debts the first Friday of every month, and a police and burgh court on the first Monday of every month. A quarry of excellent freestone was some years since opened, about four miles south, on the shore of Loch Feochan, and in the vicinity of Loch Awe are the well-known Ben Cruachan granite quarries.

The town is divided by a small river, the west side belonging to Robert Macfie, Esq. of Airds, that on the north to Colonel M'Dougall of Dunollie. In the eastern division is the parish church, erected in 1821. The old fabric is now (1889) being demolished, and on its site a new church is to be built at a cost of about £3,000. St. John's Scotch Episcopal church, a neat Gothic edifice, with beautiful stained glass windows, capable of seating 200, was erected by subscription, for the accommodation of the numerous visitors, at a cost of about £1,700; it was consecrated in September, 1864, by the Bishop of London. The Bishop of the diocese and trustees are the patrons. In Tweeddale street is a Congregational chapel, built in 1830, capable of accommodating 500. A handsome Free church occupies a commanding site in the rear of the town. St. Columba church (Established), George street, is an elegant structure with a spire 120 feet high, erected in 1875. The United Presbyterian church, in the neighbourhood of St. John's, was erected in 1866. To meet the requirements of the rapidly rising district of CONNELL FERRY, a church of the Establishment has been erected, and is built entirely of Ben Cruachan granite, occupies a position on a rising piece of ground to the north of the village, and forms a prominent object in the magnificent scenery of the district. The architect was the late Mr. David Macintosh, of Oban. A Free church is now (1889) in course of erection. To the south of the town, a union porchouse was opened in 1862, for the reception of the poor of the several parishes in the district of Lorn; it embraces all necessary accommodation, and, with the ground, covers an area of three acres. There are three newspapers published weekly—the Oban Times, the Oban Telegraph, and the Oban Express. The latter is the only halfpenny paper wholly printed and published in the Scottish Highlands and first appeared March 30th, 1838. The Express, which is a well printed full-sized news sheet, is issued on Friday morning of each week, and advocates Radical principles. Though it is sold at the popular halfpenny, the Express has all the departments of a first-class county paper; it has also a Gaelic column, and a visitors' list appears during the season, and special editions are issued from time to time. The title of the paper is embellished by a view of Oban and its pretty bay. The editor is Mr. Higgins, an old pressman, and the publishing offices are in Craig-ard road.

Oban and its vicinity offer many inducements both to the tourist and antiquarian. Among the antiquities may be particularly noticed the ruins of Dunollie Castle, situated a mile north of the town, and three miles distant is Dunstaffnage Castle. The latter formerly belonged to the powerful Lord of Lorn, and was demolished by Robert Bruce, in retaliation for the injuries inflicted upon him and his followers after crossing Loch Lomond on his way to Ireland, by that noble. In the chapel of the castle is a remarkable echo. Three miles to the south, on the Ardriahga road, there is the "Serpent Mound," at the end of Loch Nell, which has attracted much attention from antiquarians. Six miles to the north, on the opposite side to Loch Etive, are the ruins of Berigonium, the ancient metropolis of Caledonia; and two miles further north is Balcaldine Castle. From a hill on the Island of Kerrara may be seen the distant objects of Duart Castle in Mull, Lady Rock, Ardtornish Castle, in Morven; the Castle of Aros, the Castle of Gyles, Ben Cruachan, Ben Nevis, the Glenoe mountains, Easdale, Luining, &c. The tourist will be well rewarded for his trouble in visiting this place, as it is acknowledged to be the finest view in Scotland. In visiting the castles, &c., the antiquarian will find much gratification, all of them having been the residences of the ancient Scotch nobles, their present appearance even exhibiting proofs of their former state and grandeur. Oban may also be said to rank among the most pleasant summer retreats in the Highlands of Scotland. Its situation for bathing is extremely good, and it possesses every accommodation for the convenience of the great number of fashionable and wealthy visitors who are constantly calling here in the summer, on their way to the fine scenery on the western coast, and in Skye, and to the far-famed island of Staffa and Iona, and who by their presence impart a liveliness and interest to the appearance of the town. There is a fine sandy beach at Ganavan about a mile to the north of the town, which can be approached by boat. The inhabitants of Oban endeavour to imitate the manners and conversation of the visitors, which causes much better English to be spoken, and far more politeness and urbanity of manners to be displayed here than in many other places on this coast. Much improvement has been effected of late years, and many handsome villa residences may be now seen on the hill behind the town; modern shops and warehouses are also superseding the old ones. An Act of Parliament was obtained in 1855 by the Callander and Oban Railway Company, for the construction of a line from Callander to this town, so as to connect it by a direct line of communication with the Lowlands; it was completed and opened through to Oban on 1st of July, 1880. The contractors for the making of the line were Messrs. Mitchell and Ireland, of Montrose, and for the station and pier, Messrs. Duncan Hobson and Sons, Glasgow, the latter of which cost between £50,000 and £60,000. The line from Callander to Oban, a distance of 70 miles, is owned by the Callander and Oban Railway Company, but is worked by the Caledonian Railway Company for them. Steamboats ply between Glasgow, Greenock, Inverness, Mull, Staffa, and Iona daily in summer, to Skye and Stornoway twice a week, and to other places further north once a fortnight during the season, also to Ireland. The coach service is constant and regular. Fairs and markets: for cattle, on the Monday and Tuesday before the last Wednesday in May, and the Friday and Saturday before the last Wednesday in October; for sheep and wool, on the Wednesday after Inverness July market; for horses, on the Tuesday before the fourth Thursday in March, September and November; and for hiring, April and October. At Connell on Monday before the last Wednesday in May, and on Friday before the last Wednesday in October. Population of Oban in 1881, 4,046, and in 1891, 5,000.

ACH-NA-CLOICH, about nine miles from Oban, is a station on the Callander and Oban branch of the Caledonian railway. A pier has been erected, from which a steamer runs to the head of Loch Etive.

SOUTHEND

IS a parish of 30,801 acres, situated at the southern extremity of the peninsular of Kintyre, the village, which is sometimes called Newton Argyll, being 10 miles s. of Campbeltown. Agriculture and fishing are the predominating occupations of the inhabitants, who in the summer reap some advantage from the visits of many strangers to this romantic and interesting part of the country. About half a mile south of the village stands the rock Dounavertie, a spot interesting to the historian and the antiquarian as having been the scene of many sanguinary conflicts, with the details of which the intelligent villagers are conversant—especially the ruthless massacre of three hundred of the M'Donalds here by General Leslie after their capitulation in 1649. Few traces of the castle now remain, but a mile and a half west stands the walls of a church, said to have been founded by St. Columba, who landed in Scotland in 563. It was called Gill-Cholum-Chille, and the burial ground was formerly divided by a small stream, on the north side of which the Highlanders were interred, and on the south side the Lowlanders; but that distinction no longer exists.

On the island of SANDA, about three miles distant, is a lighthouse said to be the best and most efficient one on the coast. A little to the north of the village stands the parish church, and in the village, the United Presbyterian church. The Board school here is a substantial building, and a well conducted institution. Telegraphic communication is complete between the Mull and the principal places in the county and Glasgow. Population of the parish of Southend in 1881 955, and in 1891, 844.

PLACES OF WORSHIP

AND THEIR MINISTERS.

ESTABLISHED CHURCH—Rev. Peter Thomson
UNITED PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH—Rev. Andrew M'Laren Young

MAIL.

To CAMPBELTOWN, a Mail Cart, carrying passengers and parcels, daily at 11 a.m.

TARBERT (EAST AND WEST),

WITH THEIR VICINITIES.

TARBERT, or as it is sometimes designated, EAST TARBERT, is a fishing port and village, situated at the head of a fine sheltered harbour on Loch Fyne. It is 139 miles w. of Edinburgh, 87 n. by e. of Campbeltown, 39 s.s.w. of Inveraray, and is 15 s. of Lochgilphead. The town, or village, may be said to form a semicircle around the harbour—the latter small, and the entrance to it narrow, having several sunken rocks, and consequently difficult of access, but when a vessel has once entered, no water affords more perfect shelter and security. The quays are commodious, and for many years it has been a noted fishing station, particularly for herrings, which are mostly cured for the Glasgow markets. In a commanding situation, overlooking the town and harbour, are the remains of an ancient castle and fortification, formerly a place of great strength, and immediately behind the village, in a southern direction, is the Established church; there are also a Free church and a Board school. Steamers call here daily on their way to and from Glasgow and Ardrishaig; communication is also constant with Inveraray, and a steamer leaves West Tarbert for Islay daily; the village is likewise connected by telegraph with Glasgow, Inveraray, Oban, Lochgilphead, Campbeltown, and the Island of Islay.

WEST TARBERT is one mile distant, at which there also is a good quay. It is seated at the head of a loch of the same name, which commences here, and in a circuitous route winds through the mountains to Ardrishaig, beyond which it empties itself into the ocean. The scenery on either side of the loch is remarkably picturesque, embracing mountain, wood and lawn, with an occasional mansion embosomed in foliage. Two roads branch respectively to the east and west sides of the loch. The road to Ardrishaig winds through a fine well-wooded country. About the sixth mile on this road is Danmore, the residence of Allan Gilmore, Esq.; the house is hid by its plantations from the road, but from its site there is a pleasing view of the loch and the opposite shore. Four miles further on is the domain of Ardrishaig, the residence of Captain James Carter Campbell, Esq., possessing every requisite for a summer residence. At the foot of this domain is a ferry, by which the traveller may pass to the opposite side of West Tarbert loch. From Ardrishaig a road branches to the west; and at a distance of four miles Carso is passed; eight miles beyond this is Drimadrisaig, the property of the late Dugald M'Neill, Esq., the efforts of whose predecessor—the late Lachlan M'Neill, Esq.—proved so successful in improving the breeds of cattle, sheep, &c., in this part of the country. A mile and a half beyond Drimadrisaig is Ormsary, the seat of Walter Campbell, Esq. A road, running by the edge of West Tarbert loch (to save the bill on the main road) past the landing stage of the Islay steamer, has been found a great convenience by passengers going to or returning from Islay. The Royal Mail coach passes daily both going to East Tarbert and returning to Campbeltown. Near the sixth mile stone is the village of WHITEHOUSE, containing a Board school, and about half a mile above the village, is Stonefield, a fine mansion and extensive domain of the Trustees of Colin G. Campbell, Esq. An extensive fair is held at Tarbert on the last Thursday in July, which continues three days, and is for the sale of horses. In 1881 Tarbert contained a population of 1,629, and in 1891, 2,208.

TAYNUILT, BONAW, ARDCHATTAN, LOCH AWE, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

TAYNUILT is a station on the Callander and Oban Railway, about 18 miles E. from Oban, and 22 N. from Inveraray, near Loch Etive. There is an hotel near the station, and anglers can obtain fishing in the famous salmon river Awe.

Two miles E. of TAYNUILT, where a stone bridge crosses the river Awe, is the scene of Sir Walter Scott's tale of the "Highland Widow," and two miles further is the Pass of CRUACHAN, or BRANDER, where King Robert Bruce defeated Macdonald of Lorne, in 1309. Fairs are held at GLENORCHY on the third Wednesday in March and fourth Tuesday in November; and at CONNELL on Saturday before last Wednesday in May, and on Thursday before last Wednesday in October.

BONAW, or BENAWE, is a small scattered village on the river Awe, 122 miles N.W. of Edinburgh, 83 N.W. of Glasgow, 12 E. of Oban, and 20 N. of Inveraray, by Port Sonachan ferry—but round the head of Loch Awe, by Dalnally, avoiding the ferry, it is 93 miles. The manufacture of pig-iron, which at one time flourished here, has now ceased. Bonaw granite quarries, leased by Messrs. J. & J. Gardner, Glasgow, employ about 200 workmen. Bonaw is much celebrated for its salmon fishery, which affords employment to a considerable number of persons in the fishing season. Large quantities of fish are sent fresh in boxes to Glasgow and other parts of Scotland. The church, which was erected in 1827-8, stands near the road to Inveraray, where also is the parish school. The funds for both these structures were supplied by the munificence of General D. Campbell, of Lochmell. A rude block of granite, the first monument erected in Britain to the memory of Lord Nelson, may be seen on an eminence near the village. Since the completion of the Callander and Oban railway, Bonaw is becoming a favourite resort for tourists, several new villas having been built.

At ARDCHATTAN, about 4 miles N.W. on the opposite side of Loch Etive, stand the remains of an ancient priory of the Benedictines, founded in 1252, by McCull, ancestor of the Lords of Lorne. Here Bruce is thought to have held a Gaelic council after the battle of Methven. A church was erected at Ardchattan in 1836, at an expense to the heritors of about £1,000; it contains sittings for four hundred. The objects that most forcibly strike the attention here are Loch Etive and Ben Cruachan—the latter, with its broad shoulders, rearing its blunt-pointed summit 3,670 feet above the sea water that laves his foot. Its circumference at the base is twenty miles. The journey is somewhat fatiguing, but the view obtained from the summit will amply reward the tourist for the trouble of ascending, as it extends over the whole archipelago of the Western Isles from Islay to Skye; previous to rain and other changes of weather, sounds are said to issue from Ben Cruachan. The population of the quoad-sacra parish of Ardchattan was in 1831, 1,370, and in 1891, 1,278.

LOCH AWE is a station on the Callander and Oban line, about 22 miles from Oban, between Lochs Fyne and Etive. There is an Established church, called St. Columba's Kirk, built in 1882, by Walter J. D. Campbell, Esq. of Blythwood. The Loch, which is 21 miles long, and one of the most beautiful, as well as one of the finest fishing lochs in Scotland, is surrounded on the north by huge mountains, of which the highest is Ben Cruachan. Its banks are well wooded, and numerous islands are dotted here and there, one of which (Inishail) formerly existed a convent of the Cistercian monks. The loch abounds with trout. The most convenient hotels for the angler are the Loch Awe, Port Sonachan, Taynertagan, Portnasherrick, and Dalnally hotels, at any of which he will find excellent accommodation.

WITH THE ISLANDS OF MULL, STAFFA, IONA, ULVA, TIRREE AND COLL, AND THE DISTRICTS OF ARDNAMURCHAN AND MORVEN.

TOBERMORY is a thriving seaport and watering place on the north coast of the Island of Mull, 171 miles N.W. of Edinburgh, 61 N.W. of Inveraray, and 30 N.W. of Oban. It encircles the extremity of a fine sheltered bay, and is one of the safest harbours among the western isles, being protected from the wind of Mull by an island called Calve Island, which stretches nearly across the entrance, but leaving ample room at its northern point for the largest vessels to enter the harbour—though few but small craft can effect this at the south-east point, even at high water. About two miles from Tobermory, in the sound of Mull, a lighthouse called the Runagall, was erected in 1857, which has proved of great service to vessels passing that way. The town is between two and three miles from the mainland of Morven, and derives its name from a celebrated well or spring, called "Mary's Well" to which the vulgar superstitiously ascribe many imaginary virtues. The Spanish admiral's ship Florida, one of the "Armada," when at anchor here in 1588, was destroyed by an emissary of Queen Elizabeth's Government. Part of the wood of this vessel was presented to his Majesty George IV., on his visit to Edinburgh, by Sir Walter Scott; and there is in the possession of the Duke of Argyll a large brass gun that belonged to the same vessel, and found many years since in Tobermory bay. On the west side of the town are the remains of an ancient chapel, dedicated to the Virgin, and of a fortification, understood to be of Norwegian origin. Tobermory formerly belonged to the British Society for extending the fisheries and improving the sea coast of the kingdom, but is now the property of Alexander Allan, Esq., of Aros. The town, which was built in 1788, along with Ullapool, by the British Fishing Company, as the site of a fishing establishment and the rendezvous of herring vessels, possesses two quays. A new quay was begun in 1835, by Colonel Campbell, of Knock, which was quite dry at low water; this subsequently proving inadequate has been absorbed in a new quay and pier, undertaken and constructed by F. W. Caldwell, Esq., proprietor of this part of the town, at a cost of upwards of £2,000. It is deeper, more capacious, and in every respect an improvement, and was opened in 1864, with offices, stores, waiting rooms, and a cattle pen. It is a little to the north of the old quay, and nearer to the entrance of the bay. The town has increased considerably in this direction of late years, and the harbour is much frequented both by steamers and sailing vessels, which renders better quay accommodation necessary. As the only town in Mull and a large circumjacent district, both Hebridean and continental, it possesses much provincial importance, and is the seat of a considerable domestic trade. A branch of the Clydesdale Bank, Limited, is established here, and occupies a handsome building of stone, completed in 1865. It is situated in the main street, and contributes much to the improvement of the town. There is also a branch of the North of Scotland Bank, Limited, a fine building.

The places of worship are in connection with the Established, Free and Baptist denominations. The Free church is a neat building, a large proportion of its cost having been defrayed by Alexander Allan, Esq., of Aros, one of the two local proprietors. The Established church is a somewhat plain building, built in 1827-8, but occupies a commanding situation overlooking the bay and island. The public schools adjoin the Established church, and are in every respect a most creditable institution; there is also a female Industrial school. There are four hotels, the principal one being the Western Isles, erected in 1882-8, and is a very fine building, situated on a bold and elevated position above the principal pier. First-class accommodation may also be had at the Royal and Mishnish Hotels. The Temperance Institute, the generous gift of the gentleman named above, includes a reading room, well supplied with newspapers, periodicals, &c., billiard room, circulating library, and hall capable of seating between 300 and 400 persons. In the immediate neighbourhood is a beautiful loch called Mary's Lake, situated between two finely-wooded hills, extremely precipitous in their descent. The tourist will be much gratified by visiting this picturesque spot, the scenery including the three cascades, one of which is particularly grand. Commandingly situated above the town are the County Buildings, a substantial erection of stone, embracing the sheriff's court and procurator fiscal's offices, &c. Here the sheriff substitute holds an ordinary and small debts court every Wednesday during session; a police court is also held here as business requires. Tobermory is the polling station at county elections for all voters residing in the Islands of Mull, Coll, Iona, Tirree, Ulva, and in Morven. By ascending a hill in the neighbourhood, a view of the islands of Tirree, Coll, Eigg, Muck, Skye, and various others of smaller importance is obtained. The union poorhouse, erected for the reception of the poor of the six surrounding parishes, distant rather better than a mile from Tobermory, is capable of accommodating 130 inmates, and cost £7,700. The quoad sacra parish of Tobermory contained in 1881 a population of 1,353, and in 1891, 1,265.

MULL, which is about 26 miles long, and in some places 24 miles broad, has been much improved of late. Benmore, the highest mountain in the island, is said to approach 3,000 feet above the level of the sea. The island contains many remains of ancient castles, &c., among which are those of Duart, once the stronghold of the chief of the Macleans, occupying the brink of a high cliff which shoots out from the coast of Mull into the sound, opposite Oban, and Aros castle, the stronghold of the Lords of the Isles. On the western side, close to the Ross of Mull, is worked a quarry of red granite or porphyry, some of which was employed by the late Duke of Sutherland in the internal improvements of Dunrobin Castle. Fairs in Mull: at Salem, a large horse fair is held on the first Thursday after the 20th of August, or on the 20th if a Thursday, and for cattle and sheep on the Tuesday before the second Wednesday in May, and the Tuesday before the last Wednesday in October; at Craignure, Morven, and the islands of Coll and Tirree, fairs are held a few days before those at Salem. The Mull Agricultural Association, under the presidency of the Duke of Argyll, holds an annual show of cattle and produce at Salem about the middle of September. Population in 1881, 5,229, and in 1891, 4,806.

The celebrated Island of STAFFA is about 8 miles distant from Mull. To give a description of this magnificent production of nature is, it must be confessed, extremely difficult. All who have seen Fingal's Cave concur in the opinion that, when it first burst upon the view, the effect is indescribable—awe and astonishment so completely fill the mind that there is no room for minor emotions. The island when seen from a distance appears a round, lumpy, uninteresting rock, and not until approached within less than a quarter of a mile does it unfold to the visitor the museum of wonders. It is irregularly oval, extending from north to south, and measuring about one mile and a half in circumference; it presents an uneven table-land, resting on cliffs of variable height—the highest point occurring between the "Great Cave" and the "Boat." The caves are so numerous that they may be said to perforate at brief intervals the whole face of the island; but those that occur on the south and north sides are remarkable neither for their beauty, nor for magnitude; and five on the north-east are distinguished chiefly for making loud reverberations when the surge of the sea breaks into them, and which resemble the distant discharge of heavy ordnance. Proceeding towards the south from the landing place, the objects of chief interest which challenge the visitor's notice and admiration are—first the Scallop, or Clamshell Cave; second, Buachaille, or Herdsman; third, the Causeway and the Face, or Colonnade; four, Fingal's or Great Cave; fifth, the Boat Cave; sixth, the Cormorants, or Mackinnon's Cave. At the Scallop, or Clamshell Cave, the columns on one side are bent so as to form a series of ribs, not unlike the inside of a ship; it is 30 feet in height, 16 to 18 feet in breadth at the entrance, and its length is about 130 feet. The rock Buachaille the Herdsman is a pile of columns about 30 feet high, visible only at low water. The Causeway here presents an extensive surface. It is formed of the broken ends of columns, once continuous to the height of the cliffs. This alone exceeds the noted "Giant's Causeway," as well in dimensions as in the diversity of its surface. The Great Face is formed of three distinct beds of rocks, of unequal thickness, inclined towards the east in an angle of about nine degrees. It is only with the morning sun that the Great Face of Staffa can be seen in perfection, as the general surface is undulating and uneven; great masses of light and shadow are thus produced, so as to relieve that which, in direct light, appears a flat, insipid mass of strong wall. The Cormorants, or Mackinnon's Cave (though little visited in consequence of the fraud and indolence of the boatmen) is easy of access, and terminates in a gravelly beach, where a boat may be drawn up. The Boat Cave is accessible only by the sea. Staffa is visited five or six times a week by the steamboat from Oban: the visitors are generally landed at Fingal's Cave, and stay about an hour on the island to examine its wonders.

The far-famed island of IONA, or IOLMKEILL, or IOLCUMB-KILL, or I (pronounced Ee), the island of CELL OF COLUMBA, the earth of which may be termed royal, is about three miles in length and one and a half in breadth. It was once the luminary of the Caledonian regions, "whence savage clans and roving barbarians derived the benefits of knowledge and the blessings of religion." It is separated from Mull by a channel of about a mile in width; it is 9 miles S.W. of Staffa, and about 36 W. of the nearest part of the district called Morven, on the mainland of Scotland, and is resorted to during summer by the antiquarian, the historian, the tourist, and even the fashionable, who crowd numerously, some to explore or examine, and others to behold and admire the sacred ruins that on landing arrest the attention of every stranger; these are pointed out by a person deputed by his Grace the Duke of Argyll. Here the visitor finds himself surrounded by the graves of those who were royal and noble and holy in Caledonia and Hibernia a thousand years ago; while the thick walls, the massive arches, and the finely-wrought pillars of the many sacred edifices which in remote ages flourished in this sanctified Isle, supply the deepest reflections, and awaken the most solemn feelings in the contemplative mind. A parliamentary church was erected here in 1828, and there is also a parliamentary school. The inhabitants have made a profitable traffic by disposing of the channel pebbles to visitors who now frequent the island. They assert that the pebbles of a certain appearance are endowed with many secret virtues, given to them by their tutelar saint, Columba. Population in 1891, 267.

PORT-NA-CURRACH, "The Bay of the Boat," on the south-west side, derives both its name and importance from a tradition of its having been the landing place of the curragh, the hide boat of St. Columba.

THE ISLE OF ULVA, separated from Mull by a channel of about one hundred yards broad, is said to produce the best kelp in the Western Islands. There are a great number of Basaltic columns on the shore, and on the south side is a cave 60 ft. long, 58 ft. broad, and 30 ft. in average height, having an arched entrance in the face of an abrupt rock, with a span of 37 feet. About a mile to the north, a mountain stream falls in one unbroken descent from a rock 66 feet in height directly into the sea. The island is now the property of Francis William Clark, Esq. J.P. who resides there. Population in 1891 (with Kilmore), 917.

TIRREE, westward of Mull, and distant 30 miles from Tobermory, is a fertile island, 14 miles long and from one to five broad. It abounds in marble, of which it is said the rocks on its shore are entirely composed; but from some unexplained cause, the quarries cannot be profitably worked. In the churchyard at Soroby is a beautiful monumental cross, inscribed "Sorrow Anna Abbatisa de Y." There is a harbour at Heynish, and a quay, which was built in 1836; the accommodation is, however, deemed insufficient. A lighthouse was likewise raised on the dangerous rocks called Skerryvore, which lie about 16 miles S.W. of Tirree. It is built of granite, obtained from the quarries of Mull, and is considered one of the best and most durable specimens of this kind of architecture in Europe; the light is dioptric. Fairs are held in May, on the Wednesday before that at Mull in August on the Monday, and in October on the Wednesday before those in Mull. Population in 1881, 2,733, and in 1891, 2,452.

COLL, to the north of Tiree, is rather a sterile and mountainous island; it is 14 miles in length and about $2\frac{1}{2}$ in breadth, and 7 miles distant from Mull. On it are the ruins of a castle, which appear to advantage from the sea. A fair is held here in May, on the Tuesday before those in Mull. Population in 1881, 643, and in 1891, 522.

ARDNAMURCHAN is chiefly known from the dangers frequently encountered in the navigation around its projecting point, particularly in boisterous weather, when the tremendous billows of the North Atlantic break against it with awful fury. It is a district of considerable length, having Loch Sunart to the south, the Atlantic to the west, the same ocean and Loch Shiel to the north, and Ardgour to the east. It is sterile, but feeds large flocks of sheep and some cattle, and the hills are stated to be rich in minerals. Upon the point has been erected a lighthouse by the Commissioners of Northern Lights, which is of great service in the navigation of this perilous coast.

At STRONTIAN, fairs are held in May on Thursday before last Wednesday; June, on Friday after third Thursday (o.s.); August for lambs, on Wednesday if 12th, if not, following Wednesday; and October, on Thursday before last Wednesday. In 1881 Ardnarmurchan and Strontian had a population of 4,123, and in 1891, 3,321.

MORVEN is an extensive district, bounded on the south-west by the sound of Mull, on the north by Loch Sunart, and on the east and south-east by Loch Linnhe. The country is hilly, and its shores are partially wooded. It is principally occupied in grazing farms, and contains several gentlemen's seats, but no village of sufficient importance to command attention. Population in 1891, 820.

In concluding our brief sketch of these interesting and not wholly unimportant islands, and the parallel districts on the mainland, we may observe that the scenery connected with them is of a description not easily to be forgotten by those who have once visited them; it is faithfully portrayed by the incomparable Scott in his "Lord of the Isles." Ardnarnish Castle, in Morven, so often alluded to by the bard, is well worthy of the tourist's notice; as are the interesting remains of Aros Castle, the ancient residence of the Kings or Lords of the Isles, and Castle Duart, formerly the residence of the McLeans, in Mull, with Castle Doonan, in the district of Lismore.

AYRSHIRE.

THIS is a populous maritime county, on the western coast of the Lowlands. From Skelmorlie in the north to the mouth of the Gallowayburn (which enters Loch Ryan) in the south, the distance is 63 miles, but along the coast it is 84; between Hareshaw Hill and Troon, which is its greatest breadth, it measures 28 miles; 19, however, being about the average. It is bounded on the north and north-east by the small county of Renfrew, on the east by the counties of Lanark and Dumfries, on the south-east by the stewartry of Kirkcubright, and on the south by Wigtownshire. In figure the county resembles an elongated crescent, with its concavity presented to the sea. At the north and south ends the land is diminished almost to a point, being but a few miles in breadth. The superficial extent of the county comprises 1,149 square miles of land, or 735,262 acres, of which 13,083 acres are under water. It is divided into three principal or grand districts—Carrick, Cunningham, and Kyle. The first lies on the southern side of the Doon; the second comprehends the whole of the county north of the river Irvine; and Kyle division is situated between the rivers Doon and Irvine. In point of size Ayrshire ranks as the seventh and in population as the sixth of the counties in Scotland.

EARLY HISTORY.—This county was anciently inhabited by the British tribe called the Damnii, a branch of the Celtic nation, who survived the period of the Roman yoke, and were in the course of time over-run by and amalgamated with the Scots-Irish from Kintyre. In 750 these again were partly conquered by a number of Northumbrians, who settled in Kyle. From 843 to 1097, the inhabitants of Ayrshire were governed as a Celtic people, on Celtic principles. Upon the accession of Edgar, in 1097, the jurisprudence of the county became changed, and an active colonization commenced, which peopled every district with new comers from England. Barons now sprang up, who built castles and churches, and towns arose, which became inhabited by persons engaged in trade. Ayrshire was the scene of perpetual turmoil during the wars of Bruce and Edward. The son of the first Bruce marrying the Countess of Carrick, became Earl Carrick in her right; and it was their son who, on the expulsion of Baliol, formed pretensions to the throne, which he obtained by his courage, fortitude, and prudence; thus Ayrshire possessed the honour of giving birth to the illustrious restorer of the Scottish monarchy. Some of the various exploits of Wallace, in supporting the national independence, were performed in this county. Scarcely any division of Scotland remained so long under the torments of the baronial system as Ayrshire. For centuries the chiefs were perpetually engaged in feuds and rebellions, and so weak or inefficient were the laws that it was seldom redress or punishment followed outrage. The Boyds, the Dalrymples, the Campbells, the Colvilles, and the houses of Eglinton and Glencairn had their respective quarrels of long standing, which occasionally ended in reckless violence or sanguinary slaughter. A great proportion of these disturbances arose from contests regarding heritable jurisdictions, such as stewardships and bailiwicks of certain districts. Besides the feuds of these pugnacious barons, the county was frequently distracted by the pride or crimes of the Kennedys. So late as the reign of James VI. this powerful clan was involved in a feud of more than ordinary importance, which originated in the cruel treatment of Allan Stewart, the commentator, of Crossraguell, in 1570, by the Earl of Cassilis, and his brother, Thomas Kennedy, of Culzean. The vexations which the people of this county so long suffered by such an ill-organised system seem to have impressed them with a fervid desire for those political liberties which they believed were to accrue from the institution of the Covenant. The consequence was that, during the heats of the seventeenth century, few took so active a share in the insurrections which were opposed to royal authority. A committee of the Privy Council sat at Ayr in 1678, for directing the military executive to its proper objects. In July, 1689, a conflict occurred, wherein several insurgents were taken, and the rebellion on this occasion quelled. Proceedings of this harassing character induced a ready accession to the government of William III., and the conduct of the people who went armed to Edinburgh, to wait upon the estates, was very magnanimous. It need hardly be mentioned that the turmoils which had from a very early period kept Ayrshire in a warlike attitude, and ever ready for tidings of disaster and spoliation, had the natural effect of keeping its agricultural capacities long shut up, and its energies of a useful tendency long untried.

SOIL, SURFACE, &c.—The most fertile part of the shire is the great vale of Cunningham, which is comparatively level; Kyle possesses much valuable land towards the coast, but its interior lies high, and is a rough mountainous territory; Carrick is a hilly, wild region throughout, and is only of value or interest in its northern angle, betwixt the rivers Doon and Girvan. In a general sense, the whole district of Ayrshire is shut out on its eastern boundary from the adjacent counties by high ridgy land; and with little variation the surface inclines either to the sea or to the rivers which flow in that direction. The sea coast is mostly sandy, and indented with several excellent harbours. In the rocks are several remarkable caves, worthy of the inspection of the curious. Though moist, the climate is healthy, the rainfall in this being much above that of the central and eastern counties, heavy rain not being infrequent and occasionally of long duration. For fully two-thirds of the year the wind blows from the west and south-west, thus causing the climate to be more temperate and mild than counts so on the east coast. The principal eminences are:—Hareshaw Hill, 1,527; Cairntable, 1,650; Misty Law, 1,663; Hill of Stake 1,711; Knockdolian, 1,950; Black Craig 2,298; Shalloch on Minnoch, 2,520; and Kirrieroch Hill, 2,562 feet. There are many elegant seats belonging to the nobility and gentry of the kingdom; among the principal owners are the Earl of Glasgow, the Earl of Eglinton, the Marquis of Ailsa, the Duke of Portland, the Marquis of Bute, and the noble family of Hastings. To the south of Irvine stands the ancient castle of Dundonald, once a royal residence, and afterwards the family seat of the Cochrans, Earls of Dundonald. The ancient castle of Rowallan is a few miles distant from Kilmarnock, and stands almost on the boundary line which separates the parishes of Kilmarnock, Fenwick, and Kilmaurs. Dean Castle, the former residence of the Kilmarnock family, is still an interesting ruin.

PRODUCE, MANUFACTURES, MINERALS, &c.—It was not until about the middle of the eighteenth century that the inhabitants of Ayrshire began to discover and avail themselves of its capabilities as an agricultural district. The settlement at this period of Margaret Countess of Loudoun in Lorn Castle may be deemed the epoch of efficient improvement. By her great assiduity, precept and example, agriculture was promoted and encouraged; and in a short time the nobility and gentry of Ayrshire began in earnest to improve their estates upon systematic principles, under the skilful direction of intelligent stewards. Farmers were invited by them from more southern shires to instruct the tenantry in the management of land according to the most approved methods of the experienced agriculturist. Observing the peculiarities of the climate, and ascertaining the nature of the soil, the judicious culture of the various species of grasses became a primary object, and the general adoption of dairy farms was the natural consequence. This system has been persevered in, and the dairies in this district are superior, perhaps, to any others in Scotland; the value of their produce in milk and butter is very considerable, and "Dunlop" cheese is unrivalled throughout the country, finding a ready market wherever offered, and Ayrshire may now be reckoned as the Cheshire of Scotland. Latterly, under the auspices of the County Agricultural Association, and many individual proprietors, of whom the late Mr. Campbell, of Craigie, was one of the foremost, the Cheddar method has been very generally introduced, and with very great success; so that Cheddar cheese is one of the staple productions of the county. Oats are extensively grown, the other crops being wheat, barley, rye, flax, turnips, potatoes, beans, &c. The breed of cattle has likewise been much improved, the Ayrshire short-horns being much prized, both for the purposes of the dairy and the butcher. As agriculture thus successfully progressed, excellent roads were formed, and these have been followed up by railways for the transmission of goods and persons. From the fostered spirit of industry, and the enhanced value of land, resulted a corresponding exertion for the establishment of manufactures; the abundance of fuel, the plenty and cheapness of the necessities of life, materials for building, and means of transit to the large towns in the adjacent shires, presented facilities for this purpose which were obvious and encouraging. The manufacture of stockings, carpets, cloths, and bonnets extended generally, but Kilmarnock became the most noted. At the capital of the county have been established dye works, woollen manufactories, iron foundries, tanneries, large steam-engine manufactories and chemical works; at Catrine, well-known and extensive cotton works; at Kilbirnie are several works for the manufacture of fishing nets; Mauchline is noted as the place where fauzy wood-work articles are made; at Stevenston are iron works and a dynamite manufactory, at Old Cumnock is an extensive pottery and a woollen manufactory; at Irvine chemical manufactories and iron forges; and Muirkirk is noted for its ponderous iron works. Fishing is also carried on at all the large sea-ports, herring, cod, ling, &c. being caught, and in the lochs and streams there is an abundance of trout, and in the larger rivers are to be found salmon. During the forty years between 1841 and 1881, the population of this county had increased 53,148. This large addition to the population is in a great measure owing to the prosperous manufacturing state of the county. Ayrshire possesses inexhaustible coal-fields, freestone quarries, and ironstone mines, with several rich ores, particularly those of lead and copper, but the two latter have not been wrought to any great extent; marble, gypsum, and marl have been found, and black lead has been discovered; fire proof stone and whetstone are obtained, and petrifications exist in various parts of the county. In the hills of Carrick are agates, porphyries, and other valuable fossils; and traces of antimony have not escaped the searching eye of the mineralogist.

RIVERS, LAKES, SPRINGS, AND RAILWAYS.—In the ridge of hills which intersects the district of Carrick, almost all the rivers in the south originate. The Tweed, the Esk, the Nith the Annan, the Urr and others flow to the east and south; while the Stinchar, the Girvan, the Doon, the Ayr and the Lugar traverse the county and pour their fruitful streams into the Irish Channel. Besides these, the Irvine and some smaller rivers water the northern parts of Ayrshire. In the midst of so many minerals, a number of springs impregnated by their qualities are to be expected; and indeed almost every parish has its mineral water, though none have attained the dignity of spas. There are various inland lakes, particularly in Carrick—the most extensive being Loch Doon, which is six miles long and about three-quarters in breadth, from whence the river Doon flows. Ayrshire participates extensively in the conveniences afforded to commerce and general transit by railways. The Glasgow and South-Western enters the county from Glasgow and passes Beith, Kilbirnie, and Dalry, from which latter place a branch runs on to New Cumnock, and thence by Dumfries to Carlisle; while another traverses the county, by Kilwinning, Ayr and Girvan to Stranraer, and thence to Portpatrick. There are also branches from Kilwinning to Ardrossan, from Ayr to Dalmellington, Mauchline, and Muirkirk; one from Auchinleck joining the latter at Crouberry; one from Kilmarnock to Troon; and one from Irvine to Kilmarnock. The Glasgow, Barrhead and Kilmarnock joint line runs from Glasgow to Kilmarnock, and there is also one from Ardrossan to Largs.

ECCLESIASTICAL AND CIVIL DIVISIONS, POPULATION, &c.—The whole of Ayrshire was formerly comprehended in the bishopric of Glasgow, and it formed three deaneries, corresponding with the three divisions before mentioned. The county now comprises forty-six parishes, forming two presbyteries in the Synod of Ayr and Glasgow. The contributory burghs (or those which, in conjunction with others, are represented in the Senate), belonging to this county are Ayr and Irvine; two members also represent the shire at large. The present county members are: for the northern division, the Hon. Thomas Cochrane; and for the Southern Division, Eugene Wason, Esq. The parliamentary constituency of the Northern division was in 1891-2 12,261, that of the Southern division being 14,912. The Lord Lieutenant of the county is the Earl of Stair, K.T. The county by the Government returns for 1881 contained a population of 217,519, and by those for 1891, 224,222, exhibiting an increase over the previous return of 6,703. The valuation of the county (including railways) for 1891-2 was £1,065,223.

ARDROSSAN,

A WATERING place and maritime port in the parish of its name, is pleasantly situated on the western shore of Ayrshire, on an accessible point of the coast, and only a mile west of Saltcoats; it is 74 miles S.W. of Edinburgh, 30 S.W. of Glasgow, 25 S.W. of Paisley, and 8 N. by W. of Irvine. The town is built upon a plan of regularity and taste, the houses being all of stone and of a commanding altitude. The visitants in the bathing season will find all the appliances necessary to their enjoyment. The baths include the customary varieties, and are enclosed in a handsome building, both spacious and commodious. There are also salt water baths and a chalybeate spring in the immediate neighbourhood. The town, which is indebted for its existence to the noble family of Eglinton, is extending in all directions, and there are a number of villas, many of which exhibit considerable taste in design. The Eglinton Arms Hotel was erected by a late Lord Eglinton, at an expense of £10,000. The public rooms, the led rooms, offices, and stabling are most commodious. There are three banking establishments—The Bank of Scotland, a commanding building adjoining the hotel; the Royal Bank of Scotland near to the railway, also a fine building; and the Union Bank of Scotland, in Princes street. The harbour was commenced under the auspices of the before-named munificent patron, who with his successors have expended nearly £200,000 upon it. The dock occupies an area of seventeen acres, and is one of the best in Scotland, a large depth of water being provided for, as well as being fitted with all the latest appliances for both loading and discharging vessels. The Glasgow and South-Western Railway for many years had a monopoly of the carrying trade of the harbour; but in 1888, the Ayrshire and Lanarkshire line was completed, which opened up direct communication with the Lanarkshire coalfields on the one hand, and Ireland and England on the other. At present steamers ply regularly between Ardrossan and several parts of Ireland, and there is daily intercourse during the greater part of the year between it and the Island of Arran. There is a yard for shipbuilding at the harbour, an engineering works, a large iron foundry, and some extensive timber yards and saw mills.

The church, at the entrance to the town from Saltcoats, is in elegant taste, and is a highly ornamented edifice. There are four other churches, viz., the English Episcopal, United Presbyterian, Free, and Independent. At the head of the town, a commodious school, under the Scotch Education Act, has been built to accommodate about 670 children. The picturesque ruins of Ardrossan Castle stand on an eminence overlooking the town. There is also upon an adjoining eminence a handsome monument, erected to a deceased philanthropic gentleman who, during the latter years of his life, interested himself deeply in the various institutions connected with this place. An agricultural society has been established here. A fair is held on the Tuesday before that of Ayr, which is in July. Population of the parish (the area of which is 7,341 acres), in 1881, 7,777, and in 1891, 9,903; of the town, 5,158.

AYR,

NEWTON AND WALLACETOWN, PRESTWICK AND MONKTON, AND THE PARISHES OF AYR, NEWTON, MONKTON, AND ST. QUIVOX, AND SURROUNDING NEIGHBOURHOODS.

AYR is a royal burgh, and the capital of the county and parish of that name, 77 miles w.s.w. of Edinburgh, 33 s.s.w. of Glasgow, 34 s.s.w. of Paisley, 12 s.s.w. of Kilmarnock, and 11 s. of Irvine; situated in the north-west angle of the parish, where the river Ayr flows past it into the Frith of Clyde. This portion of Scotland has been inhabited from the earliest period of authentic history; for when, in the reign of Severus, the Roman fleet made the complete seaboard survey of Magna Britannia, this part of the coast was crowded with a population that evinced no amicable disposition towards the foreign intruder. Subsequently, however, the persevering and insidious encroacher penetrated through southern Caledonia, and the Celtic harp was hushed by the fanning wings of the Roman eagle. Accordingly we find that the site of modern Ayr retained in the eleventh century the undoubted traces of a Roman station, and tradition informs us that a hamlet, the vestige of this station, was in existence until the latter part of the 12th century, when William, surnamed the Lion, erased the odious blot and laid the foundation of a new town in the ashes of the former conqueror. Here it was that the renowned William Wallace first openly embodied that hardy host which made the southerner "backward reed," and the powerful garrison of Edward I. was compelled to cower under his "thunder arm." There is still a remnant of the venerable church of St. John, converted by Cromwell into a fort. Attached to the old tower of St. John is a residence in the old baronial style, so that this remnant of a bygone age is likely to survive for many generations to come. At a short distance on the southern shore is Greenan Castle, one of those uncouthly constructed square castles so frequently arresting the attention of the stranger in this district; it stands on the summit of a rock overhanging the sea, and, from a distance, has an imposing aspect. In the same direction, on a clear day, may be discerned the celebrated Ailsa Craig, rising nearly 1,100 feet perpendicularly out of the sea. The bay of Ayr is very much admired, and its graceful curve bears a striking resemblance to the beautiful bay of Naples. The river is crossed by two bridges—one, the old bridge, or "Auld Brig o' Ayr," is one of the few remaining relics of the ancient burgh, and a fine specimen of the architecture of the 12th century, being still in a very perfect state of preservation. The other is the new bridge, the original of which was erected in the days of Burns. In fulfilment of the prophecy of the poet, the bridge some years ago became a "shapeless cairn," and was replaced by a new erection of considerably greater width, and of apparently substantial workmanship; though there are not wanting prophets who say that the "auld brig" will live to see even it crumble. Immediately opposite, across the Frith of Clyde, is the Island of Arran, whose majestic mountains present some features of the sublime, and whose summits are visible to the naked eye, in fine weather, from the headlands of Larne, in the county of Antrim, in Ireland.

The most conspicuous decoration of the town is the lofty spire, that rises to a height of 219 feet above the Town's buildings, which were erected in 1838, at a cost of £10,000. These buildings contain a spacious hall, suitable for public entertainments, and capable of containing comfortably about 1,500 persons. In addition, the buildings afford accommodation for the Town Clerk, Town Chamberlain, and Corporation water works and other public offices of the burgh. In these buildings are kept the burgh records, and the burgh courts are held here. The noble tower, called "Wallace Tower," in High street, is another ornamental structure; it is embellished with a statue, by Thom, of the hero whose name it bears. A second statue of this warrior occupies a niche in the wall of a house in the corner of Newmarket street. Wellington square is a fine quadrangle, having a noble erection to form the west side in the court-house and hall, built at the joint expense of the county and burgh, at a cost exceeding £30,000. The east front of this edifice, which is wholly of stone, is ornamented with an imposing portico. A verdant lawn forms the centre of the square, enclosed with iron railings, and the surrounding houses are chaste, though plain, in architecture. Two fine statues in bronze have been placed within the square—one to the memory of the late Right Hon. Archibald William, Earl of Eglinton and Winton, who was Lord Lieutenant of the county, also for some years Viceroy of Ireland, and who died in 1861; the other is to the memory of the late Brigadier-General J. G. Neill, c.b., aide-de-camp to the Queen, who was killed at Lucknow on the 25th of September, 1857, and who was born in one of the houses in Wellington square. A large gun, captured at Sebastopol, is placed on an iron carriage in the enclosure round the County buildings, at the upper end of the square. In the County buildings are the public offices, in which are kept the records of the county, and here are held the courts for the county. Her Majesty's goal is a commodious structure, at the back of the County buildings, its front looking upon the bay; it is arranged upon the most modern approved system of discipline. Considerable additions to the town, especially to the westward, have been made within the last twenty years. Many neat villas give accommodation to the natives of Glasgow and other inland localities, who repair to this fine watering place during the summer months. Among recent improvements made in the town, not the least is a broad substantial esplanade that has been formed along the shore, affording a fine carriage way as well as a promenade for foot passengers. In June, 1886, the Glasgow and South-Western Railway Co. opened a new and commodious station for the convenience of the greatly increasing traffic to this town, its platform covering a surface of 3,030 square feet. The company have also erected a large and handsome hotel adjoining the station; it is one of the best furnished hotels in Scotland, having every accommodation for tourists and business men.

An extensive trade is carried on in the export of coal from this place to Ireland. Mines of this article, as well as fine quarries of stone, abound in the neighbourhood. The other principal exports consist of iron, coal-tar, lampblack, and water of Ayr stone. Its imports comprise hides, tallow, barley, yarn, linen, spars, deals and hemp. The convenience for shipping is superior to most of the towns on the coast, as the harbour was much improved by carrying an extensive stone pier into the sea, affording a greater depth of water for vessels entering, and security when in the harbour. A dock, eight acres in extent, with a quayside of 2,000 feet, constructed at a cost of £150,000, has a depth of water at low tide of 15 feet.

The parliamentary and municipal burgh of Ayr embraces the whole of Newton and Wallacetown. These parishes in conjunction with Ayr proper form the burgh of Ayr, and the civil government is vested in a provost, four bailies, a dean of guild, a treasurer, and eleven councillors. Ayr is connected with the burgh of Irvine, in this county, and Campbeltown, Inveraray, and Oban in Argyshire, in returning a member to Parliament. The Lord Lieutenant of the county is the Right Hon. the Earl of Stair, and David Brand, Esq. is the sheriff.

An Academy, founded by subscription in 1798, stands foremost amongst the public establishments. It is conducted by a rector and four masters, with able assistants. The management of the academy was formerly vested in certain directors appointed by the Crown, by which the seminary was created a body corporate. The original building was taken down, having become too limited for the number of pupils, and is replaced by a very elegant building of larger proportions, erected at a cost of about £10,000. The management has been transferred to the burgh School Board, the school now ranking as one of the high class schools under the Education Act. The education given is of a high order, and judged by results at the universities there are few schools in Scotland of the same class equal to it. Ayr library, which contains several thousand volumes, has now been transferred to the Public Free Library, situated in Main street, Newton, the cost of the building being £10,000. It was the gift of A. Carnegie, Esq. There are also other libraries of lesser note. Three newspapers are published in Ayr, namely, the Ayr Observer, on Tuesday and Friday; the Ayrshire Post, on Friday; and the Advertiser, on Thursday. Races are held annually in the autumn, an excellent pack of foxhounds hunts the county, and spirited curling and bowling clubs are located here.

There are three churches of the Establishment in the town, two in the parish of NEWTON, and one in WALLACETOWN. The other places of worship in Ayr and its vicinity are for the Free Church, the United Presbyterians, Episcopalians, Methodists, Moravians, Original Seceders, Evangelical Unionists, and Roman Catholics. The charitable institutions are numerous and liberally conducted; the poor are assisted from funds arising from lands and donations; and a dispensary gives medicine and surgical aid to the sick. There is a large and handsome hospital; also an industrial school, an institution which has been most successfully conducted here and has done much good. Besides these are a Sailors' Society, instituted in 1881; a Merchants' Society, established in 1855; a fund formed in 1821 for decayed members, their widows and orphans; the Ayr Sabbath School Union Society; and the Ayr Universal Society.

The Scottish bard, Robert Burns, whose 100th anniversary was so universally celebrated throughout the civilized world on the 25th of January, 1859, was born about two miles south of Ayr, in a small cottage, which formerly belonged to the Incorporation of Shoemakers of Ayr, and was long let by them for a public house, but is now the property of the trustees of the Burns' Monument, who have placed a person there to take charge of the building, a small fee being taken from visitors for admission. A collection of Burns' relics has been formed, and the grounds are neatly laid out, making the whole much more worthy of the poet. About a quarter of a mile from the house, a very elegant monument has been erected to his memory; it is placed on the banks of the river Doon, amidst objects and scenery which had often inspired his muse; and the locality in which the scene was laid of his much-admired poem "Tam o' Shanter," lies in the immediate neighbourhood of the cottage. In the summer season this place is visited by strangers from nearly all parts, anxious to view the monument Alloway's Auld Haunted Kirk, and the Brig o' Doon. An elegant and commodious parish church has been erected close to the monument. The Chevalier Rameau, author of "Cyrus Travels," &c. was a native of this place. There are two weekly markets in the town—Tuesday for grain, cattle, and dairy produce, and Friday for the sale of dairy produce, poultry, and general business. Fairs are held on the Thursday and Friday before the second Wednesday in January; the third Tuesday in April for hiring; the last Friday in April; the Thursday and Friday before the second Monday in July; third Tuesday in October for hiring; and on the second Thursday and Friday in October. The parish of Ayr comprises 6,939 acres. Population of the Parliamentary burgh in 1881, 20,812, and in 1891, 23,835.

NEWTON parish is divided from that of Ayr by the river, which is spanned by the two bridges already referred to. On the Newton or north side of the river Ayr are the principal manufactures of the town. There are two chemical works, a carpet manufactory, lace works, two shoe factories, and several other manufacturing establishments. The railway communicates on this side with the harbour and new dock, and, in consequence, the mineral products of the upper portion of the county are mostly shipped here. A very large increase in the shipment of coal has recently taken place; indeed Ayr has taken the lead as a coal shipping port on the west coast. Acreage, 585. Population of the parish in 1881, 6,511, and in 1891, 8,450.

ST. QUIVOX, a populous parish, in the district of Kyle, lies on the banks of the Ayr river, and is bounded on the east by Tarbolton, and on the west by Newton of Ayr and Monkton. The parish, which is nearly all arable, is finely enclosed and beautified by plantations, and contains 4,876 acres. Population in 1881, 7,352, and in 1891, 6,576.

WALLACETOWN consists of a number of streets adjoining to Newton, and is in the parish of St. Quivox. A church of the Establishment was erected in Wallacetown in 1836; it is a very handsome edifice of the Gothic order. It was built by subscription, at an expense of nearly £1,500, and has sittings for upwards of 800 persons. Nearly adjoining this church is a Roman Catholic chapel, erected in 1826-7, at a cost of about £2,000; it is a chaste structure, in the Gothic style, fronted with freestone.

The small town (or rather village) of PRESTWICK, or Presterwicke, is about two miles from Ayr. It was at one period a place of some consequence, having been created a burgh of barony at an early date; and its charter, which was renewed by James VI. in 1600, granted to it a weekly market and an annual fair. The former has fallen into disuse, from the proximity of its more thriving neighbour Ayr. The market cross, which is of considerable antiquity, still exists, and the town has its lock-up and council house. In the latter the bailies and freemen meet quarterly to regulate the affairs of the burgh; and the Prince of Wales is recognised as the superior of the town. There are Established, Free, and United Presbyterian churches, for the accommodation of the combined inhabitants of Monkton and Prestwick. Prestwick can boast of its fine golf links, where the ancient game has been played for many years. There are now two clubs—the Prestwick Golf Club, which has a large and handsome club house, and the St. Nicholas Club, both of them with large membership, and having among their numbers some of the finest players in the country. Each club has separate links. Close to the village is a station on the Glasgow and South-Western line of railway. Population in 1881, 1,064, and in 1891, 1,503.

MONKTON, a parish in the district of Kyle, lies on the sea coast, betwixt Symington and Dundonald on the north, and Newton and St. Quivox on the south. The parish formerly extended southward to the river Ayr, and comprehended the present parish of Newton, which was erected into a separate parochial district in the last century; it now includes the ancient parish of Prestwick. The village of Monkton is situated on the high road to Glasgow, and is distant 4 miles N. from Ayr. There is a station on the Glasgow and South-Western railway about a mile from the village. Acreage of parish, 8,971. Population of the joint parish of Monkton and Prestwick in 1881, 2,121, and in 1891, 2,608.

BALLANTRAE,

BARRHILL, COLMONELL, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

BALLANTRAE is a small seaport, in the parish of that name, 105 miles s.w. from Edinburgh, 68 s.w. from Glasgow, 31 s.s.w. of Ayr, 24 n.n.e. of Portpatrick, 18 n. of Stranraer, 13 s. by w. of Girvan and 23 s.s.w. of Maybole, situated near the south-western extremity of the county, and on the banks of the river Stinchar, which here falls into the Frith of Clyde. On the right stand the ruins of Ard-Stinchar Castle, formerly belonging to the Hamilton family. The place is principally supported by its herring and salmon fishery, the latter belonging to the Earl of Stair. The chief local proprietor is James Hunter, Esq. J.P. of Glenapp, whose mansion may be seen from the village. Old Kirkcudbright kirk, now in ruins, gives a mournful yet pleasing effect to the surrounding scenery. The Established church is a neat modern building, ornamented with stone, in the plain Gothic style. There is also a Free church and several schools in the parish. The nearest court is held at Girvan, where small debts are recoverable only by summons. The acreage of the parish is 83,561, the population of which was in 1881, 1,442; and in 1891, 1,263; that of the village being 529.

COLMONELL is a parish of 47,490 acres, bounded on the north and west by the mouth of the Clyde. The village, which is pleasantly situated, and is much frequented by visitors during the summer months, is 8 miles w. from Finwherry station on the Girvan and Portpatrick line, and 5 e. by n. of Ballantrae, on the north bank of the Stinchar—a stream famed for its salmon and trout. There are Established and Free churches and Board schools in the villages of Colmonell and Barrhill, and also Board schools in the districts of Cowar, Lendalfoot, and Pinwherry, in this parish. The extent of this district is 20 miles in length by nine broad. Population of the parish in 1881, 2,191, and in 1891, 1,901.

The picturesque ruins of Craignell, Kirkhill, Knockdolian, Pinwherry, Knockdaw, and Carleton castles are to be seen in this parish, which also abounds in lime. The nearest approximation for persons desirous of visiting the far-famed Ailsa Craig is from LENDALFOOT, in this neighbourhood. There are four quarterly cattle markets at the village of BARRHILL, eight miles distant.

BARR,

IS a parish of 54,876 acres, lying on the banks of the rivers Gregg and Stinchar. The village, a small and neat one, is eight miles E. by S. from Girvan, and 21 S. from Ayr. The greatest part of the parish is intersected by the river Gregg; and about a mile from the village are the ruins of old Kirk Dominas. Barr parish, 12 miles by 9 in extent, is principally sheep pasture. The hiring fair for servants, which of late was held at Kirk Dominas, is now held at Barr on the first Thursday after the 26th of May. The chief land proprietors of the entire district are the Marquis of Ailsa, Sir James Fergusson, M.P. and Captain Hamilton. There are Established and Free churches, and also two schools in the parish, which are under the School Board. Population of the parish in 1881, 600, and in 1891, 549.

CONVEYANCE BY RAILWAY.
GIRVAN is the nearest Railway Station to this place, distant eight miles

BEITH AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.

BEITH is a market and post town, in the parish of that name, district of Cunningham, 62 miles W. by S. of Edinburgh, 19½ S.W. of Glasgow, 11 S.W. of Paisley, five N. by E. of Dalry, and 12 N. by E. of Saltcoats. It is situated near the confines of Renfrewshire, on an eminence commanding a fine and extensive view of the beautifully diversified country around, of which the Loch of Kilbirnie, at the distance of about a mile, forms a charming feature. The town, which contains many excellent houses, is gas-lighted and well supplied with good water by gravitation, and presents a clean, healthy appearance. In the immediate neighbourhood there are several handsome private residences, and it is a place of some considerable trade, being noted for its manufacture of linen thread, of which a large quantity is made here by Messrs. Crawford Brothers, both for home and export trade. The leather trade is of considerable importance, in the tanning, currying and preparation of which several firms are actively engaged. Another branch particularly deserving of notice is the cabinet making and upholstery business, extensively carried on by several enterprising firms; the wholesale manufacture of coaches, chairs, &c. by machinery, affording constant employment to a numerous staff of workmen. The manufacture of silk goods was formerly extensive, but this has almost been entirely superseded by that of cotton and woollen, in the weaving of which many of the inhabitants are now employed by the manufacturers of Paisley and Glasgow. Silk printing is in full operation at the establishment of Messrs. Hugh Melville & Co. at Rosebank. The neighbourhood of Beith produces coal and abundance of limestone. Lime burning is followed to a limited extent, and rope making is also carried on by Messrs. Matthew Wylie & Son. Three banking houses are established in the town; they are branches of the Commercial Bank of Scotland, Limited, the Clydesdale Bank, Limited, and the Union Bank of Scotland, Limited. Railway accommodation is amply supplied by the Glasgow and South-Western Railway Company, and the Glasgow, Barrhead and Kilmarnock Joint railway.

The whole of the parish of Beith is enclosed and sub-divided, and is almost all arable. The tenants of this and the neighbouring parish of Dunlop were formerly noted for their manufacture of cheese, known by the name of "Dunlop cheese," which was held in as high estimation in Scotland as the cheese of Cheshire or Gloucestershire is in England. The constabulary station with court house adjoining, is a neat stone building, opened in 1884, erected at a cost of about £1,500. The Sheriff's Small Debt Court is held on the first Thursday in February, May, August, and November, and that for the Justices of the Peace on the first Monday in each month. In 1807 a very handsome church of the Establishment, with tower, was erected on the most elevated part of the town; its site is 343 feet above the level of the sea. It has since been enlarged by the addition of a new wing, re-seated, and thoroughly renovated at a cost of nearly £3,000. The other places of worship are a Free church, an Evangelical Union chapel, and two for United Presbyterian congregations; the one in Mitchell street, belonging to the latter denomination, was rebuilt in 1892 in the Gothic style of architecture, at a cost of about £2,000. The town house was built by subscription in 1817. The upper part of the building contains a court room and reading room; the lower part consists of shops, the rents of which are applied to purposes of public benefit. There are several well-attended schools, amongst which may be mentioned Spier's school, built and endowed from funds amounting to about £14,000 left by the late Mrs. Spier, of

Marshall and Cuff. At GIFFEN, a short distance from the town, are the ruins of the once stately castle of the Montgomeries; there is also another ruin at Hasselhead; and at the top of Cuff hill, a considerable eminence, is a druidical remain, known by the name of "Rockingstone." Two large stone coffins, supposed to be likewise of druidical origin, were discovered here many years ago. The market is held on Friday, and the fairs on the first Fridays in January and February, and first Friday after the 12th of May (old style), on the 30th of August, and the first Friday after the 12th November (old style). The entire parish of Beith (a small portion of which is in Renfrewshire) contains an area of 11,222 statute acres, and had in 1881 a population of 6,655, and in 1891, 7,126; of this number 4,795 were returned for the town.
